'Very Interesting Person'

7th Grade Reporter Predicts LaRaia Will Be 'A Great Mayor'

(EDITOR'S NOTE - Kathy McMahon, who is in Grade 7 at the Broad Meadows Junior High School, obtained the first interview with Mayor-elect Joseph J. LaRaia. She made her story of the interview available to The Quincy Sun.)

By KATHY McMAHON

On Dec. 10 at 4:30 I interviewed Mayor-elect Joseph LaRaia. I decided to interview him because I find him a very interesting person. Soon after I got to his office I realized he was a very busy man. My appointment was at 4 but I had to wait until 4:30 to begin the interview.

The Mayor-elect has lived in Quincy all his life. He studied local government in college and while a senior at Boston College he ran for Ward Councillor and was elected.

He had expected a difficult campaign against Mayor Hannon because "it is always difficult to unseat an office holder." When I asked how he felt about winning he didn't say much about himself but spoke of the people who had worked for him.

KATHY McMAHON of Broad Meadows Junior High School shares a joke with Mayor-elect Joseph J. LaRaia during her first interview with the incoming chief executive in his temporary office. Kathy is a Grade 7 reporter.

"I'm very happy for all who worked for me and supported my candidacy for mayor."

Mayor-elect Joseph LaRaia has some new plans for Quincy. He would like to "find more things for young people to do, help our senior citizens live comfortable lives, and bring more business to

Mayor-elect LaRaia has plans for remodeling some of our schools. He'd also like to make more use of the school buildings.

I enjoyed interviewing Mr. LaRaia. I think he'll be a great mayor. He's trying hard to plan a better future for the citizens of Quincy.

David Palmer Aids In Collision Sea Rescue

Navy Quartermaster Seaman David M. Palmer of 70 Federal Ave., South Quincy, participated in rescue efforts following the collision of the guided missile cruiser USS Belknap and aircraft carrier USS John F. Kennedy.

He is a crewmember of the destroyer USS Borden in the Mediterranean east of Italy.

Palmer and his shipmates aided in fire-fighting operations, bringing fire hoses from their ship to bear on the fires raging on Belknap's bow. Borden's boat crew ferried supplies and equipment to the cruiser and removed injured personnel to other ships for medical treatment.

The Borden, homeported at Charleston, S.C., was deployed with the U.S. Sixth Fleet.

LaRaia Promises Cost Cutting 'Fair, Open Government'

By TOM HENSHAW

JOSEPH J. LARAIA delivers his inaugural address moments after being sworn in as the 28th mayor of Quincy and declares that 1976 "is the year of the people."

PENSIVE MOMENT - Former Mayor Walter J. Hannon's thoughts are entirely his own as he listens to his successor, Joseph J. LaRaia, deliver his inaugural address as mayor of Quincy.

'Wait And See' Attitude

Reaction To Inaugural Address 'Mixed'

Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia's inaugural address drew mixed reviews from Quincy's political and business circles.

The most general reaction was: "Let's wait and see."

Former Mayor Walter J. Hannon, who now heads up the South Shore Chamber of Commerce's Economic Development Group, declined to be critical of the man who defeated him in a recount.

"The guy has been mayor only a couple of days," he said. "Let's leave him alone and see what happens. When he does something then we can make a comment. Until then, let's leave him alone."

Hannon said LaRaia's inaugural address was "very general; not very specific."

"I didn't like the idea of his blaming all the problems on the past administration. As a City Councilor he was part of that administration. I hope we're not in for two years of blaming everyone else."

"I think the City Council is going to take a wait and see attitude," said Council President Arthur H. Tobin. "We'll wait and see what specific programs he offers."

"The speech didn't have the punch I thought it should have had. I thought he should have addressed himself more to the economy. I was a little

"utilize the power of my office to seek extension of MBTA rapid transit facilities in an appropriate southerly direction."

● Consolidation of senior citizen programs under one authority to make it easier for the elderly to participate in them and "offer maximum quantity and quality of service...for every dollar that is expended."

● Appointment of young people to membership on the Quincy Youth Commission through "some democratic mechanism whereby those selected are representative of their peers."

● A fast but prudent start to construction of an addition to North Quincy High School, taking into consideration costs "which seem to be rising at about 20 per cent annually" and the quality of education "which we do not want to see eroded."

"I am not yet persuaded that the plan to close the present structure and move all classes to other locations is the soundest plan. We will investigate all other alternatives."

● Development of a comprehensive plan to combat the growing crime rate on four fronts - prevention, protection, apprehension and punishment.

"We shall seek to introduce pilot programs at the juvenile and youth level...to help create a climate of responsible law abiding citizenship."

"We will increase the visibility of the police force of foot and vehicular patrol in a more intensive effort to deter criminal acts."

"We will expand the neighborhood watch program, heightening citizen awareness and alertness to the need for reporting crime or suspicious activity."

"We will work with law enforcement agencies and the judiciary to develop systems for speedy disposition of cases."

● A diligent search for additional federal funds for expansion of the current community development program and "to subsidize the implementation of new concepts in the delivery of health services and health education programs."

● Concern for problems that are peculiar to certain neighborhoods, for example, threats to the character of a neighborhood "which is imminent under the present plans for reducing the pollution in Quincy Bay."

"We do not want to throw roadblocks in the path of progress but at the same time we do not want some of the residents of our city to have their lives disrupted merely because they are the victims of a geographical accident."

LaRaia cautioned that Quincy "just like every other city in this nation, faces a severe financial crisis."

"Ours," he said in a dig at the outgoing Hannon administration, "has been brought about chiefly by the deliberately less than realistic election year budget which is our legacy from the previous administration."

"The postponement of new taxes in an election year is already showing budget deficiencies in several departments and its consequences affect all of our citizens."

However, LaRaia deleted from his address an earlier jibe at the Hannon administration which was in his prepared text. It said:

"Our city has long been in the grip of powerful forces which exerted strong influence over the electorate."

LaRaia's first remarks as mayor drew a reaction from the crowd.

"What a difference a recount makes!" he said.

Oriental Flavor

Chinese food has falsely earned the reputation of being difficult and time-consuming, reserved for the patience of skillful cooks.

While Chinese dishes have exotic and delicious flavors, they can also be no more complex than meat and potatoes—and certainly a welcome diversion. Oriental cooking can be an economical and time-saving art and, at the same time, provide an abundance of vitamins, minerals and protein. In most cases, vegetables are stir-fried, retaining the nutrients which are lost in over-cooking.

Chicken is a dish popular in Chinese homes. Sweet and Sour Chicken combines sweet and tangy flavors with juicy pineapple for a taste which has long been popular in the U.S. It browns right in the oven making its preparation simple. Serve Sweet and Sour Chicken with fried rice, an Oriental staple, and quick stir-fried vegetables for a meal that will impress both your family and friends, and only you will know how simple it really is to prepare.

Sweet and Sour Chicken

- 1/4 cup Squeeze Parkay liquid margarine
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup soy sauce
- 1/4 cup vinegar
- 1 13 1/4-oz. can pineapple tidbits, drained
- 1 2 1/2 to 3-lb. broiler-fryer, cut up
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch

In a 10-inch skillet combine margarine, sugar, soy sauce, vinegar and pineapple; mix well. Arrange chicken pieces skin-side down in skillet. Bake at 350°, 1 hour and 15 minutes, turning chicken pieces after 40 minutes. Remove chicken and pineapple to serving platter.

Blend cornstarch with small amount of sauce; stir into remaining sauce. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture boils and thickens. Simmer 3 minutes, stirring constantly. Pour over chicken.

4 servings

Fried Rice

- 1/4 cup green onion slices
- 1/4 cup Squeeze Parkay liquid margarine
- 2 cups cooked rice
- 1 6-oz. can water chestnuts, drained, sliced
- 1 tablespoon soy sauce
- 1 egg, beaten

Sauté onions in margarine. Add rice and water chestnuts; cook, stirring over low heat 2 to 3 minutes. Add soy sauce and egg; cook over low heat until egg is set.

4 servings

Oriental Vegetables

- 2 cups carrot slices
- 1 cup diagonally-cut celery slices
- 1/2 cup green pepper strips
- Squeeze Parkay liquid margarine
- 1/4 teaspoon salt

Stir-fry vegetables in margarine until crisp-tender. Season with salt.

VISIBLE WOMAN

Women handed a Supreme blow

By JANET LOWE
Copley News Service

My spirits fell when I heard of the President's announcement. Didn't we have every reason to hope and expect that a woman would be chosen to replace retiring Justice William O. Douglas on the Supreme Court bench?

"I'm very disappointed that the President didn't appoint a woman. So many women are qualified and could make a real contribution," agreed the congresswoman from California, Yvonne Brathwaite Burke. "Then why didn't he?" I puzzled.

"Probably because he was looking for a Republican who was also a neuter, politically."

Many women who might otherwise be qualified for the post are non-neuter Democrats, and the same trend follows for minority race people. The privilege to appoint a Supreme Court Justice of one's own political party is one of the sure things the President has left.

"And was there no woman or minority race person who fit that bill?"

Rep. Burke, a young black woman from Englewood, Calif., is in a position to be knowledgeable on both issues.

"There were some," answered Mrs. Burke, in her brisk, businesslike way. "Jewel LaFontant, the former deputy solicitor general is a distinguished black woman. She would have been an excellent choice."

LaFontant, apparently, was in an awkward position, since the solicitor general was also being considered for the appointment. Political appointments are commonly fraught with such conflicts and complications, however.

I asked Rep. Burke what qualifications a Supreme Court justice really needs.

"The Constitution doesn't say a justice has to be a lawyer. I'd feel sorry for anyone who isn't a known and distinguished scholar, though." She explained that the candidate would have difficulty dealing with attorneys otherwise. Mrs. Burke feels a Supreme Court Justice should be, in every respect, a judicial person.

It is probably the expectation of many that a Supreme Court justice should have a distinguished law career that hurt women's chances the most. Even though there are such women around for the President to choose from, their numbers are few.

Only recently did women begin attending law school in sufficient numbers to be competitive for court appointments. The women who have practiced law long enough to accumulate the appropriate experience have not worked in an era when women were generally advanced in the court system. And women still have a difficult time.

Usually, the most effective way to deal with disappointment is to pick up wounded feelings and try again, only harder this time.

"So what should we do," I asked, "to see that a woman is appointed to the Supreme Court on the next go around?"

Judgeships, it seems, are made by political appointment. Governors and presidents have a great deal of influence on the promotion of women in the judiciary.

"I hope as women," cautioned Yvonne Burke, "we remember things like this. It's time women got smart." She suggests asking candidates outright how they feel about putting forth and elevating women, then keeping a close watch to see that they do so when elected.

STEP UP SAFELY

The National Safety Council reports some 30,000 to 40,000 Americans have disabling falls from ladders each year. Many are disabled for life. And 300 to 400 people are fatally injured. For those who have home repairs or painting on the agenda, it's a good idea to give some thought to the ladder and its use.

A ladder used to gain access to a roof should extend three feet above the point of support to enable the user to have something to grip while working or climbing onto a roof. It also allows a safety margin for a minor slip. More accidents are caused by ladders slipping and falling than anything else.

If any kind of a ladder is placed near a doorway, the door should be locked so someone can't come barging through and knock the user into the injury statistics book.

Don't reach out too far, jeopardizing your balance. Instead, move the ladder. Never straddle space between the ladder and another object. Finally, never use ladders in a high wind.

Girl's scar upsets her parent

By DR. WILLARD ABRAHAM

Q. Our little girl had a bad fall when she was a baby. She cut her forehead just below the hair line. It was sewed up, but there is still a thin scar, and I hate to have her carry it her entire life.

No one else seems to pay any attention to it, but it has become almost an obsession with me. In fact, I frequently find myself staring at it when I'm talking to her. I catch myself and then look away, but it's often too late for she sometimes gets a strange look on her face because she knows what I'm staring at. I guess I need some help, but I don't know what to do about it.

A. You're wise to realize that you have the problem, not your daughter. And you seem to recognize that you could cause her some difficulties as time goes on.

It may possibly be that you feel some responsibility for her accident, accounting for your so-called obsession with the scar.

You might want to discuss this matter with your pediatrician and perhaps even get his or her recommendation of a plastic surgeon whom you can talk to about it. But if the scar is really thin, and perhaps will fade out even more in time, a conversation or two with a psychologist or psychiatrist may be appropriate.

Mayor LaRaia: Give Him A Fair Chance

The accent certainly is on the word "new" for Quincy as we begin the bicentennial year 1976.

In addition to the new year, we have a new mayor, two new city councillors, [Paul Harold, Daniel Raymond], two new school committee members [Patricia Toland, Christopher Kennedy], a number of new department heads [more to come], and other new faces in key municipal posts.

Of them all, new Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia no doubt will have the greatest impact on the city's direction the next two years.

As the city's chief executive he will pretty much set the course for 1976-77. It will be his job to move Quincy ahead, to keep it from sputtering and stalling or shifting into reverse.

It's a pretty big job as other mayors before have found out. Being one of nine City Councillors or one mayor are two different ball games. The buck stops in the corner office at City Hall.

The mayor often gets blamed when things go wrong and someone else gets the credit when it's his bow taking time.

Quincy, now the eighth largest city in Massachusetts [91,478] has problems to match its size.

Mayor LaRaia will earn his $25,000 a year salary. He'll spend some of it on aspirin as each day in office brings at least one new headache.

Quincy has been blessed with some good mayors since becoming a city in 1888 but few have come into office with as many problems facing them as Mayor LaRaia has.

Unemployment, skyrocketing municipal costs, rising crime rate, pollution, are enough by themselves. But on top of that he faces the additional task of putting a divided city back together again.

There are still hard feelings from the bitter mayoral campaign and accusations still circulate the city. There are deep political wounds. Some time will heal but others will remain scars to remember.

Mayor LaRaia's recount victory was Quincy's "news story of the year" in 1975. But he must keep in mind that his win was by only 483 votes—certainly not a mandate.

It means that almost as many voters wanted to retain former Mayor Walter J. Hannon. It means he is going to have to work harder than some other new mayors in the past had to work when they first took office.

But opportunity is there for Mr. LaRaia to become a great mayor. But it won't come easy. He may find himself running into stone walls of opposition now and then. But if he tries hard, he could accomplish a lot. Some 17,231 voters said they wanted a change. They now have it. The big question: how good a change will it be?

As mayor, Mr. LaRaia must keep in mind what is best for the city—not special anti-groups. We hope his administration, like the song of some years back will "accent the positive and eliminate the negative".

Mr. LaRaia has a big job ahead of him and we wish him well.

We also hope that Quincy residents—especially those who did not vote for him—will be patient and give him a chance to get his feet wet in his new job.

Mayor LaRaia deserves time to show what he can do for Quincy without critics pouncing on him when he makes his first mistake. Every mayor has made a first mistake.

It won't take too long to get an idea how good a mayor he will be. But he should be given a fair chance to get his administration rolling. This is not a time for snap judgements.

Reaction To LaRaia Speech

disappointed that he didn't mention the problem of unemployment.

"I don't say that as a criticism of him. I say it as a fact. He says that he is going to welcome suggestions. Maybe I can offer that as a suggestion."

Eric Swider, executive vice president of the Chamber of Commerce, called LaRaia's address "a positive statement."

"I was impressed," he said, "by his desire to involve people in his administration. I would call that a positive approach."

"Obviously we disagree on the South Quincy MBTA Station. I certainly do not wish him well as far as that is concerned. I will attempt to frustrate him there."

"But once he gets an opportunity to evaluate the entire package I believe he'll see that it will bring to Quincy the side benefits that he believes are important."

Swider said LaRaia's plan to study alternatives to the present parking meter system has brought mixed reaction from the business community.

"Parking meters are a two-edged sword," he said. "They provide positive control over parking and they also provide a low cost parking facility. The alternative is parking with attendants, which is more costly."

"The thing Quincy needs more than the elimination of parking meters is increased access to the downtown area."

Judge Albert Kramer, presiding justice of Quincy District Court, said he was pleased with LaRaia's emphasis on the speedy disposition of court cases as a way of fighting crime.

"I take that as an endorsement of the bill that would make mandatory the 6-man jury trials in misdemeanor cases," said Judge Kramer. "That would hasten trials that sometimes wait 15 months now."

"Dist. Atty. Delahunt and I talked to him about it a couple of weeks ago and it looks as though he's going to support our efforts to get speedier trials. We hope he will help us get the bill through this year."

John J. Sullivan, vice chairman of the School Committee, said LaRaia was expressing the feelings of the whole committee when he questioned the wisdom of closing North Quincy High School while an addition is built.

"We all would like to find a way to keep the school open," he said. "Each option that we have has something favorable. But we can't find an option that gives a total answer. We'd all like to find a way."

Former Mayor Thomas S. Burgin said he thought LaRaia "did a good job. He was very sincere. He spoke of some things that I am sure will be helpful to the city."

"I like his idea of appointing advisory committees. They should be very helpful. I would be very interested to see who the appointments are. I offered my help this morning as the senior ex-mayor."

Burgin, who was sworn in to his first term as mayor exactly 40 years ago, said he was pleased to see LaRaia and Hannon sitting together amiably on the stage after their bitter campaign.

"Hannon was a good sport," he said. "He showed his bigness by attending the inaugural and sitting with Joe. Both of them are fine young men."

SUNBEAMS Women's Lib Summit Luncheon

By HENRY BOSWORTH

You might remember last summer when I started teasing women libbers and some of the gals took sharp issue with me.

One of them was Char-Lou Benedict, formerly of Quincy, now living in Del Mar, Calif. She wrote to say I missed the most important reason for women's lib: "The average woman of today wants most to be treated as a person with individual rights, desires and chances for success in her chosen field."

Well, I wrote another column in reply. I figured she was a safe 3,000 miles away and wasn't about to come storming through the front door.

Guess what? Char-Lou was in town for the holidays which just goes to show you that 3,000 miles these days is like a walk down a short street.

Char-Lou didn't come storming through the door, though. She invited me to lunch instead. She, Pat Toland, our new school committee woman [I won't say committeewoman] Alicia Coletti and Mary Collins.

Seems when I thought Char-Lou was so far away, I courageously noted that some women libbers seem to want all the equal rights and benefits but not necessarily the equal responsibilities.

And I said some of the real rabid ones seem to be man haters. And, coincidentally, some of them are a bit on the homely side and would have a problem getting a man to say hello after six months on a deserted island together.

But I said I wasn't the type to hold a grudge and I would be happy to talk things over with any gal at lunch. But with the condition she pick up the check or at least split it in the true sense of equality.

So Char-Lou, Pat, Mary and Alicia called my bluff. And may I say that all four would certainly help to pretty up all the equal rights and I know my wife wouldn't let me go.

The four girls [I'm not going to call them persons] really gave me the royal treatment. And all four wore pretty dresses or skirts. Pat and Alicia picked me up at the office and when we reached Peter's Landing, Pat opened the door for me.

Inside, where we met Char-Lou and Mary, Alicia hung up my coat for me. Or was it Mary? Anyway, it was different.

As we sat in the lounge for drinks, I could sense men staring at me trying to figure out what one guy was doing out with four women—and attractive women, at that.

"My stock will certainly rise around town," I mused.

I kind of felt like the poor man's Hugh Hefner but I didn't mention it to the girls. They'd have thought for sure I was a chauvinist pig—or chauvinist bunny keeper.

But I just let the guys stare. Except when County Commissioner George McDonald spotted us and came over to the table.

"What are you doing with all these beautiful women," asked George. "Eat your heart out," I replied.

After George shook his head and left, we started making small talk.

"What do you think of that waitress down in Connecticut who refuses to shave her legs," I asked just to get things going.

"What do you think of the waiter who wears a beard?" Alicia asked.

"Yeah, but legs are different," I said. "I think hairy legs [on women] don't look very clean. I wouldn't want her waiting on my table."

We got around to Ms. which I said I despise. "Sounds like a buzzing mosquito to me," I noted.

The girls seemed to agree that it wasn't attractive sounding and they wish there was another word for it.

But Char-Lou who now works in a bank in Del Mar [which is beside San Diego] observed the designation comes in handy when writing business letters and you don't know for sure if a woman is married or single.

"Ms. might not be so bad if we had another word for single men rather than Mr.," Mary noted.

The girls seemed to agree with me that there are some kooks in the women's lib movement.

"There is a fanatic fringe," allowed Pat.

"Unfortunately," noted Alicia, "they are the ones that get all the publicity. The true woman libber isn't like them. The fanatics hurt the movement."

It was time to go in for lunch. As we entered the dining room all heads turned toward us. The guys were obviously trying to figure out what was going on—especially when Mary pulled out the chair for me.

And as we ordered and chatted I mused to myself that when it came to pay the check, we would have that familiar scene—you know: Women studying the check and saying, "Well I had that so I owe this. You had that and so you owe this, etc."

Well, there was none of that check fumbling.

Pat reached over and picked it up. And it was paid without any huddling. [They apparently planned ahead to share it equally].

I was beginning to feel a little heelish at this point. But I couldn't back down. I was striking a blow for all the red blooded boys in Peter's Landing and elsewhere in the world.

I didn't even make a half-hearted stab for the check.

But I did order a round of after dinner drinks and paid for them. It made me feel a little equal.

Before we left we reached a compromise like they do at summit meetings Henry Kissinger is always going to:

There are many, many sincere women in the women's liberation movement who ask only, as Char-Lou had said in her letter, "to be treated as a person with individual rights, desires and chances for success in her chosen field." And, there are some fanatics who carry things too damn [my word] far.

QUINCY'S YESTERDAYS

January 8-14, 1950 - 26 Years Ago This Week

First City Manager William Deegan Arrives

By PAUL HAROLD

William Deegan arrived in Quincy this week and was unanimously elected Quincy's first city manager by the City Council.

Acting Mayor Charles Herbert met Deegan at North Station and drove him to Quincy.

Inclement weather in the midwest forced Deegan to take a train from Superior, Wisc., where he had been manager.

Deegan's first job was to find suitable quarters for his office. Mayor Thomas Burgin invited him to use the present Mayor's office until permanent arrangements were made. A re-arrangement of city offices in the city hall annex was being studied as a means of providing space at city hall.

QUINCY SHIPBUILDING COMMITTEE MEETS

The first meeting of 1950 of the Quincy Committee for the Advancement of the U.S. Merchant Marine was held at the Quincy Chamber of Commerce. Chairman was George Daley.

Organizations represented in the committee were the Chamber of Commerce, Quincy Veterans Council, Quincy CIO shipbuilding union, Fore River Independent Union, Quincy AFL Ship Designers union, Weymouth Selectmen, Fore River Long Service Club, Fore River Graduate Apprentice Association and Fore River management.

SACRED HEART MAKES FINAL LAST RENT PAYMENT

The school department received final payment of rent for use of North Quincy High School by the parish of Sacred Heart. The parish used the school for the past two years while a new Sacred Heart church was being built.

Rev. Irving Gifford thanked the committee for its co-operation in the past year. "I'm sure God will bless you all," he said in expressing his gratitude.

MERRYMOUNT STUDENTS RUN MARKET

Fifth graders at the Merrymount School learned that there could be as much fun learning multiplication tables, sewing, health lessons and library research as there was in playing store.

That's exactly what they've been doing. Under the direction of teacher Gilbert Berry, the students were running a market in the classroom named the "Merrymount Market".

When the project first began, the class was divided into three groups consisting of a building committee, a food committee and a money committee.

Mr. Berry said that the store project cut through many areas in the fifth grade curriculum, such as addition, multiplication, division, sewing, carpentry, library research and the place of the consumer in the community.

GERMANTOWN CHURCH NEEDS STUDIED

Six members of the Quincy Council of Churches studied the church needs for the new housing project being constructed at Germantown.

Members of the committee included, Rev. Peter Corea, Rev. Paul Rademacher, Rev. Thomas Barbour, Rev. Chester Porteus, Rev. Victor Sayer and Rev. Bedros Baharian, ex-officio.

A REGIONAL ECONOMY

Who's Driving? Where Are We Going?

By ERIC SWIDER

The other day Chamber President Jack Conway and I went to a Regional Economic Conference in Boston, sponsored by the Governor and featuring his cabinet secretaries.

The only encouragement came after the session when Conway offered to buy me a dark brew at Jake Wirth's.

The whole meeting was frustrating, unsettling, and highly defensive. It boils down to a serious lack of understanding for the economy of this State.

On one hand, the man stands there and tells the very same business people who are exposed to practically the most onerous business taxes in the nation that the recent tax increase wasn't aimed at this [hell no, we all live in New Hampshire], and then, on the other hand, explains why he is supportive of Life Line legislation as a substitute welfare program which will increase business' electric bill by 14% and make us the leader far and away in energy costs.

The Governor hinted that the efforts on the part of certain interests to defeat Graduated Income Tax proposals in the past is at the heart of our economic problems. Run away spending on the part of State government, of course, can't get any blame. The rationale is, I guess, that if you have structured a tax, no matter how onerous, that produces oodles of cash, then the legislators can go out and spend it any way they see fit. Culprits are only created when expenditures exceed income, and heaven forbid there should be culprit lawmakers.

His economic recovery program is simple. He suggests that the 10,000 manufacturing businesses in the Commonwealth who currently employ 20 or more people simply add one new net employee per year for the next five years, and voila - we are back to full employment when one takes all of the other things and ancillary effects into consideration. Jack Conway and I would relate with that one, maybe. Jack has written to every employer of over 20 people on the South Shore this week to find out whether or not they can do their share in adding new employees, at an accelerated pace if possible, and what we can do to assist them in achieving this objective.

The thrust of where the State is heading eludes me in one way and concerns me very much in another.

There seems to be a feeling at the highest levels that nothing should happen economically, transportation or development-wise unless it has the imprimatur of State government attached to it. In other words, don't let dynamics and market forces in the competitive enterprise system do their thing. Let there be a statewide plan and let us implement this plan under the watchful eye of Superplanner Frank Keefe lest someone who might have figured a way to get more than 6% on his money do it. I can't believe it. The Russians learned that central planning, five-year plans, and bureaucratic meddling in every phase of economic decision making leads to unimaginative and totally unacceptable performance and results.

As much as Frank Keefe, Fred Salucci, Evelyn Murphy, Bill Flynn, Lola Dickerman and Howard Smith all seem to be nice people, I don't really know that a Ralph Tedeschi or Tom Flatley should have to mandatorily employ them as a consulting team when they want to make a development decision in Massachusetts.

I predicted a year ago that the Governor would conclude that all our health care and welfare costs [via a guaranteed annual income] should be transferred to the Federal government. It makes sense for Massachusetts to propose and push for such legislation. It will bail us out and bankrupt the United States, which is basically the reason Congress will have to reject such a scheme.

The answer does not lie in central planning. Federal takeovers, or more taxes via lifetime or graduated income tax. Our answer lies with each and every employer in Massachusetts and how we help them maximize their job potential. One way State government can efficiently work with that employer [not propagandize him, but work with him] is through voluntary business organizations like this Chamber. To date, they have rejected our offers of help.

Maybe they fear the need to share the glory if the business expands. [If that's the case, we hereby exempt ourselves from taking any glory.] Maybe they don't trust our motives. Maybe they're not sure of what they want to do, should do, and need to do. The point is that about one year ago, we were encouraged by the promise of gubernatorial task forces of businesspeople to work on our economic recovery. Today we're very discouraged that a year, has gone by, nothing has been done on that good idea, and that it probably will never get implemented because its been kicking around for too long.

This state is seriously adrift, and now is the time for leadership to step forward.

LIVING TODAY

Should Marriage Choke Off Freedom?

By DR. WILLIAM F. KNOX

It was Patrick Henry who is said to have said "Give me liberty or give me death". I hear many married people saying essentially the same thing. This is a cause of great unrest in marriage... the choking off of freedom. For many people their marital relationship is choking and stifling rather than encouraging individual growth and freedom.

Women are feeling that they are not free... tied to the house... the children... being "his wife, as though I am property" Why? For two reasons... First, because the husband has an attitude of superiority, which places a wife in a secondary position to the husband. Many husbands believe that the wife's life should circulate around him... his schedule... his likes and dislikes... his convenience... his friends. She has no life of her own... she "belongs" to him. Furthermore, this kind of husband "let's her go out"... or "won't let her go" or do what she desires as though he had a right to "let"... or "not let". Her freedom as a person is practically nil with this kind of husband.

The Second reason why some women feel like a man's property is her own attitude, she's letting her freedom be taken from her. Why? Insecurity... fear of not being able to make it without this "freedom denying husband". So she buys security at the price of her freedom.

Why these sick attitudes which make for a sick relationship? For one thing... childhood background largely determines women's attitude toward men, and men's attitudes toward women. If a girl's mother was the servant in the home and her father was the master, this is the only pattern she knows. It becomes her mode... the way things are. A boy seeing this pattern gets the idea that subjugating women is the way to be a man. So a new generation is born where freedom is denied in marriage... and in other relationships of men and women.

A husband's freedom is also denied in some cases by possessive women who seek to control... usually the way some mothers controlled... the only pattern she knows. Many men rebel... stay longer at the office... or at the bar... just to say "You're not going to control me. Give me liberty or give me death." Sooner or later, in many instances when freedom is denied, there follows the death of the marriage.

Norfolk County Jail Inmates Learning Welding

Inmates of the Norfolk County Jail are learning to weld, thanks to a cooperative program set up by Sheriff Clifford H. Marshall with the Quincy Vo-Tech School.

Seven students at Quincy Vo-Tech, under the direction of instructor Robert Dodd, built and installed welding booths for the program, which began Wednesday.

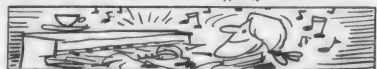

Plans for the funding of a part-time instructor in welding are being made by the Adult Basic Education Program of the Quincy school system, under the direction of Edward Hannon.

"We are most grateful for the tremendous cooperation of all concerned, especially the Quincy School Department and students," said Sheriff Marshall.

"Through their efforts we will be able to train and instruct some of the [jail] population in a trade where there is a job market and continue our goals toward rehabilitation."

A Quincy man, John Blake of Colony Welding Inc., was instrumental in arranging the trade of a large welding machine obtained a few years ago with federal funds for five new welding machines better suited for teaching welding techniques.

Also cooperating in the program was the Massachusetts Rehabilitation Commission.

The first piano was manufactured in the United States in 1775 in Philadelphia.

Complete Text Of Mayor LaRaia's Inaugural Address

Following is the text of Mayor LaRaia's inaugural address delivered Monday in ceremonies at the Quincy Vocational Technical School gymnasium.

My fellow citizens...1976 is the year of the people. This is the imperative that resounds in my ears as I take the oath of office as your mayor. Any political leader with a sensitivity to history must feel a solemn sense of mission this year as the United States crosses the threshold into its third century as the worlds foremost democratic nation.

This sense of mission...this concern for people...this imperative for a reaffirmation of democratic values...is even more intense within me, when I reflect that you have entrusted to my hands, my mind and my spirit the destiny of a community which has withstood the challenge of 350 years.

This is a community which gave to our nation the most prominent signer of the declaration of independence, John Hancock...and which gave our fledgling republic two presidents...John Adams and John Quincy Adams.

To stand in their shadow is an awesome responsibility. It is a task to which we will bend ourselves with vigor of mind and heart. Government for and of the people was the theme of the LaRaia campaign. It shall also be the credo of the LaRaia administration.

I expect you, my fellow citizens, to be ever vigilant...to question every appointment...to scrutinize every administrative act...to examine each decision...to determine whether they are being made for the favored few or to benefit the entire citizenry. I will welcome this scrutiny, this lively interest, this examination of my motives because it is indicative of that citizen concern and citizen involvement that is the essence of democracy.

CITIZEN CONCERN

It was our fortunate success that we were able to organize a nucleus of 100 supporters...just ordinary citizens...and build them into a force that grew to thousands of voters at election time. We achieved the first step in our goal toward citizen concern and people participation. But I do not delude myself that it was a total victory...that we had achieved unanimity in our crusade. Any candid assessment would point up the fact that a 483 vote majority is less than a landslide victory. I do not, therefore, regard my election as a mandate to overturn all the processes of government. This is not the case at all.

Rather, I regard that you have given me a mandate to bring a fresh, people-oriented perspective to the problems of government...that you have instructed me to seek innovative, more effective means for the delivery of municipal services. That you want change only to the extent that it will insure that you...as residents, as home owners, as businessmen, receive maximum value for your tax dollar.

In the announcement of my candidacy, I promised that I would establish task forces to serve in an advisory capacity to help us develop more efficient fiscal management policies and procedures.

facilities and programs; and broader gauged community action programs in health, social welfare and recreation. In this inaugural address it would be deceitful for me to promise that I have the solutions to all the grave problems that besiege our municipality. But I do pledge that we will propose creative alternatives...specific measures to help us face up to and overcome the obstacles that previous administrations have bequeathed to us.

CITIZEN ADVISORY COMMITTEES

It is my intention immediately to appoint citizen advisory committees, comprised of our own citizens who can contribute their knowledge in management, banking, production, data processing, purchasing and construction and engineering.

I shall recruit these citizens to serve in a voluntary capacity. To seek with us and to counsel with us about cost saving measures that can be introduced into our city departments...both with regard to daily operation, and with regard for long range planning. Our city has a reservoir of knowledgeable citizens, who, I am certain, will be happy to contribute their invaluable expertise to the benefit of our government mechanism.

CENTRAL MAINTENANCE FACILITY FOR CITY VEHICLES

As a result of preliminary deliberations with some of these technical specialists, I am planning to establish a central maintenance facility for city vehicles. We are confident this will enable us to cut repair costs and reduce down time for these essential pieces of equipment...giving us more service for each hourly expenditure and slowing the rate of obsolescence so that over the long haul we can reduce capital expenditures for the city's moving stock.

RETAIL OPERATION SAVE

Retail business is the lifeblood of any city. We must make it more attractive for people to patronize our principal shopping areas. One of my primary concerns will be to work with our merchants in the creation and implementation of an enterprise which I am calling Operation Save. We will promote to all Quincy residents the benefits of service...accessibility...variety...and economy...that they will enjoy by shopping in the local shopping area. And we will institute programs that will make this "SAVE" concept an obvious reality.

PARKING METERS S.Q. MBTA STATION

We have already initiated studies to determine possible productive alternatives to our present system of parking meters, utilization of parking spaces and current traffic patterns. I also reiterate, at this time, my opposition to the establishment of an MBTA Station in South Quincy, because of the potential hazards it creates to the well-being of the residents in that vicinity. The problem of flooding is one on which we will place particular emphasis, but I do agree and will utilize the power of my office to seek extension of MBTA rapid transit facilities in a more appropriate southerly locale.

CONSOLIDATE SENIOR CITIZEN PROGRAMS

I turn now to two important groups in our community...our senior citizens and our young people. In both instances I intend to introduce changes in the methods of planning and delivering services. First, with regard to our programs for the elderly, it is my intention to consolidate these programs under a single authority, rather than maintain the present structure where responsibility for program administration is divided. Under the best circumstances, our senior citizens face confusion and complexity in finding and enjoying the benefits to which they are entitled. We must make certain that we make the route to securing services and participating in programs as simple as possible...and that we...as a responsible community offer maximum quantity and quality of service to our senior citizens for every dollar that is expended in these programs.

YOUNG PEOPLE TO YOUTH COMMISSION

As one who has preached the principle of citizen participation and self determination, it is essential that I practice it at every level. In respect to the young people of our community, this means that I shall appoint young people to membership on the Quincy Youth Commission...not by fiat, but by working out some democratic mechanism whereby those selected are representative of their peers. Perhaps through balloting in secondary schools and teenage organizations.

The important element is that we provide a vehicle for young voices to be heard and heeded if our youth programs are to be meaningful and serve as a positive force for building a climate of responsible citizenship and productive use of leisure time among boys and girls...young men and young women.

INVESTIGATE ALL NQHS ALTERNATIVES

An essential concern we have currently is the disposition of plans for the construction of the addition to North Quincy High School. It is my desire that this project move forward, not only with dispatch, and also with prudence...with dispatch, because unnecessary delays will add needlessly to construction costs, which seem to be rising at about 20 per cent annually...and with prudence, because we do not want to see the quality of education eroded during the period in which construction takes place.

I am not yet persuaded that the plan to close the present structure and move all classes to other locations is the soundest plan. We will investigate all other alternatives and give all voices an opportunity to present creative solutions to this vexing problem...solutions whose merits will be weighed on the basis of their educational and economic consequences to the city, to the students, to the teaching and administrative staffs.

COMPREHENSIVE PLAN TO COMBAT RISING CRIME

I address myself now briefly to the problem of our growing crime rate...only briefly at this juncture, but I assure you that we will, in cooperation with our police authorities, develop a comprehensive plan to combat this cancer in our society. We shall attack this problem on four fronts: Prevention, Protection, Apprehension and Punishment.

First, we shall seek to introduce pilot programs at the juvenile and youth level that will be educational in nature to help create a climate of responsible law abiding citizenship.

Second, we will increase the visibility of the police force on foot and vehicular patrol in a more intensive effort to deter criminal acts.

Third, we will expand the neighborhood watch program, heightening citizen awareness and alertness to the need for reporting crime or suspicious activity.

Fourth, we will work with law enforcement agencies and the judiciary to develop systems for the speedy disposition of cases.

The postponement of justice deprives the accused of the right to prompt and fair judgement. It permits those with criminal tendencies the opportunity to commit additional offenses against the society and it diminishes the threat of incarceration as a deterrent to crime.

TO SEEK FEDERAL FUNDS FOR COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

During the next two years I shall continue to seek federal funds for expansion of the community development program which has been launched in Quincy. I shall search diligently for additional funds from federal agencies to subsidize the implementation of new concepts in the delivery of health services and health education programs...industrial development and neighborhood rehabilitation which we will be deliberating in the various task forces that will be formed.

POLLUTION, NEIGHBORHOOD PROBLEMS

Each of our neighborhoods has its particular problems and concerns, and as your chief executive, I shall consider these concerns to be my own, and will take every possible course to alleviate them. One example is the threat to the tenor of community life and to the character of the neighborhood which is imminent under the present plans for reducing the pollution in Quincy Bay. We do not want to throw roadblocks in the path of progress, but at the same time, we do not want some of the residents of our city to have their lives disrupted merely because they are the victims of a geographical accident. I will assign a group of concerned environmentalists to protect our interests against continued pollution of Quincy Bay.

CITY FACES SEVERE FINANCIAL CRISIS

In these few moments, it is impossible to present a detailed blueprint of our plan of action for the next two years. But I have tried to convey to you an outline of our major concerns. I campaigned for your support with complete candor and I will conduct myself in office with that same candor. It is thus that I caution you that Quincy...just like every other city in this nation, faces a severe financial crisis. Ours has been brought about chiefly by the deliberately less than realistic election year budget which is our legacy from the previous administration.

The postponement of no new taxes in an election year is already showing budget deficiencies in several departments...and its consequences affect all of our citizens. Our fire, police and health protection agencies expect to be short several hundred thousand dollars for the payment of personal services...there was no provision for any capital outlay to maintain or replace essential city equipment.

COST CUTTING MEASURES

I assure you that the LaRaia administration will introduce cost cutting measures and exercise extreme prudence to close the gap between essential expenditures and anticipated revenues but the task will be one which requires a total concentrated effort on the part of every city department. Your vote that has provided me with this opportunity to bring a fresh perspective to city hall was an act of faith. I pledge to you that I will fulfill that faith by restoring fair, open government to Quincy.

YEAR OF THE PEOPLE

Nineteen seventy five became the year of the people for our community and we achieved a victory by citizen participation, in all neighborhoods and at all economic levels. This people's crusade must remain intact, so that our victory at the polls can be translated into a people's victory in revitalizing our city. I emphasize to you that I will...in the Mayor's office, welcome the advice, counsel and participation of any and every citizen who has a creative idea or a special talent to contribute.

Together, as we enter a new century in the march toward fulfillment of the great American dream...here, in our city of Quincy, birthplace of those who envisioned that dream...nineteen seventy six must be the year of the people.

Things Weren't Exactly Peaceful At Inaugural

'I Wash My Hands Of Them'

School Committee, Council Would Elect Anselmo Successor

By TOM HENSHAW

John J. Sullivan was elected vice-chairman of the Quincy School Committee and, almost immediately, the School Committee found itself short by one member.

Frank Anselmo, who thought he should have had the job and was favored to win it, resigned, on the spot by way of a scribbled note to Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia.

The note said: "I hereby resign from the Quincy School Committee, Frank Anselmo."

If Anselmo's resignation sticks, according to City Clerk John Gillis, the School Committee and the City Council would meet in joint session, with each member accorded one vote, to select a successor. A two-thirds vote of members would be necessary to elect.

"I hope he has a chance to change his mind," said Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia. "He is a valuable asset to the School Committee and to Quincy. Frank has always spoken out on issues where others were afraid to open their mouths."

"I hope the whole thing blows over." It happened like this at the organizational meeting of the School Committee before about 1,000 spectators in the Quincy Vo-Tech School gym.

Outgoing Vice Chairman Charles T. Sweeney nominated Sullivan to succeed him in what has been called the third most prestigious office in Quincy's city government.

Sullivan, in turn, nominated Anselmo, the dean of the committee by virtue of his 13 years service.

Francis X. McCauley announced his own candidacy "since there is no one to place my name in nomination and extol my virtues."

School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon collected the secret paper ballots.

LaRaia, who is chairman of the School Committee because he is Mayor, counted them up.

The score was Sullivan 3, Anselmo 2, McCauley 2. No one had the necessary majority. A second ballot was taken.

No score was announced but LaRaia declared Sullivan elected. Later it was learned that the second ballot showed Sullivan 4, McCauley 2, Anselmo 1.

McCauley moved that the vote be made unanimous.

While Sullivan was introducing the members of the committee, Anselmo scribbled a note and passed it down the table to LaRaia. The Mayor read it, refolded it and put it in his pocket.

By the time Sullivan's introductions had reached Anselmo at the far end of the table, the dean of the School Committee walked out and was gone.

Later, contacted by The Quincy Sun, Anselmo acknowledged that he had resigned from the committee. He was still fuming.

"It is a case of the second time that I have been betrayed by my colleagues," he said.

"Two years ago, I had three votes for vice chairman. I should have had a fourth. It was pledged to me. The man shook hands with me and pledged his vote to me."

"He betrayed my word."

"Last Wednesday, the same man shook hands with me again and pledged his vote to me. He pledged to nominate me and he did. He said I had earned the right to be vice chairman."

"If he was a man of honor, when he was nominated he should have said, 'Thank you very much but I am pledged to support Mr. Anselmo.' He didn't do that."

"That is the second time the man's word has been broken to me."

"My word is my bond. I have felt that way all my life. It goes with a man's character."

"It saddens me. Is this an example to be set for the children who we are giving a quality education?"

"My resignation is final. There is no way that I'll be talked out of it. I wash my hands of them."

"It sickens me in the pit of my stomach to do business with these people."

Sullivan called Anselmo's resignation "a spontaneous action. I hope he can be called on to change his mind."

He said he voted for Anselmo on the first ballot and switched to himself on the second when it was apparent that McCauley's two votes [whom he identified as McCauley and LaRaia] were not going to move.

"We could have been there for 100 ballots and the most Anselmo would have gotten was one vote," Sullivan said.

"I voted for Anselmo. I have to assume he voted for himself. I also assumed McCauley and the Mayor voted for McCauley. I know the three votes I got did not come from that source. I was a Hannon supporter."

"I left my name in nomination because, whether I withdrew or not made no difference. Under the School Committee rules, you don't have to be nominated to get votes."

"I thought that my voting for Anselmo was signal enough to McCauley and LaRaia to vote for him, too. After all, McCauley and Anselmo were with LaRaia in the campaign."

"They had a chance to get Anselmo elected but they didn't switch."

"I hope Anselmo changes his mind. He may be a little bit annoyed. But he's a good old guy. I like him personally."

Edward Leone Named Temporary DPW Commissioner

Edward Leone, city engineer since 1970 and an employee of the Quincy Public Works Department for 40 years, has been appointed temporary commissioner of the DPW for a term that will extend no later than Feb. 2.

He succeeds James J.

Ricciuti, who resigned last week.

A spokesman for Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia said Leone, who lives at 127 Merrymount Rd., was appointed to handle any crisis that might come up, especially a major snow storm.

He indicated that a new permanent commissioner may be appointed before Feb. 2.

'Not Immune From Criticism'

Harold's Remarks Trigger Biting Tobin Response

Arthur H. Tobin was reelected to a seventh term as president of the City Council Monday but not before freshman Councillor Paul D. Harold warned him that he would not be "immune from criticism" in the future.

The vote was unanimous, including Harold's.

The new councillor-at-large said he had received a number of calls and letters, a figure later pegged by him at 250, asking him not to vote for Tobin.

"But since he is the only one in nomination," said Harold, "it would be childish and irresponsible of me to cast the only vote against him."

"I am not deaf to the calls and letters but I intend to do my job and the only way is to work with the people who are running the city."

"But I don't intend that he be immune from criticism in the future."

Harold's remarks drew a round of applause from the inaugural audience in Quincy Vo-Tech gym that surprised even Harold himself.

Tobin was visibly annoyed.

"It seems to me that Councillor Harold is trying to create an image at my expense and this I resent because the fact of the matter is that Mr. Harold came to me and told me he was voting for me. I did not go to Mr. Harold to solicit his vote."

"The thing that bothered me most was that my children were present yesterday and they came to me afterward and asked me what I had done wrong. I had to explain to them that I had done nothing wrong and that Councillor Harold's actions were inexplicable."

"He could have done what Mr. McCauley [School committeeman] did and voted for himself. He could have placed his own name in nomination or he could have placed the name of any other councillor in nomination."

"But a lesson to learn by one that aspires to public service is his word must be good...he must keep it. My word has always been good. If my word was not good I would never have been city council president for seven consecutive terms."

"Mr. Harold gave his word. If he wants to weasel out of it, that is something he has got to live with. I do not wish to belabor the point."

"If I had any previous knowledge that his image would be tainted, I would have told him to vote for himself."

In other matters the City Council:

- Elected Councillors Warren A. Powers and John J. Lydon Jr. to the City Hospital Endowment Fund.

- Reelected Richard Ward and William McDonald to the board of managers of the Adams Temple and School Fund.

- Sent to the finance committee a request by the Chief of Police for $10,125 to retain a police cadet and a mechanic in the department.

- Sent to the ordinance committee a request by the Mayor for changes in the salary structure of two members of the Mayor's staff.

- Accepted a $10 gift from Mrs. Louise Stromberg for the hospital library.

- Accepted a $500 gift from the North Quincy Knights of Columbus for a biennial oratory contest for junior and senior high school students.

- Accepted a $100 gift from Thomas J. McNamara in memory of his mother, Susan, for the hospital building and equipment fund.

LaRaia Reception Cost City Estimated $280

Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia's inaugural reception at State Street South apparently cost the city of Quincy only $280.

That's the 2/3 of the tab for buses for senior citizens and advertising that was picked up jointly by the School Department and the Mayor's Office.

A third of the busing and advertising bill was paid by the Mayor's Campaign Committee, which also paid the $680 rental on the ball and the band.

A spokesman for the Mayor said the following items were donated for the reception:

Thirty cases of champagne, 2,500 cups of coffee, 5,000 pieces of pastry, 12 centerpieces, corsages, carnations, plus glasses, paper plates and miscellaneous items.

Fenno St. Recreation Center Undergoes Major Renovations

The Park Department reported on renovations to the Fenno Street Recreational Center last week and, incidental to the main report, disclosed why the cost of government is going up on all levels.

The cost of electricity needed to light the center until 10 p.m. each evening, Monday through Saturday, between May 1 and Oct. 1 has more than doubled in the past five years, from $316.12 in 1970 to $707.91 for 1975.

The major factor in the increase, said a Park Department spokesman, was the fuel adjustment charge, which is now becoming a familiar phrase in most households.

Major renovations at the facility at the corner of Hancock and Fenno Sts. in Wollaston include:

- Repairing the surface of the double tennis courts, the benches and the chain link fence. Use of colored asphalt sealer on the court surface resulted in the first two-color tennis courts in the city.
- Repairs to the double basketball court, including two-tone jump circles and extension of the playing surface four feet beyond each backboard. Chain link fence was installed at the rear of the court to catch loose basketballs.

- Construction of an attractive rustic-type fence made of old utility poles cut off and sunk into the ground to prevent autos from driving and parking on the asphalt surface. Chain link fence, the department reasoned, would attract vandals.
- Repairs to the faded shuffleboard courts and repainting the lines and number.

Robert Bolster Appointed Director Human Services At Dedham Jail

Sheriff Clifford H. Marshall announces the appointment of Robert W. Bolster of Wollaston as Director of Human Services at the Norfolk County House of Correction and Jail in Dedham.

Bolster has a B.A. degree from the University of Idaho in psychology and a Masters Ed. in counselling from State College, Boston. He is a certified guidance and adjustment counselor and is also a certified teacher in Massachusetts as well as being certified to administer and interpret psychological testing materials.

In addition he has been a member of the Massachusetts Parole Board since 1972, and previously had been with the Department of Youth Services for eight years.

Sheriff Marshall said, "With the addition of Mr. Bolster to the staff of the Norfolk County Sheriff's Department, I believe we can provide the professionalism in the human services and rehabilitation programs necessary in the House of Correction and jail."

Bolster, a veteran of the Korean War, is married to the former Dorothy A. Brisenden and is the father of five children. The family lives at 140 Brook St.

LaRaia Checking Validity Of Graham's Appointment

The LaRaia administration has indicated that it is looking into the validity of former Mayor Walter J. Hannon's 11th hour appointment of John R. Graham as city planning director at a salary of $22,500.

Graham, outgoing director of Quincy Heritage, was named by Hannon to succeed Geoffrey Davidson on Dec. 31, less than five days before Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia was inaugurated to succeed Hannon.

"It is possible," said a spokesman for Mayor LaRaia, "that Mr. Davidson's resignation came in too late."

Davidson left the city payroll in September and took a job with Norfolk County. But he retained his city post until the county job was made permanent late in December. Hannon said on Dec. 31 that Davidson resigned "a few days ago."

At the time of the Graham appointment, Hannon said: "Mr. LaRaia's goal is progress for Quincy. He needs people to help him. I think I have provided him with such a person. I look upon this as a good appointment for Mr. LaRaia, not for myself."

LaRaia disagreed.

He said he had already notified Graham that he would not be retained as Quincy Heritage director in his administration. He questioned his qualifications to work in city planning.

"I find myself having officially released him from one position and finding him in another," said LaRaia. "I would hate to think my administration would be saddled with an appointee like that."

Under state law, a city planning director can be removed by the Mayor only with the approval of the City Council and only "for cause."

"Or the Mayor can knock the job out of the budget," suggested Hannon.

Mayor LaRaia indicated he was thinking about that, too.

Quincy Trackmen In Better Start

Quincy's track team has had four meets and already, under new coach Joe Catalano, the Presidents are assured of a better record than that of a year ago.

"I feel we have a lot of talent and am optimistic," Catalano said. "We have some depth, which the team lacked last year and my main goal is to be very competitive. If the boys will give 100 percent at all times, and I am sure they will, I think we can win our share of meets in the Suburban League, which I feel is the strongest in the state."

Catalano is banking on Co-Capt. Kevin O'Brien in the 1000-yard run and Bob Thorne in the two-mile. Thorne finished second this fall in Division One of the Eastern Mass. cross-country championships.

Sophomore John Saville, the top cross country runner, is expected to score a lot of points in the mile.

Harry Williams should be strong in the 300 and Paul Ladas in the 600.

Catalano also expects Leo Barron to do well in the high jump.

Adding depth to the squad are Eugene Allen, John Foley, Dave Raftery and Pat Vallier in the 1000, Steve Kane, Mike Francione and Dennis McCarthy in the 600, Eronus Simkus in the 300, Bill Dempsey, Peter Jabally and John Bowen in the high hurdles, Ed Campbell, Lou Fishman, Jon Golub, Bob Williams and Kurt Saltmarsh in the dash, Fran Yee in the two-mile and Bob Varraso and Bill Popsie in the shot put.

In the loss to Brockton Saville won the mile, O'Brien won the 1000 and Barron took the high jump.

Quincy won all but three events against Cambridge Latin. The winners were O'Brien in the mile, Saville in the 1000, Ladas in the 600, Williams in the 300, Dempsey in the high hurdles, Thorne in the 2-mile and Barron in the high jump. The relay team of Ladas, Saville, Thorne and O'Brien also won.

Last winter's team had only a 1-8 record but Quincy was 2-2 after its first four meets. Following a 64-22 loss to Brockton in which several Quincy performers were missing, Quincy rebounded to bomb Cambridge Latin, 67-19. Next game a 48½-37½ win over Brookline and a 62-24 loss to unbeaten Weymouth South.

Tuesday the Presidents ran against Waltham and their next meet will be on Saturday, the 17th at 10 a.m. against Newton North. Both meets are at Newton North, where all Suburban League meets are held.

Quincy defeated Brookline as Thorne turned in his best time in the two-mile, 10:09. Other winners were O'Brien in the 1000, Saville in the mile, Dempsey in the high hurdles, Barron in the high jump and Varraso in the shot put. Barron also placed second to Dempsey in the hurdles.

In its latest outing Quincy was bombed by undefeated Weymouth South as Saville in the mile, O'Brien in the 1000 and Barron in the high jump all remained undefeated and Thorne won the two-mile. As was the case in the opening loss to Brockton, several of the Quincy performers were missing.

North Matmen Seek 4th Win

A year ago North Quincy's first wrestling team in more than 30 years won only one match.

This year Coach Art Fallon's team is showing the fruits of last year's efforts and after five matches had a 3-3 record after dropping a one-point decision last Friday to Milton, ending a three-match winning streak.

Fallon has a young team with only two seniors, Co-Captain Mike Nee and Dan Foley. Juniors are Co-Capt. Karl Knudsen, Brian Donaghue, Richard Schiarizzi, John Minukas, Art Dorgan, Nathan Belofsky, Frederic Smith, Steve Ketches, Mike McGurl and Ed Hanrahan. All are lettermen with the exception of Foley, Schiarizzi and Smith.

Rounding out the squad are sophomores Ed Beck, Charles Matthews, Butch Montoya, Wayne Smith, Ed Evenson, John McKillop, Paul Ahern and Peter Prasinos.

North dropped its first match to Norwood, 42-24, with Beck, Schiarizzi, Hanrahan, Nee and Knudsen winning their bouts.

The Raiders came back to romp over Randolph, 51-18, with Beck Donaghue, Dorgan, Montoya, Steve Ketches, Mike McGurl, Hanrahan, Nee and Knudsen winning.

North next topped Weymouth North, 45-24, in its first Suburban League match, with Beck, Montoya, Smith, Evenson, Nee and Knudsen winning by pins and Donaghue and Hanrahan by decisions.

In a 29-13 win over Plymouth-Carver, Beck (100 pounds) gained a major decision, Donaghue (108) won by decision, Schiarizzi (114) drew, Dorgan (121) won by decision, Smith (138) won by decision, McGurl (157) won by decision, Hanrahan (169) won by decision, Nee (182) won by decision and Knudsen [heavyweight] pinned his opponent. Montoya (127) lost on a pin and Ketches (147) also was pinned.

North then dropped a 32-27 league decision to Newton North in which Beck won an easy decision, Donaghue pinned his opponent, Schiarizzi drew, Montoya won by a pin, Nee won by decision and Knudsen won by a pin.

In last week's 32-31 loss to Milton, Schiarizzi, Montoya, Nee and Knudsen won by pins and Beck and Ketches won decisions.

"This is only our second year of wrestling and I am pleased with our progress," Fallon said. "Our junior high program is helping a lot by teaching the boys some basic wrestling skills and building interest in the sport."

The Raiders' junior varsity has also been doing well with a 3-1 record.

North will wrestle at Stoughton Friday at 6:30 and next Tuesday will be at Durfee at 3 p.m.

● Girl's Basketball

First Ladies To Be Tested At Brockton

By TOM SULLIVAN

Coach Barbara Webster has her Quincy High girls' basketball team playing well as the First Ladies strive for the Suburban League championship and a berth in the state tournament.

After an opening day 51-42 non-league loss to Malden, the Quincy girls rolled to four straight league wins, 44-41 over Waltham, 51-45 over Weymouth North, 56-44 over North Quincy and 47-36 over Weymouth South, before being edged by Brookline, 38-36, last Friday.

Friday the First Ladies play at unbeaten Brockton, which looms as the league favorite, and next Tuesday will play at Newton North.

"So far we have done very well," miss Webster said. "All of the girls except two played last year so they are quite used to each other and nothing can beat experience."

The veterans are seniors Cindy Tozzi, Tricia Kussman, Terry Greenleaf, Rosie Maloney, Kelly Sparks and Fran Giovannucci and juniors Lois Malvesti and Carol Lynch. Only newcomers are juniors Darcey Faggiano and Enid Braveman.

"Kelly Sparks has improved a great deal and has been our best scorer and rebounder," Barbara said. "Each of the girls is capable of scoring and we usually have three in double figures. Tricia Kussman's one of the quickest guards in the league and she and Cindy Tozzi complement each other very well. Our bench is able to come in and take over for the starters if we should run into foul trouble.

"The games so far have been very physical, but we are well able to hold our own under the boards and have controlled the boards quite well.

"The junior varsity is made up mostly of sophomores and still have a long way to go. I try to play everybody in each game so they will get the experience of playing. They are trying all the time and will win their share of games."

In the varsity's first win over Waltham, Sparks had 18 points and Malvesti 12, while Tozzi and Kussman sparked the defense and Malvesti and Lynch controlled the boards.

Against Weymouth North Sparks had 19 points and Malvesti 15 and Kussman and Tozzi were hailed for their ball handling.

In the win over North Quincy, Sparks scored 16, Malvesti 15 and Tozzi 11.

Against Weymouth South, Sparks again was the leader with 16, Malvesti had 13 and Tozzi 11.

In the first loss Malvesti topped the scorers with 18 points.

Although the North Quincy girls are 0-4, Coach Sandra Colletti is pleased with the Raiderettes' performances. They were in every game until last Friday when unbeaten Brockton's powerhouse rolled, 68-35.

Previously North had bowed to Newton by three points and Waltham by four before losing to North Quincy.

"We have hopes of improving on last year's 4-12 record and we have several veterans," Miss Colletti said.

Tri-Captains Sherrill Bevans, Elaine Shea and Nancy Willard lead the returnees who also include Ruth Widman, a talented junior guard; Saralee Cobban, Jackie Little and Jeanne McCarthy. Linda Henry and Marallen Meehan are up from last year's jayvees.

The addition of Joyce Flynn, Ruth Salomaa, Karen Stevens and Marjorie Dowe give the Raiderettes more depth than a year ago.

The junior varsity, coached by Brian Tilley, also hopes to improve on last year's 7-9 mark.

Kathy Collins starts at center with Antonette Alibrandi, Linda Ayles and Donna Shaw alternating at forward. Eileen O'Sullivan, Julianne Drain and Lisa Sullivan alternate as the starting guards.

Others are Marie Duggan, Claire Mason, Janet Monte, Rory Nolan, Elizabeth Gori, Mary Gori, Jeanne LaCamera, Joanne Leone, Sibhan Nolan and Michelle Callahan.

"Girls basketball throughout the city and in the league is progressing so rapidly it is hard to believe," Miss Colletti said.

Miss Webster appealed for the fans to support the girls' teams. "If they would just take the time to stop by and see the teams play, they would be quite surprised and well entertained. We really need support," she said.

'Barnaby Jones' 'Cannon' 'Waltons' Hit By Fire

As you read this, the NBC peacock will be "biting the dust," so to speak. The network has decided to retire the faithful bird that has represented them since 1945 in favor of a new abstract symbol. NBC President, HERBERT SCHLOSSER, says, "We think it will give us a modern look of distinction and quality." RIP TORN will star as Walt Whitman in "Song of Myself," a one-hour historical drama based on the life of America's great epic poet, for CBS on March 9. To welcome "Lassie" to its early evening line-up, TV 38 will present a one-hour special, "To Lassie With Love" at 5 p.m. on Monday, Jan. 12. Narrated in part by RODDY McDOWELL, the special will include film clips highlighting Lassie and her different masters since the show began on television in 1954. Health enthusiast, GLORIA SWANSON, will discuss her views on food selection and preparation with SHARON KING on "Woman 75" on Jan. 14. Christmas wasn't very merry for BUDDY EBSEN and WILLIAM CONRAD this year. In the early hours of Dec. 25, a $3 million blaze destroyed the sets they use to film their respective shows, "Barnaby Jones" and "Cannon." No injuries were reported, however, the fire proved to be extensive due to a lack of sprinkler systems. The sound stages had been built before such methods of fire prevention were required by building codes. WALTER CRONKITE is narrating "A Lincoln Portrait" this week for the San Antonio Symphony. Cronkite recently narrated the same piece, which is based on the writings of Lincoln, for the New York Philharmonic. SHIRLEY MacLAINE, three-time Oscar winner and the star of last year's Emmy-winning special, "If My Friends Could See Me Now," will star in "Gypsy In My Soul" for CBS late in January. LUCILLE BALL will be Shirley's guest, and the special will celebrate the theatrical life. GEORGE C. WALLACE, Governor of Alabama, will be the guest Sunday, Jan. 11, on "Face The Nation." To be seen on Channel 7 at 11:30, the interview will originate live from Washington, D.C. "The Waltons" will have to separate later this month when their hours burn down in a special two-hour episode. ABC has dropped the "Wide World" umbrella title from its latenight entertainment, and it has also shelved plans for a ROWAN AND MARTIN series. The network is adding reruns of "The Rookies" to its latenight offerings. KATE SMITH, the Stanley Cup-winning Flyers' good luck charm, will be honored at the NHL's 29th annual All-Star dinner in Philadelphia. The Monty Python troupe won a lot of sympathy, but ABC won the battle. As previously reported here, the English comedians were seeking an injunction that would stop ABC from airing a 90-minute special about them, claiming that the network was ruining their comedy by cutting it up. However, the court decided in favor of ABC and the show was aired last week. You may have noticed, though, that there was a disclaimer at the start of the program stating that the contents were "edited by ABC for television," the current confusion, and worry on the part of the Python group, involves the legal aspects of who owns which rights. ABC still has rerun rights to two latenight shows plus an option for more episodes. The Pythons contend that they will continue to fight.

THE DOOR IS OPEN . . .

COME IN

Mr. Leland Thompson is pleased to announce the publication of a new booklet written by a Quincy resident entitled "THE DOOR IS OPEN...COME IN". This book explains how to be at the right place at the right time so that all connections made for future harmony can be developed now. This is the plan that Moses used thousands of years ago that all people can make use of for their step to harmony. Moses had something useful to say but not all people are aware of the full message. The same plan to organize a nation can organize a family. Enclose a 20 cent stamp and mail to Booklet, 1072 Sea St., Quincy, Ma. 02169, for your copy.

The offices that John Adams and his descendants held paralleled the history of the nation. Noteworthy among the Adams professions were two U.S. Presidents, a vice-president, a delegate to two continental Congresses, a Secretary of State, several ambassador negotiators of major treaties, members of the U.S. House of Representatives, a member of the Massachusetts legislature, Civil War officers, financiers and historians.

The historic personalities the Adams family members came in contact with will also be central to the series, including Benjamin Franklin, John Hancock, Thomas Jefferson, Alexander Hamilton, Andrew Jackson, Henry Clay and Abraham Lincoln.

Crusaders Seek 7th Straight Win

The undefeated Eastern Nazarene College basketball team, off to its best start in years, returns to action tonight [Thursday] after the holiday layoff when it plays at St. Francis College.

The Crusaders will meet St. Francis in a return game at ENC's Wollaston gym next Tuesday at 8 p.m.

When the Crusaders resumes play they will have an official 4-0 record plus two exhibition wins at Boston Garden.

Jim Smith, in his sixth year as the Crusaders' coach, started the season with a record of 110 wins and 48 losses and this year hopes to improve on last year's 17-12 record.

"We have a fine nucleus of veterans with six lettermen and have some fine looking freshmen," Smith said.

The lettermen are Co-Captains Gordie Wetmore [6-4] from Columbus, Ohio and Mike Cox [6-1] from Flint Michigan; Steve Miller, 5-7 sophomore from North Quincy; Dave Rouse, 5-9, from Wakefield; Mike Barefoot, brilliant 6-3 sophomore from Chesapeake, Va., and Jim Flinner, 6-3 soph from Pittsburg.

Miller, former North Quincy captain, was one of the more pleasant surprises a year ago as he sparkled as a freshman and was the team's 'quarterback'. He has been ineligible but is expected back when the schedule resumes Jan. 8.

One of the top newcomers is junior Kevin Gibson, who was outstanding for Quincy Junior College the last two years and who made the Jr. College All-American team last year. His number was recently retired. He is a 6-3 scorer and rebounder from Dorchester.

"Gibson has really impressed me," Smith said. "I can see why he was so outstanding at Quincy Junior College."

Other Crusaders are Senior Ken Harrison [6-0] from Pasadena, Calif., a transfer student; and freshmen Darryl Edmonds [6-5] from Brooklyn; Rick Ward [5-8] from Rockville, Md.; Jerry Perera [6-3] from Pasadena, Calif.; Peter Ribeiro [5-11] from New Bedford; Barry Jones [6-4] from Orwingsburg, Pa., and Perry Harmon [6-1] from Rockville, Md.

"One of our most pleasant surprises has been the play of Ribeiro," Smith said. "He runs the offense and is a tremendous player for a freshman. I think we have more quickness this season and have fairly good height. We are aiming for several tournaments, as we are members of the NCAA, ECAC, Naismith Conference and NCCAA."

Barefoot, who averaged 10.9 points a game last year, has been the Crusaders' leading scorer, while several of the other players have scored well.

In their last game before the holiday break, the Crusaders raced over Barrington College, 94-67, as Cox scored 24 points, Gibson and Barefoot 17 each and Ribeiro and Wetmore 14 apiece.

The team is given a good deal of inspiration from its cheerleaders, Capt. Donna Chappell, Colleen Bells, Holly Derbyshire, Marcia Perry, Amber Roberts and Kristi Sorensen.

The ENC women's team, coached by Nancy Detwiler, opened its season by losing to Barrington, 55-45, after leading at the half, 26-20.

Eva Eastman scored 18 points and Jean Macchi, former Quincy High star, had 11. The women, like the men, are idle until Jan. 8 when they will play at Gordon College.

All home games for both teams are played at the beautiful Lahue Physical Education Center on the Wollaston campus.

Quincy Post Office Plays Detective To Deliver Package

It took a while and a little detective work but the Quincy Post Office finally delivered to Lettie and Frankie Kimball-Horan their Christmas package from home.

It arrived in the Quincy Post Office shortly before the holiday addressed to Lettie and Frankie in Apartment 4, Quincy, Mass. 02169, from Ma and Pa Kimball in Madison, Wis.

Unfortunately, there was no street address.

A check of the telephone book produced six Horans in Quincy. Calls to three of them brought negative results. The other three numbers had been discontinued.

Route carriers were asked about the discontinued Horans. Two were negative but Carrier Paul Morrisette recalled a Horan that had been on his route. The owner of the place where they lived thought they had moved to Sharon.

Phone calls to all the Horans in Sharon (both of them) failed to turn up Lettie and Frankie but they did the next best thing. One of them turned out to be Frankie's sister-in-law.

Seems Lettie and Frankie had just moved to Quincy from New Orleans and the folks back home had neglected to give the complete new address on the package. Did she know it? Of course. It was on Broadway in Quincy Point.

The package was delivered — a bit late but better than not at all.

This is where New England's nuclear age began in November, 1960.

Yankee Rowe: 15 years of nuclear service and still going strong.

Few people at the Yankee Atomic Electric Plant in Rowe, Massachusetts on that autumn day in 1960 could have predicted the amazing performance record this pioneer nuclear plant has achieved over the past 15 years.

Today, it has proved conclusively that a nuclear power plant — built and operated under the most stringent environmental and safety standards and controls — can play an important and enduring role in meeting New England's energy needs. The record speaks for itself.

As efficient as it is economical.

Built at a cost of $43.7 million — 25% below original estimates — Yankee Atomic has proved a model of efficiency and consistency.

It is now generating electricity at less than half the cost of oil-fired plants.

Since it first went into operation, Yankee Atomic has won world renown for its consistent efficiency and productivity.

The plant has now produced over 16 billion kilowatt-hours of electricity, enough to supply the needs of a city the size of Worcester for over 15 years.

It is even more significant that the Yankee reactor has been available for operation 82% of the time, with most of the remaining time going into refueling or routine maintenance.

The more you know about nuclear power, the more sense it makes.

Yankee Rowe is just one of six nuclear plants now operating in New England. Together, they supply over 25% of our region's electrical needs and they made a crucial difference in our ability to provide reliable power during the energy crisis. All things considered, they provide the most economical, safe, and environmentally sensible solutions to our energy problems — both now and in the future.

Double Sessions Would Bring Many Problems

LaRaia Moves To Keep NQHS Open

By TOM HENSHAW

The hour of decision on North Quincy High School was due to arrive Wednesday night with Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia still holding firm against gathering momentum to shut down the nearly 50-year-old school.

School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon planned to recommend to a meeting of the School Committee the closing of North Quincy High during renovation and construction and transfer of its students to Quincy High where they would go on double sessions.

"We may have to sit on this for a week while we study alternatives," said LaRaia, who is chairman of the School Committee by virtue of being mayor.

"I am definitely against closing the school. I think we may be able to prevent this by changing the design to a free standing addition. I don't think this has been fully explored.

"I am more convinced now than ever that the plans can be changed. I'm going to pursue this strongly."

None of the members of the School Committee contacted by The Quincy Sun in a pre-meeting survey were in favor of the double session plan but time was running out on alternatives.

"I've seen four plans," said

Committee Vice Chairman John J. Sullivan, "and none of them are wholly palatable to me. I don't know if one of them is less painful than the other or vice versa.

"I wish we could find some way to get a handle on it. No matter which way we go we're going to get flak from somebody. I doubt very much that we can reach a decision on it Wednesday night."

"I don't like the idea of double sessions," said Frank Anselmo, dean of the School Committee. "We may be able to come up with some modification or some compromise. My judgement hasn't reached the stage of making a decision.

"We don't have to vote on it Wednesday night. We could table it so that we could double check. I'd hate to have to vote on it Wednesday night."

"From what I can see the double session plan is the best of the four options that were offered to us," said member Francis McCauley. "The question is how do you handle the double sessions.

"I understand there are three plans being offered and I wouldn't want to comment on them until I study them.

"From all the information I have had and all the reports I have seen, closing the building is the best thing from the point of view of student safety, speed of construction and savings in money.

"It is strongly possible that

Agatha Deschenes Named City Purchasing Agent

Mrs. Agatha Deschenes, who went to work as a clerk typist in the City Purchasing Department in 1961, has been named to the $15,000 a year post of purchasing agent.

She replaces Richard Buckley, who was released from the job last Friday. She is believed to be the first woman named to the post.

Mrs. Deschenes, a 1933 graduate of Quincy High School and a graduate of Felt & Tarrant Comptometer School, has been principal clerk in the department and has acted as purchasing agent in Buckley's absence.

She became principal clerk in 1972, a job equivalent to that of assistant purchasing agent, including supervision of an office staff of five people.

She lives at 61 Rogers St., West Quincy.

Prior to joining the Purchasing Department, Mrs. Deschenes worked for the Salada Tea Co. and the U.S. Internal Revenue Service.

She and her husband, Rene, who retired three years ago as a carpenter supervisor at the General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard, have four children.

Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia named Police Lt. Corady Solimini, 58, a worker in his mayoralty campaign, to the post of inspector of divisions in the Police Department—and immediately stood up to fend off the flak.

Solimini, who lives at 384 Franklin St., South Quincy, succeeds Capt. Paul Nestor in the job that is considered to be second in command to Police Chief Francis X. Finn.

"No one is more sensitive to a charge of political appointments than I," said LaRaia Tuesday. "The appointment of someone for strictly political reasons is the last thing that I would do."

"It is true that Lt. Solimini was active in my campaign. But he is an able man and ability ranks No. 1 in my appointments, not commitments."

LaRaia said there is no truth to rumors that Solimini is related to him.

LaRaia said that he discussed the appointment with Chief Finn and that the Chief opposed it.

Chief Finn said he plans to protest the appointment to LaRaia on grounds "the organization of the police department is the responsibility of the chief."

"Chief Finn's biggest objection was that Lt. Solimini would be jumped over several captains for the job. I thought that the Chief's objection was weak.

"Not long ago, Lt. Solimini passed the civil service test for captain. The fact that he was not chosen is immaterial. He meets the qualifications. Whether or not he has the title is a secondary matter.

"The fact that the Chief and his top assistant [Nestor] campaigned for my opponent in the election had nothing to do with it. I'm willing to overlook political allegiances in the police station in the interest of doing an effective job."

LaRaia said Solimini will act as liaison man between the Mayor's office and the police station as well as fill the post of inspector of divisions.

He said he hopes Solimini will be able to assist him in cutting expenses in the Police Department and in deploying more foot patrolmen in the streets as deterrents to crime.

"Lt. Solimini understands my objectives," said LaRaia. "It might be difficult for others to carry them out."

Since the post of inspector of divisions is only one of several functions held by Capt. Nestor, he said, the captain will retain his other duties.

3 - Alarm Wollaston Blaze Under Investigation

Investigation is underway into the cause of a three-alarm fire that destroyed a three-story wooden frame building containing the Cottage Paint Store at the corner of Beach and Hancock Sts., Wollaston, last Friday night.

The probe is being conducted by the State Fire Marshal's office and the Quincy Fire Prevention Bureau.

The fire started shortly after 8 p.m. in the basement of the paint store and was fought in sub-freezing temperatures in a brisk wind that froze the spray from hoses as it hit the street.

Seven firefighters were injured, none seriously.

The owner of the building was listed as Dominick Tortorella and the proprietor of the paint store was identified as John D. Smith.

The loss in dollars was not estimated.

City's Smallest Union Volunteers Pay Raise Moratorium !!

The smallest union of city employees has offered in a letter to Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia to accept a moratorium on pay raises for at least a year.

"It's a non-partisan move to do what we can to help the economy of the city in a small way," said John Schmuck, president of the Quincy Public Safety Association which has nine members, most of them in the Fire Alarm Division of the Fire Department.

"We've had long discussions about this. We've heard the present city administration talk about layoffs. We are not much affected because we are on civil service but we'd like to avoid layoffs if possible.

"We see long lines of people at the unemployment office and it's not a pleasant thing to see our friends and neighbors there. They are the taxpayers of Quincy, the people who pay our salaries."

Schmuck said part of the impetus for the moratorium offer came from an editorial in last week's Quincy Sun which urged citizens of Quincy to cooperate with Mayor LaRaia to move the city ahead.

Code Enforcement Inspectors

Do A Lot More Than Condemn Buildings

(Fifth in a series of articles)

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

Quincy's team of code enforcement officials - charged with the careful inspection of the city's 30,000 dwelling units - do more than merely okay or condemn buildings.

They initiate action on tenant complaints, provide legal advice, conduct lead-paint tests on apartment furniture and walls, and at times, feel they are acting like diplomats.

Leonard Purpora, senior code enforcement inspector explains:

"For instance, say someone has just gotten a rent increase, you go into the dwelling and find a hole in the wall. Did the person punch the hole in the wall? Under law, the landlord or property owner is responsible to make repairs. But when you know he isn't responsible... it gets touchy."

The code enforcement division operates with a staff of four: Purpora, Bertrand Lapointe and Joe McGee - all code enforcement inspectors, and William Sullivan, lead paint inspector. Win Wade, director of environmental services also provides assistance.

The code includes 12 regulations detailing the minimum services an owner must provide his tenant: specific kitchen and bath facilities, water supply, heat, hot water, lighting and electrical facilities, proper ventilation, provision for garbage and rubbish storage and disposal, sewage disposal, certain number of exits from the dwelling, minimum standard of space per occupant, and extermination of any rodents or insects in common areas but in a dwelling only if his improper maintenance created the infestation.

According to the code, the owner must also install and maintain the foundation, floors, walls, windows, doors, ceilings, staircases, roofs, porches and chimneys, keeping these and other structural elements "rodent-proof, watertight, weather-tight, and free from chronic dampness, in good repair and in every way fit for the use intended."

City ordinance dictates all vacated dwelling units, apartments, or tenements must meet these required standards receiving Health Department certification before any public utility service can be resumed for an incoming tenant.

Each day, Massachusetts Electric Company notifies the code enforcement division of any intended turnover in tenant electrical service. All inspections are then made within 12 to 24 hours.

Purpora reports the division receives an average of 15 notifications per day through the 28th of each month. But during those few last days of each month when tenants traditionally and most conveniently move out of a dwelling - the number of turnover notifications jumps to an average of 75 per day. And the yearly number of inspections has averaged near 3200 over the past three years, according to Wade.

Like the city's sanitation division (the subject of next week's sixth and final series article), the code enforcement division does not rate or rank the establishment examined. Purpora flatly stated:

"The dwellings or buildings either meet the standards or they don't."

But officials say the tight and gloomy economic climate has complicated their inspection duties. Purpora said:

"Normal aging of a structure - the gutters rotting for instance - will bring about code violations. And with the economic squeeze on, owners may neglect to do painting and putting or there may be steps which need treads. It gets a little complicated with this economic picture. But with a high percentage of the people in Quincy, one of their priorities is their residence. Sometimes all they need is a reminder."

When inspectors are not examining structures, they are fielding and solving consumer complaints. Responding to all callers, the identified as well as the anonymous, the investigators try to initiate remedies to the caller's problem.

"We follow through on all calls," said Wade. "We don't ignore any complaint."

Those complaints can range from falling plaster to unsightly holes in walls, to dripping showers and leaky roofs.

"When a tenant gets a rent increase and he encounters a problem, they call us immediately."

"A rent increase has a way of making people more observant," he quipped.

And sometimes the inspectors also act as legal counsel. Wade said:

"A lot of tenants want to know their legal rights. We give an awful lot of free legal advice."

In the course of their inspections, the code enforcement officers also spotcheck painted furniture, cabinets, walls or woodwork, checking for evidence of lead paint.

If they note unsafe levels of lead in the paint, inspectors report back to Sullivan who then conducts a thorough, three-to-five hour examination at the dwelling.

Although the lead paint law became effective July 1, 1972, the Quincy Health Department began lead-paint inspections in October 1971. Quincy Health Commissioner Dr. Alfred V. Mahoney, who recently retired from his post to devote full-time to the private practice of medicine, said:

"We were the first city in the state, outside of Boston, to start the lead paint tests. We started nine months before the law became effective and we've been working on it ever since."

During the past three years, the division has conducted a total of 5,475 lead paint tests with 189 showing positive indications of lead paint.

Health Department records show inspectors tested 15 Quincy elementary schools during 1971 with 14 showing presence of lead paint. Wade said within eight weeks of the examination, all objects were stripped of all evidence of lead paint.

Although the division has never taken a party to court on a lead paint violation, the Division has brought cases to a hearing before the clerk of courts.

"The courts are concerned with getting the remedial work done," said Mahoney. Mahoney says many landlords strip the lead-paint wood by themselves, saving on repair costs. He said:

"The landlords and owners have been very, very good. We give them all a certain amount of time to make the repairs and they co-operate very well with us."

we will have to have a special meeting later in the week to deal with the options we have in double sessions."

"I'm still going over it in my mind," said Mrs. Patricia Toland, a newcomer to the School Committee. "None of the proposals are going to make everyone happy. But double sessions seem to have less problems than some of the others."

"I know a lot of people are against double sessions and that has to be considered, too."

"Double sessions are the worst thing that could happen to a community," said member and former Vice Chairman Charles Sweeney. "But we're just going to have to live with it."

"We have to close the school. There is no possible way to keep it open during construction and renovation."

"And every minute we delay is going to cost us more money. We should be able to decide Wednesday night. I will push for a vote. Any vote just makes things more difficult."

Dr. Creodon recommended that North Quincy High School be closed, effective with the start of the 1976-77 school year, and double sessions instituted as the safest, less costly and educationally most advantaged of four options.

The other options were to close the school without going to double sessions, or keep the school open either with or without double sessions. Dr. Creodon said they did not measure up in safety, cost or educational advantages.

Opening the high school during construction and renovation was frowned upon by Fire Chief Edward F. Barry, City Building Inspector Allan F. MacDonald and State Building Inspector Joseph A. DiCicco in a joint letter to the School Committee.

"Buildings in the course of their construction are inherently more hazardous ... than when the building is in a completed state. Buildings undergoing alterations also possess hazards that are severe," said the letter. They recommended that "the existing building should not be occupied during the construction of the new building and when this new building is completed it should not be occupied during the remodeling of the existing one."

If the School Committee accepts the plan to close North Quincy High and institute double sessions, then it will be faced with three more options for putting the plan in effect.

As explained by Dr. Creodon, they are:

● The traditional idea of double sessions with one group attending school in the morning and the other group attending in the afternoon. The times would be reversed at mid-year.

"Obviously," said Dr. Creodon, "the academic program would be severely curtailed. Most electives would have to go. The extra curricular and athletic programs would be seriously affected."

● The "long day" concept, with the classes of both high schools housed together in the style of the college "open campus."

"The youngsters would come to class and then go home," explained Dr. Creodon. "There would be no custodial care, no study periods, no home rooms. School would run from 7 or 7:30 a.m. to 5 or 6 p.m."

"This option would require extensive busing all day long and would be extremely disruptive to the business center of the city with youngsters coming and going all the time."

"The youngsters would lose their identity with their school. They wouldn't be going to Quincy or North Quincy High School. They would just be going to a high school."

"We would have to work out an accommodation for the extra curricular and athletic programs. They would have to be scheduled and youngsters would have to choose between, say, basketball and physics if they came at the same time."

● The "three day week," with students from one high school attending Monday, Wednesday and Friday and those from the other high school attending Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. The following week they would change.

Dr. Creodon feels that this is the best plan, but for one overwhelming disadvantage -- "it would be an offense to the Jewish community to require them to go to school on Saturday."

"The points that I am going to make to the School Committee," said Dr. Creodon, "are these:

"It is too late now to do anything but close North Quincy High School and go on double sessions. The refusal to heed recommendations over the past five years has led us to this sorry situation."

"We should try to come up with a proposal that is harmful to the least number of young people over the shortest period of time."

Today's Women

THE VISIBLE WOMAN

Eleanor Roosevelt, a lady of great spirit

By JANET LOWE
Capley News Service

"Mrs. Roosevelt is the greatest woman alive and if she came into this room, we all ought to get down on our knees before her." Alexander Woolcott spoke those words about a woman who received no formal education; a woman from a family so wealthy a lady needn't do much of anything; a woman frequently accused of meddling where she didn't belong.

Today, when so many women are struggling with personal and social change, it's encouraging to look at the life of someone who went through a similar intellectual and emotional evolution. The trek from a lonely girl and a timid bride to first lady of the United States, and eventually its delegate to the United Nations, was a rugged road for Eleanor Roosevelt.

She'd always been sensitive to the plight of the less fortunate, but in 1920 when women struggled for the right to vote, Mrs. Roosevelt had to think before choosing sides. Then, in 1921 Franklin Roosevelt was stricken with polio. Though she knew he'd always be crippled, his wife believed he could live a full life. In hopes of restoring his interest in politics, Eleanor joined the League of Women Voters. There she met female political activists, labor organizers and educators who devoted their energy to social change.

Her plan to inspire FDR's recovery was successful. But the effect on Eleanor herself was even deeper. Her concern for world problems had been awakened, and once the seed of awareness had burst forth, it grew and blossomed and bore fruit.

She and several friends started a nonprofit furniture factory where unemployed young men of Hyde Park were trained to make reproductions of Early American furniture. They purchased the Toddhunter School in New York where three days a week, Eleanor taught American history, literature and civics.

When her husband was elected governor of New York, Mrs. Roosevelt's involvement in women's and children's welfare expanded. Then came the Depression, and to assist her husband, Eleanor began acting as his proxy at many public events. Because of the difficulty he had in getting about, she often served as his eyes and ears on the outside world.

When the Roosevelts moved to the White House, she held a press conference for female journalists only. She felt this might give women reporters greater job security, since they were usually first when budgets got tight. She entertained a constant stream of dignitaries and laced the guest lists with unknown writers, artists and students. When criticized, she explained, "I thought it would be interesting for them."

During the Depression and World War II, Eleanor Roosevelt gave unbelievable energy to helping people. She lectured, wrote, telephoned public officials to support Social Security legislation, descended into coal mines, picnicked with children and toured the globe, always lobbying for greater understanding and tolerance among the people of the world.

After FDR died, Mrs. Roosevelt continued for another 17 years to work for the well-being of mankind. She lived in a modest New York apartment and either drove her own car or rode the subway to carry out her many chores, whether it be interviewing delinquent boys or interviewing John F. Kennedy.

Just a year before her death, she was appointed by President Kennedy to chair his Commission on the Status of Women.

When I hear criticism of Betty Ford's forthright statements, I remember Eleanor Roosevelt and chuckle. Perhaps that unquenchable spirit occasionally strolls the White House halls, offering her opinion. "I never can understand why so many people are afraid to live their own lives as they themselves think is right."

And whenever I become discouraged, a small voice from somewhere quotes that same admirable woman, "Courage is more exhilarating than fear and in the long run is easier."

Lady Baltimore - A Walnut Treat

The Lady Baltimore Cake has been a dessert showpiece for years. Three tender white cake layers are put together with a filling of raisins, dates and crunchy California walnuts. Perfect for parties, today's contemporary cake version is made with speedy cake and frosting mixes that still give you as elegant a cake as if you'd started from scratch. Developed in the Diamond Walnut Kitchen, this Speedy Lady Baltimore Cake variation is easy to assemble when you use convenient mixes plus California walnuts that come already shelled and nutcracker fresh in clear bags or vacuum cans. If you prefer to crack your own, you'll find plenty of walnuts in-the-shell in cellophane bags.

THE WONDERS OF VITAMIN E

Vitamin E has been hailed as a cure for everything from heart disease to sterility. But just what good it actually does in the human body is not yet known.

According to two scientists at the University of California in Berkeley, however, the vitamin may help increase the life span of cells. It was found that human lung cells grown in test tubes live much longer when treated with vitamin E than similar cells in untreated test tubes. Indeed, untreated lung cells usually begin dying after 50 test-tube generations, while the vitamin-E-enriched cells have gone beyond 120 generations in the laboratory.

Although the use of vitamin E is not forseen in slowing down the aging process in animals, the scientists believe that a practical use of the vitamin may be to shield cells from environmental stress. When they exposed the "in vitro" cells to high concentrations of oxygen, light, radiation, and other pollutants, 90 percent of the untreated cells stopped reproducing, but only 30 percent of the treated cells did.

Cultural Exhibits, Performances Planned For Quincy Center

"1976 - A New Year for Quincy Center" is the theme for a long series of cultural exhibits and performances.

The City's Downtown Development Office, Quincy Center Business and Professional Association and South Shore Cultural Alliance, are co-sponsoring the events to attract more people to the city's major business district, and to stimulate a wider interest in the arts on the South Shore.

Harvey L. Towvim, Downtown Development Director, said:

"We hope through this program, which will sponsor events in the retail sections of Quincy Center, to expand upon the lively atmosphere existing in the City's major business area. When more shoppers hear about what's going on in the downtown, they will want to come more often and rediscover the benefits in convenience and quality the area holds for them."

Twenty-one artists, who have previously had one-person shows in the Quincy Public Library Main Hall art gallery, will display one of their best works in the Art Review. MODERN KITCHEN IDEAS 1976

Location of 'work centers' assures efficiency in kitchen

Most homemakers agree that the kitchen is where they invariably spend a great deal of their time. And they want it to be as modern, pleasant and convenient as possible.

Every kitchen should be divided into three major "work centers," located in relation to the sequence of work to be performed there. The major "work centers" are the refrigerator center, the "Clean-Up" center and the cooking center.

Ideally, the sequence of work in the kitchen moves from storage and mixing, on to preparing, then to cooking and serving and finally back to the sink for clean up.

Planning comments

Refrigeration: Obviously built around the refrigerator, this center should be located near the door where the supplies enter and should have sufficient drawer, shelf, and counter space to handle the numerous kitchen utensils, foodstuffs and small appliances common in today's kitchen.

There should be a minimum of 15 inches of work counter at the opening side of the refrigerator — more, if possible.

More efficiency

Today's modern side-by-side refrigerator-freezer combinations can be used more efficiently with work space on both sides of the appliance, which also allows both its doors to open to their stops.

THIS MODERN "Clean-Up Center" features a dishwasher, waste disposer, trash compactor, and double-bowl sink.

Clean-up

"Clean-Up": This center handles chores performed in the kitchen during preparation of daily meals and the subsequent clean-up. It is best when it is located between the range and refrigerator, and should have at least 24 inches of counter space on each side of the sink — whether the sink is double- or single-bowl.

Additional space

In addition to the dishwasher, space should also be planned to dispose of trash, and to store detergent, cleaning equipment and utensils.

A low-cost, highly efficient food waste disposer is recommended to take care of most "wet" garbage, while a trash compactor is an effective means of handling solid non-grindable wastes such as milk containers, egg cartons, cereal boxes, bottles, and the like. Used together, a waste disposer and compactor can help provide a neater, cleaner kitchen.

Cooking: The best location for the cooking center is near the dining room and breakfast areas. A counter at each side of the range is important for efficiency as well as safety.

There should be a minimum of 12 inches of counter at the side away from another major center, and 24 inches minimum between the range and another major appliance or the sink.

Storing essentials

A large amount of storage also is required in this area for pots, pans, trays, utensils, dry foods, and condiments.

Most kitchens will contain one or more minor work centers, so plans should be well laid to make them work best.

Work centers

A desk, or planning and message center, is an essential in today's modern kitchen. It can be as large as needed, or as small as an 8x10-inch shelf with telephone and recipe racks. If space permits, a bulletin board and intercom can be included.

These guidelines should help you plan the best arrangement of work centers in your new kitchen to fit your needs with the space available.

bye-bye, kitchen blues—there's a world of new beauty waiting!

Time was when the kitchen was the last room in the house to be decorated . . . if it ever came to that. Usually it remained an island of blandness, with unassertive colors, a marred floor and dull accessories. All that has changed! With today's bright, colorful accessories, attractive yet functional storage space and low-cost, easy-keep basics such as carpet, paint and wallpaper, your kitchen can be a decorative showpiece.

To create a well-designed and, above all, happy-to-work-in kitchen, start by choosing a color scheme that "says you." Kitchens are perfect showplaces for a riot of zesty color and pattern because they're usually set off from the rest of the house or apartment. Especially cheerful combinations are green and yellow or yellow and blue with accents of orange or red; green and blue with accents of yellow or orange; or a patriotic red, white, and blue. You'll be able to find patterned wallpaper in these go-together colors and the latest trick, if you have two separate kitchen areas such as a pantry and kitchen or an L-shaped kitchen, is to use two different patterns with coordinated colors. You can also use wallpaper with paint or just paint in a variety of hues. An imaginative use of the latter is to paint the inside of the cupboards one color, say green, the outside a blue, the walls yellow and the ceiling blue. Or try accents of colorful paint in unexpected places like the beams on a ceiling or design a free-form abstract on one wall.

Perhaps the nicest news about today's kitchens lie underfoot. Thanks to advances in fiber technology, carpeting is finding its way into more and more kitchens. And the reasons make sense. Heading the list is the fact that carpets are just as easy to clean, if not more so, than linoleum or tiled floors. First you don't need to wax and polish every week. And, second, if you use carpets of a man-made "miracle" fiber, such as Herculon olefin fiber, you'll be able to clean up most spots and spills with just a sponge and the suds of a light detergent. Because of this fiber's low moisture absorbency, spills stay right on the surface where they can be easily whisked away. Even bacon grease will disappear with a household spot remover. And remember that today's kitchen carpets come in a stunning array of colors and patterns. No longer are you confined to the dull drab colors of yesteryear. Oranges, reds, greens, blues and stripes are just a sampling of what's new. Also, don't forget that carpets make for greater comfort and less breakage of glassware. Furthermore, if you're concerned about germs, take a tip from hospitals. By extensive testing, they've found that carpet has no more bacteria than tiled floors.

If your kitchen has a window, give it an unusual and charming twist with an interesting shade that picks up the colors of the walls, ceiling or carpet. If you don't have pattern in the room, here's your chance to go creative and feature a stripe, plaid, floral or anything that has pattern excitement. Either buy a ready made shade or make your own with fabric. And incidentally, for a zingy coordinated look, replace any old cupboard doors with matching shades.

Once you've selected the basic materials that frame your room, adorn it with colorful coordinated accessories. These are the touches that make a room zing. A canister set, breadboxes, wicker baskets for holding odds and ends, pictures of fruits or vegetables, potted plants, salt and pepper shakers and spice racks fall into this category.

Kitchen tips

A decorative and practical plus for any kitchen is a washable wall covering, especially those made of vinyl. If your wall covering is not washable it is possible to treat it with a washable finish before putting it up.

To conserve energy and avoid heat waste, use pots and pans having essentially the same diameter as the surface unit or burner. The flame on gas burners should not extend beyond the utensil edges.

Cut down on after-meal cleanup by keeping your kitchen clean as you work.

MODERN KITCHEN IDEAS 1976

ONE-PIECE GLASS-CERAMIC cooktop, digital clock, infinite heat cooktop controls and self-cleaning oven are features of this General Electric JBP87 range which were not generally available on ranges 12 years ago.

new ideas in ranges

The average family replaces its range every 12 years.

A lot can happen in that span—a child can go from kindergarten to college. New products come. Others go. And some products undergo substantial improvement. Such has been the case with electric ranges.

Self-cleaning ovens, combination conventional and microwave ovens, glass-ceramic cooktops and range cooktops as well as a number of less dramatic but helpful features have come on the kitchen scene.

For those who may be considering replacing their present electric range with a new model, here are a few pointers from General Electric about new range features and what they mean to you.

Microwave cooking is the biggest news in ranges today. Most consumers think of microwave ovens as countertop units to be used as supplements to conventional ranges. Most are. However, GE offers two 30-inch free-standing ranges, models J845 and J885, which combine microwave cooking in the same oven capacity used for conventional cooking.

Pioneered by GE, the Versatronic® oven system is self cleaning and not only lets you cook by microwave energy or conventional energy but allows you to cook with both kinds of energy at the same time.

It combines the benefits of having a conventional range and countertop microwave oven, but without taking valuable counter-space.

The self-cleaning oven, which has eliminated one of the most-hated chores from housework, is another innovation pioneered by General Electric. You simply set the controls and the oven cleans

Energy-saving appliances

The popularity of energy-saving appliances will reach a new high this year.

Today there are refrigerator/freezers which use about a third less electricity than other models not equipped with its special thermostatically controlled motor.

While it is true that the amount of electricity consumed by the refrigerator each operating hour is a modest amount, it's also true that the amount of electricity consumed 24 hours around the clock for 365 days adds up to a substantial figure.

The higher price tags on these models are offset by operating savings over a long period of time.

There are also dramatic developments in the production of high-efficiency air conditioning units, available in capacities from 5,500 to 28,000 BTUs. Basically, high-efficiency air conditioning is a term applied to air conditioners which produce more cooling per watt of electricity consumed than standard air conditioners of the same capacity.

Cooling is also measured in BTUs. The ratio of BTUs per watt is called Energy Efficiency Ratio.

Longevity

To be free-minded and cheerfully disposed at hours of meat, and of sleep, and of exercise, is one of the best precepts of long lasting. —Francis Bacon

Ice Skating Area Enlarged At Wollaston Recreational Facility

Youthful skaters have been taking advantage of the recent cold spell by trying out the newly enlarged natural ice skating area at the Wollaston Recreational Facility, the old Wollaston Golf Club.

Since the area was purchased by Norfolk County for recreation, the old half-acre pond has been deepened and enlarged to 2.9 acres and divided so that several hockey games and recreation skating can co-exist safely.

Richard J. Koch, chairman of the WRF Advisory Board, has reported that major excavation work on other renovation projects has been completed and finishing work will begin in the spring.

David Hagen Concert At ENC Friday Night

Concert pianist David Hagen will perform works of Schubert, Ravel and Chopin Friday night in a benefit recital for the Eastern Nazarene College Brass Ensemble.

The concert will begin at 8 p.m. in the Mann Student Center Auditorium at Eastern Nazarene.

Hagen received bachelor and master of applied music degrees from the Peabody Conservatory of Music and studied pianist Mieczyslaw and Schnabel scholar Konrad Wolff.

He was the youngest member of the piano faculty at the New England Conservatory of Music when he was 25.

Since his 1968 Town Hall debut, Hagen has been critically acclaimed in Washington, Baltimore, Boston, New York and London not only as an interpreter of the standard repertoire but as a champion of neglected works.

Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia has hailed the coming of Stop & Shop's administrative offices to Quincy as an "indication of the desirability the city has in the eyes of the business community."

Stop & Shop, which includes Bradlee's, Medi-Mart and Perkins Tobacco, has signed a lease for 60,000 square feet of space at State Street South in order to expand its administrative functions. The move will take place next summer.

"It is a tremendous pleasure for me as Mayor to see such a reputable firm as Stop & Shop plan to expand its operation to Quincy," said LaRaia.

"The State Street South complex is undoubtedly one of the most attractive business neighborhoods in New England and its leasing of office space to Stop & Shop is proof enough."

"Quincy has been so seriously hurt by unemployment that new business of any kind is a sign of hope, but when that business is the caliber of a Stop & Shop, it should add to our hope of alleviating this most difficult problem."

"I only hope that as mayor during the next two years I can play a vital role in bringing more business like Stop & Shop to our city."

Steve Martinelli On Honor Roll

Steven Martinelli, son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Martinelli of Quincy, achieved the honor roll at Cushing Academy, Ashburnham. Martinelli is a member of the class of 1976.

Junior Achievement is a non-profit business education program for high school students, who obtain valuable experience operating their own small-scale corporations, from capitalization to liquidation, during the course of a school term.

Meeting one evening each week under the guidance of advisors from business and industry, members of each company elect their own officers; select, produce and market a product or service; keep records; and liquidate their company with a final report to their stockholders. Also, payroll and commission obligations must be met.

Officers as elected by the achievers are:

Ice Skating Area Enlarged At Wollaston Recreational Facility

Youthful skaters have been taking advantage of the recent cold spell by trying out the newly enlarged natural ice skating area at the Wollaston Recreational Facility, the old Wollaston Golf Club.

Since the area was purchased by Norfolk County for recreation, the old half-acre pond has been deepened and enlarged to 2.9 acres and divided so that several hockey games and recreation skating can co-exist safely.

Richard J. Koch, chairman of the WRF Advisory Board, has reported that major excavation work on other renovation projects has been completed and finishing work will begin in the spring.

David Hagen Concert At ENC Friday Night

Concert pianist David Hagen will perform works of Schubert, Ravel and Chopin Friday night in a benefit recital for the Eastern Nazarene College Brass Ensemble.

The concert will begin at 8 p.m. in the Mann Student Center Auditorium at Eastern Nazarene.

Hagen received bachelor and master of applied music degrees from the Peabody Conservatory of Music and studied pianist Mieczyslaw and Schnabel scholar Konrad Wolff.

He was the youngest member of the piano faculty at the New England Conservatory of Music when he was 25.

Since his 1968 Town Hall debut, Hagen has been critically acclaimed in Washington, Baltimore, Boston, New York and London not only as an interpreter of the standard repertoire but as a champion of neglected works.

LaRaia Hails Stop & Shop Move To North Quincy

Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia has hailed the coming of Stop & Shop's administrative offices to Quincy as an "indication of the desirability the city has in the eyes of the business community."

Stop & Shop, which includes Bradlee's, Medi-Mart and Perkins Tobacco, has signed a lease for 60,000 square feet of space at State Street South in order to expand its administrative functions. The move will take place next summer.

"It is a tremendous pleasure for me as Mayor to see such a reputable firm as Stop & Shop plan to expand its operation to Quincy," said LaRaia.

"The State Street South complex is undoubtedly one of the most attractive business neighborhoods in New England and its leasing of office space to Stop & Shop is proof enough."

"Quincy has been so seriously hurt by unemployment that new business of any kind is a sign of hope, but when that business is the caliber of a Stop & Shop, it should add to our hope of alleviating this most difficult problem.

"I only hope that as mayor during the next two years I can play a vital role in bringing more business like Stop & Shop to our city."

The School Committee: No Time For Feuding

We hope that all the feuding and fussing that erupted in the School Committee on Inauguration Day is over and will soon be forgotten.

Veteran Frank Anselmo let go with a verbal salvo when John Sullivan and not he was elected vice-chairman of that board.

It marked the first time in memory of those present that an elected official resigned on the spot and walked out during Quincy inaugural ceremonies.

The following day, Mr. Anselmo—still fuming—vented his hurt feelings by charging he had been "double crossed" and "betrayed" in the voting for the vice-chairmanship.

He levelled his guns specifically at Mr. Sullivan—the man who did win the post but had a few strong words for the entire board:

"I wash my hands of them. It sickens me in the pit of my stomach to do business with these people."

Harsh words, indeed. They were said in obvious anger by a man who apparently was led to believe [as was The Quincy Sun's Sunbeam column] that Mr. Anselmo would be elected vice-chairman.

But the voting did not go according to the so-called script. Something happened. Maybe a telephone call or two. Or maybe someone had some wrong information and jumped to the wrong conclusion before the actual voting. Anyway, it was an obvious blow for Mr. Anselmo.

We think he should be forgiven for his angry outburst. "My resignation is final," he flatly declared. "There is no way I'll be talked out of it."

Well, as it turns out, his resignation was not final. He either changed his mind on his own after cooling off or someone—perhaps Mayor Joseph LaRaia—talked him out of it.

We are glad he has returned to the fold. We do not always agree with his stands on issues. But we believe he has been sincere and has voted the way he really thinks is the best for Quincy and its school youth.

One thing for certain. Frank Anselmo doesn't double-talk. You know where he stands and you have to admire him for that whether you agree with what he says or not.

But there could be one lasting side affect to the incident. Once upon a time there seemed to be the impression that perhaps School Committee members were strictly public servants and above politics. That, for example, they were not as politically oriented as say, the City Council and mayor. That theory apparently was a myth that appears to be somewhat dashed right now. School Committee members are just as human as anyone else.

However, there is work to be done and problems to be solved. Like making the right decision about what to do with North Quincy High School's students during construction of an addition there. And there may be other problems arising that have not even been thought of yet.

We hope that Mr. Anselmo and Mr. Sullivan and the other members of the board can forget what happened on Inauguration Day, roll up their sleeves and work together for the good of the city.

Quincy just cannot afford ill feelings getting in the way of wise decisions by the School Committee during the crucial months ahead.

'GO FIND YOUR OWN HYDRANT!'

SPEAKING OUT— Urges Donations Sent To CP

South Shore Area

Editor, Quincy Sun:

For years we have been donating money supposedly to support Cerebral Palsy of the South Shore Area, Inc. not only in the cause of Cerebral Palsy, but also because our son has been using their facilities over the past 22 years.

It has come to our attention that the money donated during the annual Telethon later this month does not go to support our agency here in the South Shore Area.

We strongly feel and know that the money being raised in a Telethon which is to be held shortly in Randolph will not reach our local agency which has a proven record of service to Cerebral Palsy of all ages for a period in excess of 24 years.

As parents and as businessmen we no longer feel motivated to contribute to this Telethon and will so advise our friends and associates. We sincerely hope that all people in the South Shore Area will realize that this is a very unfair situation whereby you are contributing to Cerebral Palsy, but our own South Shore Area will not receive any of the benefits.

We are, therefore, telling all our friends and businessmen that if they wish to contribute to this very worthy cause they should send their contributions directly to Cerebral Palsy of the South Shore Area, Inc., 105 Adams Street, Quincy, Mass. 02169 so that our own CP families may derive all the benefits which they so justly deserve.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Deena Wier

The Mayor's Political Temperature

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Mayor Joseph LaRaia's political temperature is going to be checked quite frequently over the next 12 to 14 months.

Purpose will be to determine if he's up or down popularity-wise—and how far.

Would-be mayors and astute politician watchers will be looking for a vital reading: is he getting stronger in office or was his upset victory in the 1975 city election just one of those things?

The fact of the matter is that although LaRaia has occupied the mayor's office for just a few days now, political thoughts and plans for the 1977 city election are already taking shape.

Regardless of who is in the mayor's office, there is always someone on the outside being groomed as a challenger for the next time around.

In LaRaia's case, however, it seems to be starting earlier. The bitterness of last year's election apparently is not going to pass quickly. The wounds are deep.

The big question is how strong can LaRaia get in the next year and couple months or so? His performance in office will have a lot to do with the answer. And the answer will have a lot to do with what kind of an election challenge he will face in 1977.

If he shows continual strength he may get only token opposition next year. Usually voters are willing to give a new mayor a shot at a second term and serious challengers, realizing this, are willing to bide their time.

But if he shows any serious weaknesses or failure to "grow in office," you could see a strong challenger step forward next year.

Voters last year showed they wanted a change. There was a strong anti-Walter Hannon front in the city. And LaRaia ran as a Democrat in a Democratic stronghold against a Republican incumbent.

One question that remains unanswered but may be answered next year is: How would LaRaia have fared against another Democrat? His next opponent certainly is going to be a Democrat.

LaRaia, ironically, picked up a lot of points the week before he took office. That was when he won the showdown with Hannon over the Quincy Hospital architect's contract and vigorously opposed the John Graham appointment as planning director. It looks like he has now won the latter battle, too.

Frankly Hannon didn't enhance his image his last week in office trying to push through the hospital addition $93,000 architect's contract and then naming Graham planning director and boldly saying he was doing LaRaia a favor.

LaRaia and Graham are about as compatible as a cat and dog. For the good of the city, Hannon should have let LaRaia pick the man he would work with in such an important area.

But outgoing mayors making 11th hour appointments are nothing new in Quincy or in any other city. It's part of the game. And LaRaia could find himself doing the same thing some day.

For LaRaia, it's only the beginning. How many more points he will gain or lose—between now and the end of the year?

The 1977 mayoralty race is riding on the answer to that one.

WEDDING BELLS will ring June 12 for Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly and Mary Shea of Quincy. She's the sister of Joseph Shea, former Mayor Hannon's executive secretary.

AND THAT WILL leave new Councillor Paul Harold the only eligible bachelor in the 1976-77 City Council. No indication yet that he is about to tie any knots.

★★★

SPEAKING OF HAROLD, he wound up with three committee chairmanships from Council President Arthur Tobin—one of three councillors to get three—and reported it the ones he wanted. The other six got two each. If Tobin was annoyed at Harold for the latter's inauguration day remark that Tobin "would not be immune from criticism in the future," Tobin apparently isn't holding any grudge about it, or at least not showing it.

CONGRESSMAN James Burke, up from Washington to meet with constituents, confides he now weighs a trim 155 pounds. He was 205 pounds when he first went to Washington in 1959. "I have given 50 pounds to my country," he muses.

★★★

CRYSTAL BALL CLOUDY: Frank Anselmo didn't get the school committee vice-chairmanship as forecast here. But John Sullivan, whom we said had the votes did get it. The votes that were supposed to have shifted with Sullivan to Anselmo didn't follow the script. [See Editorial].

WELL, IF Fred Harris should be elected President, John Doherty of 41 Upton St., West Quincy, can hang up a sign that "President Harris Slept Here." And in turn receive an invitation to the White House.

Doherty is serving as 11th Congressional District coordinator for Harris' campaign. Harris recently stopped over night at his home between appearances at Fall River and a New Hampshire tour. Harris is extending invitations to the White House to every host he visits during the campaign.

Wollaston Girl Receives 'Get Well' Card From FDR

By TOM HENSHAW

Leona Merrill, 14, of 146 Bromfield St., Wollaston, left Quincy City Hospital after four weeks of treatment for injuries suffered in a skating accident and she took with her a "get well" card from President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Six year before, Leona may have saved FDR's life when she spotted a gun in the hand of an assassin in Miami, Fla., and screamed a warning. The President escaped injury but Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago was fatally wounded.

BURGIN WARNS ABOUT DRINKING

Mayor Thomas S. Burgin warned members of the Quincy Police and Fire Departments that it would cost them a nine-month suspension if they were found to be drunk on duty. A second offense would bring dismissal.

"Due to the fact that we have had some cases of intoxication recently in these departments, I decided it was time to take a definite and firm stand on this matter," said the Mayor.

"I specified 'on duty' in my warning but of course a policeman or fireman is technically never off duty under the law."

The Mayor's warning was read to the firemen and policemen at roll call by Police Chief John J. Avery and Fire Chief William J. Sands.

SKATERS ON THIN ICE

Youngsters from the Atlantic section who skate on the frozen area of Denison Airport were warned to quit taking a short cut across the runways or they would lose their skating privileges.

Pilots of small aircraft using the runways reported several landing and takeoff near misses with kids bound for the skating rink.

Atlantic boys and girls got a warning from the Park Department, too.

If they didn't stop throwing stones, tin cans and tree branches into the flooded area of O'Neil Playground the Park Department wouldn't bother to flood it and another skating spot would be lost to them.

PERILS OF MAXIE

Max Baer, the former world heavyweight boxing champion, refereed the battle royal among wrestlers Teddy Germaine, Chief War Eagle, Wild Bill Dolan and Quincy's Al Taylor at Quincy Arena and wound up the only casualty.

Germaine, who billed himself as the roughest wrestler in the world, tossed Maxie out of the ring early in the bout and the former champ suffered a split lip.

SCHMITZ REELECTED

Walter A. Schmitz was reelected president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce for the coming year.

Other officers chosen included: J. Everett Robbie, first vice president; Arthur J. Murphy, second vice president; C. Rodgers Burgin, treasurer; and E. J. MacEwan, secretary.

A REGIONAL ECONOMY

Business Must Tend To Business

By ERIC SWIDER

Some businesspeople become frustrated and angry when people are critical of the private enterprise system, when they advocate increasing government control of business, are ignorant of the amount and function of profits and generally favor policies that would hurt rather than help the system.

Some businesspeople can't understand why others continually criticize a system that puts a premium on individual freedom, initiative and opportunity; emphasizes human rights, equal justice under the law, private property and sanctity of contract.

Some businesspeople wonder about the sanity of those who question an economic system that history proves and facts demonstrate, provides the greatest good for the greatest number, encourages diversity, promotes education, reduces poverty, stimulates creativity, reflects the consumer's wants, and respects the rights and responsibilities of the individual.

Businesspeople know well the values that have made this country great:

- * Effective limited government.
- * The private enterprise economic system, with...
- * Free competitive markets
- * Individual incentive and initiative.

They can't understand why the critics and detractors of American business don't recognize them also.

They are convinced that in any age the great society will be the free society—not the planned society or the controlled society.

And they can't understand why everybody doesn't see something so obvious.

Perhaps businesspeople are too busy practicing and participating in the private enterprise economic system. Perhaps they participate better than they explain the system.

Yet, it needs explaining continuously, convincingly, persuasively. By businesspeople. To students, Educators, Employees, Women's Groups, Men's Clubs, Everybody.

Business and the private enterprise system needs public respect in order to serve our society effectively. To communicate its message to the public, businesspeople must concentrate on three areas.

Firstly, every business firm must develop a strong, aggressive and rational communication program with the public. The commitment to tell the business story must be broadly based, yet still penetrate to the personal level.

This plan of communication, secondly, should encompass an honest consumer satisfaction plan. A satisfaction that can only be achieved by providing the best possible goods and services to the public.

And thirdly, the business must be able to live up to the public's expectations relative to quality of life. We expect more than goods and services. We expect business to demonstrate its concern for a cleaner environment, healthier society, and improved life for everyone. All businesses must prove their concern, act in a manner to better the quality of life, and communicate that to the public.

Interestingly enough, the vast majority of firms in this marketplace do a good job with numbers two and three. But they fail to communicate the rationale for the American competitive business system and the result is a lot of uninformed citizens who then become suspect of their endeavors.

The South Shore Chamber is launching a three-pronged effort to more effectively interpret business to the citizenry. Under the leadership of Chamber President Jack Conway, we will attempt to get before most organized South Shore groups this year with our "Voice of Business" speakers program. This program provides a knowledgeable Chamber officer, director or member to speak on issues of interest from Fore River Bridge replacement, job development or business' concerns on legislative matters.

Next, our Economic education committee, under the leadership of Paul Hurley Jr., will determine the potential for utilizing a brand new multi-media-discussion program in the secondary schools that we think tells business' story and allows for a free interchange of ideas between businesspeople and students—It's called "Economics for Young Americans" and if it seems workable, we will offer the program and resource people from among our business members to each and every high school on the South Shore.

Thirdly, we plan to regularly examine with members their responsibilities to Speak Up for business. We will encourage an improved effort on their part to get out and tell their story.

Businesspeople have to make time to explain and interpret their endeavors to our society. And they needn't wait for a telephone call from their neighborhood Chamber of Commerce before they get into action. The Chamber is a resource and can help them develop facts and a meaningful presentation of their activities. But just as they take the initiative to make a profit, it is up to each businessperson to initiate effort to insure the continuation of the system which allows them to take initiative.

'Signs Of A Dying Marriage'

By DR. WILLIAM F. KNOX

My wife seems to be totally insensitive to me. She doesn't seem to care what's happening to us. She barely talks to me ... no longer wants to sleep with me ... stays out late at night and I don't dare ask what she's doing. I'm working on a dangerous job all day. I often think that she couldn't even care if I am hurt. But she always has her hand out for that big fat pay check on Fridays. Do you think we have a dying marriage? What makes women like this? Please answer in the paper, because I want to show my wife your answer.

Sincerely, D.M.

Dear D.M.:

I would like to know what has gone before this period of insensitivity of your wife. Surely she has not always been uncaring else you wouldn't have married her ... unless you saw this in her and thought you could reform her. But whatever has gone before doesn't change the present fact. The present fact is that you're describing a dying marriage ... indeed your marriage, except for its legal aspect, is non-existent.

One of the first signs of a dying marriage is the Cessation of Communication. When a husband and wife are happy together, they talk with each other. They want to share with each other what each is doing ... in the business ... with the children ...

mutual friends seen during the day ... events of common interest to each ... plans for holidays. In your case Mr. D.M. why did your communication cease. Who stopped talking ... you or your wife.

A second sign of a dying marriage is the Cessation of Affection and Sexual Relations. I know that either a man or a woman may go through a period when he/she feels no affection or sexual desire. This may be caused by a concern about health ... actual illness ... or anxiety and depression brought on by job jeopardy ... financial distress ... or some unnamed disturbance. During such a time sensitive husbands and wives try to be understanding and supportive until the distressed partner regains his/her normal powers. But if this continues indefinitely, look for the cause in the relationship. Does any of this fit you, D.M.?

A third sign of a dying marriage is the Cessation of Fun Together ... no more Saturday nights at the movies together ... no more walks in the woods ... no more dancing ... or ski week-ends together ... honeymoon bridge or canasta together. The couple finds separate entertainment ... probably with other persons. That's what's happening to D.M.'s relationship.

Of course, when we get off the Love Level, the relationship gets onto the rights level. That's why your wife has her hand out for your pay check.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

Do I Have Right To See School Records?

"Do I have the right to see my daughter's school records," an anxious father recently asked the Voter Information Phone.

"Yes, you do," the VPhone volunteer replied. Under a Massachusetts law, enacted in 1976, parents have the right to inspect their children's records in all schools supported by public funds. Federal law, enacted more recently, extends this same right to parents of students attending private schools. Students also have the right to inspect their own records.

This question is one of many now being received by the League of Women Voters Voter Information Phone, a statewide, free public service 6 of the Lotte E. Scharfman Memorial Fund. If you have questions about government-local, state or national-call the VPhone Monday through Friday, between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. The number in the Boston area is 357-5880. Outside the Boston metropolitan area dial 1-800-882-1649, toll-free.

collects his thoughts after speaking out for the abolition of slavery in this poignant scene from the 13-week Bicentennial series, "The Adams Chronicles", which begins Tuesday, Jan. 20 at 9 p.m. on Ch. 2.

'The Adams Chronicles' Begins Jan. 20 On Ch. 2

"The Adams Chronicles, 1750-1900", one of the most significant drama series ever produced in the United States, will begin its 13-week run next Tuesday, Jan. 20, at 8 p.m. on Ch. 2.

The series, by dramatizing the lives of the historic Adams family, is particularly appropriate in this Bicentennial year. Furthermore, it is of special interest to Quincy residents as the Adams' were born and raised here.

It is the Adams Papers, 300,000 pages of journals, diaries and letters written by members of the Adams family, that provide the historical basis for the series. The papers, bequeathed in trust to the Massachusetts Historical Society, [whose president is Thomas Boylston Adams, a direct descendant of John and Abigail], have given "The Adams Chronicles" its wealth of philosophical, political and personal detail.

Woven among the events that shaped the history of the emerging nation are events that formulated a family's personal legacy: John and Abigail's lifetime partnership, one of history's great love stories; the deaths of John Adams and Thomas Jefferson within hours of each other on the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence; John Quincy's fatal heart attack on the floor of the House; broken friendships; untimely deaths of children and wives; and the challenge to succeeding generations of their ancestors' record of achievement.

15 YEARS AGO

In January of 1961... At 11 a.m. on Jan. 20 John Fitzgerald Kennedy became our 35th President... Earlier in the week NBC had deleted an 8-minute sketch about the then President-elect and his wife from "The Art Carney Show". Carney and Lee Remick had been scheduled to portray Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy at home at the White House after the inauguration. The show was to have been aired three days before the inauguration, but NBC considered it "improper"... Gwen Verdon was guesting with Perry Como... CBS presented "The Gershwin Years" with Maurice Chevalier, Florence Henderson, Julie London, Frank Sinatra and Ethel Merman. Richard Rodgers hosted... Pat O'Brien was starring in "Harrigan and Son"... Christopher Plummer starred as "The Prisoner of Zenda" with Farley Granger and Inger Stevens...

● Cranberry League O'Brien Club, Hotshots Strong

By TOM SULLIVAN

Quincy again this year is represented by two of the finest semi-pro basketball teams in New England, playing in the Cranberry League, the defending champion O'Brien Club and the Palmer Hotshots.

These teams, together with New Bedford, are proving the class of the league and offer weekly doubleheaders on Saturdays and Sunday at North Quincy High School at which no admission is charged and offer Quincy and South Shore fans some of the best entertainment around.

Last Saturday at North the Hotshots, pulling away in the third period, defeated the O'Brien Club for the first time in six games, 143-122, to move into first place in the league, a half game ahead of the O'Briens. [In addition to some uncanny shooting, one of the reasons for the unusually high score was playing 12-minute periods instead of the usual 10].

The rivals will clash again Sunday at 8 p.m. at North Quincy High and the game should be a "must" for all basketball fans of the city.

Saturday, also at North, the O'Briens will face Ringside A.C. of Brockton at 1 o'clock and the Hotshots will meet the Wholey Club of Hull at 2:30.

One of the season's highlights will be a third meeting between the Quincy rivals on March 10 at Boston Garden in a preliminary to the Celtics game.

The Hotshots had waited a long time to top the O'Briens, having lost five times, mostly by one or two points, in the YMCA summer and spring leagues and the Charlestown tournament.

Both teams are loaded with former college standouts and several have played pro ball, including the NBA and ABA. Several former North Quincy and Quincy High players are among the top players.

The O'Brien club, coached by Leo Papile, who also is general manager, includes Gary Bowen [6-9], Fairfield University; Fred Cabral [6-4], Boston State; Steve Colella [6-4], Colby College and Utah of the ABA; Captain Al Dalton [6-2], Suffolk University and Memphis of the ABA; Mike Dunn [6-2], Boston College; Jack Jellison [6-4], North Quincy High and Northeastern University; Bob McNamara [6-7], Boston University; Eddie Miller [5-9], North Quincy High and Boston State; Jim O'Brien, [6-1], Boston College and the ABA; Gene Walcott [6-8], Bridgewater State, and Brian Hammel [6-2], Bentley College All-American who had a tryout with the Milwaukee Bucks and is on the O'Briens reserve list.

The team sponsor is Dick O'Brien of Caradonna News.

The equally star-studded Hotshots' roster includes Capt. Tommy Garwood [6-3], University of West Virginia; Steve Reale [6-1], St. Anselm's; Ken Boyd [6-6], Boston University and New Orleans of the NBA; Ron Bradley [6-4], North Quincy High and Eastern Nazarene College who was drafted by the New York Nets; Buzz Connelly [6-2], Northeastern; Don Constantine [6-1], North Quincy High and Eastern Nazarene; Gene DeLoatch [5-9], Curry College; Jim Garvin [6-7], Boston U. and Buffalo Braves; Bob Pike [6-6], Quincy High and Northeastern; Rick Sprague [6-3], North Quincy High; Kerry Walker [6-3], Boston U.; Jack Osgood [6-8], Boston University and currently head coach at Norwell High, and Ducky Connors [5-8], Quincy High.

The Hotshots are coached by Roger Homan, who played on three state championship high school teams in his native Janesville, Wisconsin, and plays for the Hotshots on occasion.

The team sponsor is Jack Smith, who took over the sponsorship exactly one year before last Saturday's big win. The Hotshots, incidentally, were organized two years to the day before the game.

Saturday's game presented basketball at its best. Boyd, the league's top scorer, had 44 points, Garvin 20, Bradley 22, Walker 18 and Osgood 14 for the Hotshots. For the O'Brien Club O'Brien and Dalton had 24 each, Bowen 22, Jellison 19 and Walcott 12.

Sunday night the Hotshots had to go into overtime to win at New Bedford, 122-113, to make their record 8-2, with Garvin scoring eight of his 17 points and grabbing seven of his 17 rebounds in the extra period. Boyd had 39 points and 21 rebounds, Walker 17 points, DeLoatch 11 points and 10 assists, Pike 11 points and 10 rebounds, Sprague 12 points and 10 assists. Connolly and Constantino sparked defensively. New Bedford has a 7-3 record.

The O'Brien Club defeated the Brockton Huskies, 91-83, at Brockton, to make its record 7-2.

O'Brien scored 20 points, McNamara 14, Dalton 14, Colella 13, Miller 12 and Bowen 10.

The Hotshots also are leading the top division of the TARO League and Sunday afternoon edged the Huskies, 82-78, to make their record 4-1, with Constantine playing one of his best games with 12 points, 11 rebounds and 10 assists. Boyd had 24 points, Bradley 11 points and 13 assists and Sprague 11 points and nine rebounds.

Next Sunday the Hotshots play Lum's of Hingham, the only team to defeat them, at 2:30 at Weymouth North High.

LaRaia Hopes To Trim Overtime Work

Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia met with two department heads Monday to discuss the possibility of trimming the amount of overtime worked by their people.

The department heads were Edward Leone, interim commissioner of public works, and Richard Koch, commissioner of natural resources.

Among the possibilities discussed was a rotating five-day work week that would include Saturday and Sunday.

LaRaia said he hopes Leone and Koch can formulate a plan by Feb. 1. He said, however, that union agreements would have to be taken into consideration before any plan was adopted.

Also attending the meeting were Cornelius Moriarty, assistant superintendent of the DPW; Joseph McParland, labor negotiator; and John Salenius, the Mayor's executive secretary.

Officials To Meet Again On Hudson Bus Problem

Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia met with Weymouth selectmen Monday to discuss the threatened suspension of Hudson Bus Co. service to Quincy Sq. Another meeting is planned for Friday.

Hudson has announced plans to discontinue bus service into Quincy Sq. Jan. 17 because it is unable to compete with the MBTA buses and because the MBTA has denied the company access to its Quincy station. Weymouth officials are concerned that townspeople will be without bus transportation to Quincy.

LaRaia said he hopes something of mutual benefit to Quincy and Weymouth will come out of Friday's meeting, which is scheduled for 1 p.m. and will include members of the Quincy City Council.

Main Library Open Sundays

Sunday library service at the Thomas Crane Public Library will begin Jan. 18.

Services available from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. at the main library, 40 Washington St., will include both adult and children's circulation and general reference services.

Sunday library service is being offered on a trial basis to determine user interest. It will be the first time since the early 1940's that Quincy's main library has been opened for regular use on Sunday.

LaRaia Wants 30-Day Delay On NQHS Closing Vote Creedon Seeks Half-Day Double Sessions

By TOM HENSHAW

The School Committee was scheduled to meet last night [Wednesday] amid indications that a vote on the thorny problem of North Quincy High School may at last be at hand.

School Supt. Lawrence Creedon, who recommended closing and double sessions last week, said this time he planned to recommend the double sessions be handled on the basis of a half-day for each student body.

Committeemen Francis X. McCauley and Charles Sweeney said they favor a vote to close North Quincy High during construction and renovations and send its students to double sessions at Quincy High.

Committeeman Christopher F. Kennedy said he was leaning that way.

Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia, who is chairman of the School Committee, said he would ask for an extension of up to 30 days to consider the alternatives to double sessions left to the city.

And the City Council, while vehemently denying that it had any say in the matter, advanced the theory that it may be up to the Mayor, not the School Committee, to open or close the building during construction.

"Barring any last minute changes," said McCauley, "we ought to accept the superintendent's recommendations to close the school. That seems to be the best plan."

"We have been studying and talking about this for hours, months, years. Now is the time to move."

"I am in favor of voting to close the school," said Sweeney.

"That plan would cause less disruption to a whole generation of high school students."

"And the educational offering could be more effectively produced than if the students were scattered around, a grade her and there."

Kennedy, a newcomer to the School Committee this term, told the Sun:

"It's going to adversely affect the school system no matter which way we vote."

"The big question then is to get it over with as quickly as possible."

"The way to do that is to close the school and work on it steadily."

"I see no good reason why it should take more than two years."

Vincent LoCicero Named DPW Commissioner

Vincent R. LoCicero, 43, of Braintree, a former resident of Quincy for 38 years, has been named city public works commissioner, effective Feb. 2.

The appointment was announced Tuesday by Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia.

LoCicero has been a construction superintendent with the O'Connell Brothers Construction Co. of Quincy for the past five years and prior to that operated his own general contracting firm.

He started in 1953 as a laborer in the Quincy Highway Department.

With O'Connell Brothers, LoCicero has been responsible for all aspects of construction, including snow plowing and removal from projects owned and managed by the company.

A veteran of the U.S. Army during the Korean conflict, he is a member of the American Legion and the Quincy Master Builders' Association.

LoCicero lives with his wife and two children at 136 Pilgrim Rd., Braintree, but, the Mayor's office pointed out, he still owns the old family home at 9 Hammond Court, South Quincy.

He succeeds Edward Leone, who was named interim commissioner shortly after the first of the year, filling in after Commissioner James Ricciuti resigned.

23 Montilio Bakery Prizes

'Young Ideas' Spotlights Baking

By CATHY CONLEY

"Young Ideas" returns this week on a sweet note—baking! The four-page pull-out section starts on Page 13 and is sponsored by the famed Montilio's Bakery.

Guest editors are pupils in Mrs. Lisa Ananis' third grade at Massachusetts Fields School, Wollaston. Parents, teachers and pupils of the school are gathering their favorite recipes into a dessert cookbook. They plan to sell the cookbook on Institute Day. Profits will be divided between the Quincy Scholarship Fund and the PTO Fund.

"Young Ideas" salutes this project. And the guest editors have created several puzzles, games, poems and essays about bakery products. One guest editor, Kenny Runge, interviewed George Montilio about the operations of the bakery.

Highlight of the issue is a children's dessert recipe contest. Grand prize will be a 20-pound Valentine cake from Montilio's. Twenty second prize winners will receive cookie monster cakes. All winning recipes will be featured in the Mass Fields dessert cookbook. Deadline for the contest is Friday, Jan. 30.

Sun Photographer Wins 2 New England Press Awards

The Quincy Sun has won two photography awards in the New England Press Association annual newspaper competition.

Sun Photographer Steve Liss won both laurels—the top spot news prize and a third place general news award in the weekly newspaper field.

Liss and other winners in various competitions received their awards at NEPA's annual dinner Friday night, climaxing NEPA's four-day convention.

More than 500 editors, publishers, other newscasters and guests attended the dinner at the Sheraton-Boston Hotel. The competition is the largest newspaper contest in New England open to more than 300 weekly and daily newspapers.

Liss won first prize in the spot news category for a photo taken of Senator Edward M. Kennedy last April when he was jostled by an anti-busing crowd after he had spoken at a North Quincy Knights of Columbus Communion breakfast at Atlantic Junior High School.

His third place prize in the general news category was for a photo taken at what was supposed to have been a routine champagne bottle christening of the new Quincy Savings Bank branch in Quincy Point.

However, Mayor Walter Hannon cracked the bottle a little too hard showering himself, bank President Charles Pearce other bank officials and guests with champagne. Their reaction, caught by Liss with his camera, won him the honor.

Runnerup to Liss in the spot news category was Richard Minnig of The Redding Pilot, Georgetown, Conn. Richard E. Garnsey, Jr. of the Rochester [N.H.] Courier took third place.

Honorable mention went to Harry Thayer, The Exeter [N.H.] News-Letter; Richard Dugas, Lexington Minute-Man and Peter Jorgensen, The Arlington Advocate.

In the general news photo category, first place went to George Lloyd of the Blackstone Valley Tribune/Advertiser, Whitinville. Second place was won by David Perrotta, The Narragansett [R.I.] Times.

Honorable mention honors went to Richard Page, Old Colony Memorial, Plymouth; George Lloyd, Blackstone Valley Tribune and Ralph E. Morang, The Hampton [N.H.] Union.

The All-New England General Excellence Awards were won by The Dalton News-Record [weekly category], The North Adams Transcript [for dailies with up to 20,000 circulation] and the Lynn Item [dailies with 20,000 to 75,000 circulation].

Liss, who lives at 26 Ridgeway Drive, Merrymount, is the son of Atty. and Mrs. Frederick Liss.

James G. Bellows, editor of the Washington Star was keynote speaker at the awards dinner. He urged newspapers to "get back close to the people".

Spotlight On Health Department

Inspectors Keep Restaurants Clean With Spot Checks

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

[Sixth and final in a series]

With eyes attuned to dirt and grease and noses blood-hound sensitive to odor, Quincy's five Health Department food inspectors spot-check the city's restaurants and all other food-service establishments.

Their job - to protect patrons against the possibility of contracting food-borne illnesses.

Armed with the simple but essential tools of their trade - flashlights, two types of thermometers and keen senses - these men enforce strict standards of cleanliness and food storage in restaurants, lounges, snack shops, supermarkets, bakeries, cafeterias, lodging and nursing homes - anywhere food is prepared and served to the public.

Unlike some health department sanitation divisions, the Quincy division neither ranks nor rates the city's restaurants, contending such a classification is too subjective and non-systematic.

Food inspector Frank Glynn expressed it this way: An inspector could give a restaurant a bad rating simply because he didn't like the owner. It's a dangerous and unnecessary thing...We're in the business of prevention and education. We're not in the business of advertising.

The city's food inspectors make their rounds unannounced, checking several basic areas:

Physical condition of the building, cleanliness of the plant, refrigeration of foods at proper temperatures, method of food storage, trash disposal and dishwashing procedures.

"One of the first things I do [when inspecting an establishment] is take a deep breath," Glynn said. "You're looking for cooking odors, odors from the rest rooms. A good rule of thumb is, 'If the rest rooms are clean, the restaurant is clean.'"

By law, the food inspectors must examine all food establishments twice each year.

But Quincy's food inspectors, often conducting surprise restaurant and bar room tours on the weekend, evaluate all food service establishments in the city once every four to five weeks.

A critical area of investigation is proper food storage. Glynn explained storage of food at temperatures under 45 degrees halts or minimizes bacterial growth while heating to temperatures in excess of 140 degrees kills the potentially infectious bacteria.

Optimal bacteria growth occurs within a temperature range of 50 and 140 degrees - "the danger zone," he said.

To spot-check a restaurant on his food storage procedures, an inspector could, for example, insert a probe thermometer to the center of refrigerated meat to check its internal temperature.

Glynn said the meat must register an internal temperature of less than 45 degrees to pass inspection. Otherwise, out it goes.

Similarly, food meant to be served hot must attain temperature in excess of 140 degrees for the proper length of time to kill all bacteria.

The inspectors note graves and stuffings can be the culprit carriers of a food-borne disease if not cooked at a properly high temperature for the needed period of time. Glynn warns a turkey dressing, stuffed in the centermost part of the bird, may not attain the same high external temperature needed to kill bacteria. Consequently the opportunity is ripe for bacterial growth and possible food poisoning.

In addition, inspectors require all refrigerated food to be properly covered to prevent possibly contaminated food particles from falling onto food refrigerated on a shelf below.

Although the inspectors report restaurants and other food service establishment owners offer ready compliance with their rules, Glynn describes the consequences in a case of non-compliance:

"If I tell a restaurateur to cover his refrigerated food, and if it isn't covered when I come back the next time, I tell him, 'Dump that, and that, and that.'"

"We're in the prevention business," he reiterated. "We don't want the spreading of a disease."

Another important check in an inspector's round is the evaluation of dishwashing procedures and effectiveness. The inspectors perform swabs on glasses, cups, forks, knives, spoons, slicers, ladles and the entire array of bar glasses, checking for bacterial growth. While inspectors swab restaurants about four times per year, they swab bar rooms more often - about six or seven times per year.

2 Prize Winning Quincy Sun Photos

Here are the two photos that won two prizes for Quincy Sun photographer Steve Liss in the annual New England Press Association competition.

Liss took first prize for best spot news photo among New England weekly newspapers for his shot of police leading Senator Edward M. Kennedy to safety after being jostled by anti-bus demonstrators following a North Quincy Knights of Columbus Communion Breakfast at Atlantic Junior High School.

He won third prize in the general news category for his amusing photo of what was to have been a routine champagne christening of the new Quincy Savings Bank branch on Washington St., Quincy Point.

However, Mayor Walter Hannon put a little too much zing into his swing as he cracked the bottle against the wall, showering bank officials and guests with the bubbly stuff. Liss's camera caught the amusing reaction of Bank President Charles Pearce, Senator Arthur Tobin, Treasurer Charles Simpson and branch Manager William Lomanno.

Raymondi Urges Petition For 1 A.M. Bar Closing

Ward II Councillor Daniel G. Raymondi urges Quincy Point residents to petition the Board of License Commissioners to limit all drinking establishments in the area to a 1 a.m. closing time.

A decision by the Board may be made within the next two weeks.

Raymondi said: "Lounges with 2 a.m. liquor licenses have caused disruption in the community and have been a continuing threat to the quiet and integrity of the surrounding area. Even after the most recent public hearing regarding the discontinuance of the 2 a.m. liquor license where evidence of disorder was introduced at that time, an incident occurred at one of the bars that required police involvement.

"It is important to realize that this kind of license is a privilege and is not granted as a matter of right. Therefore, the public is demanding some good faith and concern for them before any further privileges are granted.

"At the last public hearing, Rep. Robert Cerasoli and I were the only two elected public officials who spoke in opposition to the 2 a.m. closing time. I have received strong support for this stand from my constituents who indicated to me that they would like to see other elected officials involved in this matter as well.

"I wish to thank the people of Quincy Point for their support but also I wish to warn them that the issue has not yet been resolved. There is much work to be done in lobbying support for our position.

"I join with the people of Ward II in calling upon the Licensing Board to roll back the hours that these places are open and to make the decision that will greatly improve the quality of life in our neighborhoods."

A Budget Dinner With Pizzaz

SKY-HIGH PORK CHOPS — Plain pork chops are transformed into a gourmet feast that adds pizzaz to your dinner menu without adding to your grocery budget.

A food expert who trains restaurant managers from around the world says that both economy and pizzaz can become "naturals" in any kitchen.

Jim Harrison, a 22-year veteran of the restaurant business and food and beverage instructor at Holiday Inn University near Memphis, Tenn., knows what it means to cook on a budget. But, he's also learned how to make economy meals look glamorous and taste like a gourmet delight.

One of Jim's favorite low-cost eyebrow-raisers is a recipe he calls Sky-High Pork Chops. Hamburgers, tuna and other economy meats can always turn into a casserole when monotony strikes, but pork chops take a bit more thought.

Be sure to buy extra-thick pork chops for this dish, planning one chop per person. Brown the meat and transfer it to a baking dish. Now you're ready to build a tower of succulent pineapple rounds, sautéed pepper and onion rings, fluffy white rice and rich tomato sauce that is guaranteed to "wow" any family and leave your grocery budget intact.

Sky-High Pork Chops

Double-thick pork chops (1 per person)	Onion (medium)
Canned pineapple rounds	Minute rice
Green pepper (small)	Condensed tomato soup

Salt, pepper and flour the pork chops and brown in skillet with small amount of cooking oil. Place browned pork chops in casserole dish. Cut onion in 1/4-inch slices; sauté until golden brown, place one slice on each pork chop. Top onion with one pineapple round. Top pineapple rounds with 1/4-inch ring of green (bell) pepper. Secure pepper, pineapple and onion to pork chop with toothpick. Prepare Minute rice according to package instructions, using only 3/4 of the steaming time (4 minutes). Cool. Spoon rice into a mound in each pepper ring. Prepare condensed tomato soup with 1/2 can milk and pour over five-layered pork chop. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes. Serve with chilled rose wine and green salad.

DEAFENING ROCK MUSIC

Whatever you may think of rock music, it's a fact of life for many of today's teenagers. But according to Dr. J. A. Bell, the live rock concert can be dangerous to your children's hearing.

"Noise levels produced by rock musicians, with the aid of high amplification, are much higher than those considered safe for prolonged exposure," says Dr. Bell, who is a member of the American Medical Association's Department of Environmental Public and Occupational Health. "Some of the audience can actually suffer permanent hearing loss."

The solution? Dr. Bell explains that, since the musicians' instruments, number of amplifiers, and rated output varies from group to group, it is difficult to establish any criteria that would not be arbitrary. In general, an outdoor concert is less dangerous than an indoor one. However, according to Dr. Bell, the only absolutely safe measure is to stay away from the concerts altogether.

At The Quincy YMCA

You Can Now Dance To Fitness - - The Aerobic Way

It's called "aerobic dancing" and it's described as "a series of simple dances which improve and maintain cardiovascular [aerobic] and muscular fitness."

Whatever you call it or however you describe it, a winter session of the Aerobic Dance Fitness Program for Women began Monday at the Quincy YMCA and will continue for the next 12 weeks in morning and evening classes.

Aerobic dancing was developed in 1969 by Jacki Sorenson, a member of the clinic staff of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports as a "program of vigorous exercise similar to recreational sports, yet individual, non-competitive and fun."

The various dance routines can be performed on three energy levels — walking, jogging or running — depending upon individual fitness, or the three levels can be combined in one routine.

The Quincy YMCA is the only one on the South Shore offering the aerobic dancing program. Its staff of instructors includes Alyce McLeod, Herta McConville, Dolly Lee and Brenda Kelly, each of whom has received extensive training.

Each participant must have a medical clearance signed by the family physician, must take a three-minute "step test" given by the instructors, and cannot be 35 pounds heavier than the top weight to participate safely in the program.

Registration is required in order to take the course. Spring sessions are scheduled to begin March 29.

$900 In Cash Prizes For Oratorical Contest

A Bicentennial oratorical contest for Quincy junior high and senior high students will have $900 in cash prizes.

Quincy Heritage, the city's Bicentennial agency, announces a grant from two local Knights of Columbus councils which will fund the contest. The North Quincy and Ave Maria Council have joined together to assist the city-wide program.

Open to all students in grades seven through 12, the contest theme will be "The Role of Oratory in the American Revolution". "Although the battles of the Revolutionary War were important, there would have been no war with the British had it not been for the brilliant and persuasive speeches of our Founding Fathers," said Graham.

The oratorical contest will provide Quincy students attending public, parochial and private schools the opportunity to discover the importance of the spoken word during the Revolutionary period.

The contest will held in Quincy, Friday, April 9 and Saturday, April 10. It will be necessary for interested students to register by Feb. 13.

Registration forms will be available through the schools and at the Quincy Heritage Visitors' Center beginning Jan. 5.

Two separate divisions are scheduled for the contest. Class One will be for 10, 11 and 12 grade students. Speeches will be eight to 10 minutes in length. Class Two will be for students in grades 7, 8 and 9. They will be asked to speak for four to five minutes. Speeches in both classes will be from prepared manuscripts.

The speeches will be judged on content, originality, and delivery.

Prizes for grades 10, 11 and 12 will be:

First prize, $250; second prize, $150; and third prize, $100. Student winners in the 7, 8, and 9th grade classification will be awarded prizes of $200, $150 and $50.

Special awards will be presented to the adult sponsors of the winning students. All students entering the contest will be awarded certificates.

"We are working on plans to publish the winning speeches," said Graham, "and to have them on the radio so many people can benefit from the hard work of the students."

Kenneth Runge of the North Quincy Knights of Columbus and Joseph Shea of the Ave Maria Council have been working with Quincy Heritage in developing the contest.

JOSIAH'S SPIRIT IS ALIVE AND WELL AT QUINCY COOPERATIVE BANK.

Meet Josiah Quincy, Jr., the founder of cooperative banking in Massachusetts, and the man for whom our bank was named.

About 100 years ago, the ordinary workingman couldn't borrow money from a regular savings bank the way rich and important people could.

So Josiah got the legislature to legalize cooperative banking in Massachusetts. This new type of banking gave the workingman the same opportunities as the wealthy. Cooperative banks are owned by the depositors. That can be helpful when you need to borrow.

We chose Josiah's name, because it stands for a concern for people we think is important.

In fact, since our founding, we've been doing business as if Josiah were looking over our shoulder.

That means keeping you first in our minds.

Because we keep Josiah a close second. We know for certain . . .

JOSIAH WOULD HAVE LIKED THAT.

A City-Wide Dilemma

Months ago most residents looked on construction of a new addition to North Quincy High School as a problem confined to that area.

It has now hit home that this is very much a city-wide dilemma.

If the present school is closed during construction and dreaded double sessions imposed, students at both North Quincy and Quincy High Schools will be adversely affected over a period of time up to and probably more than three years.

And eventually students at Quincy Vocational-Technical School could find themselves involved if space at Quincy High School is not sufficient to carry out the double sessions load.

It will mean that these students will be under both physical and mental handicaps trying to get a high school education as they are forced to adjust to very difficult conditions.

Academic scholarships could be lost. Certainly athletic scholarships would be affected as the schools' sports programs are disrupted.

And the parents of these students—the already over-burdened taxpayers—will be affected, too. By the time the now planned attached addition is completed, we may find we could have had a brand new school for less money—and no disruption. The cost of busing students back and forth between North Quincy and Quincy Center has yet to be estimated.

The present plan calls for an attached addition which apparently necessitates closing of the present school during construction of the addition and renovations to the present school.

Mayor Joseph LaRaia has raised the possibility of changing that plan and building a free standing [unattached] addition instead. Such a plan could keep the present school open during most of the construction and renovations period.

One drawback is that it will mean the additional cost of a new plan. Another is that it would probably require taking of homes and land.

But we think Mayor LaRaia's idea should be explored thoroughly before a final decision is reached.

The School Committee was scheduled to vote on the matter Wednesday night. Board members will see this issue of The Quincy Sun before they face their agonizing "moment of truth". We urge them to delay that vote for one more look at the LaRaia plan.

A free standing addition—or some other alternative—could be the better way out of this dilemma. The quality of education for thousands of students is at stake.

THUMBNAIL THOUGHTS—

By K.A. Smith

The modes of speech and dress may be different but to many there are unpleasant governmental parallels between 1776 and 1976.

Somehow or another it's escaped us whether Governor Dukakis, too, is clumsy on skis.

For semantics at work, how about the Army saying Wounded Knee was not a massacre?

In ordinary life if you want help you don't insult the giver. But other countries know the best way to get Uncle Sam to shell out is to insult him.

The bureaucrat who insists a 35 "passing" grade on the firefighters' exam is as good as a 70 gets the prize for optimism or stupidity, or both.

SPEAKING OUT—

Takes Issue With Swider Column

Editor, Quincy Sun:

In your Dec. 11 edition, on page 11, a Mr. Eric Swider described a proposed bill sponsored by the AFL-CIO, via the Building Trades Department, which would provide "equal treatment for craft and industrial workers," as a "Devastating piece of legislation".

Mr. Swider further raised the usual scare tactic that the bill would "hamper our recovery and virtually halt construction in the country".

His article is loaded with similar exaggerations and inaccuracies; so many in fact that I doubt if your paper would provide the space to answer or correct them.

It does seem strange to me that an executive of the Chamber of Commerce can be so bitter and vitriolic when something is proposed to improve the conditions of working men and women. Has it never occurred to them that members of the AFL-CIO support the people and agencies who make up the membership of the Chamber. Working people are also bank depositors, customers of retail stores, supermarkets, buy insurance, support churches, public charities, civic organizations, etc. Naturally, the degree of support depends on their own economic condition and necessarily is diminished when they are on welfare rolls or unemployment collection lines.

Brazenly, Mr. Swider attacks Senator Kennedy and Brooke, Congressman Burke and Studds for voting in favor of the bill.

I am confident that they fully understood this legislation and its beneficial effect on the building trades worker. But just in case there was any real merit to Mr. Swider's thesis on this score, is it possible that every other member of Congress could have been equally lacking in knowledge - for the record shows that every single member of the Massachusetts delegation voted to Congress vote in favor!

The final vote in both branches was 52-43 in the Senate and 222-189 in the U.S. House, a victory for the 25 year goal of construction unions and the major legislative goal of the 1975 session.

President Ford vetoed this victory as he did the proposal to fund 5 billion dollars in public works programs to spark a lagging economy. Therefore, the entire matter becomes academic, but certainly worth continued interest and dialogue.

'6,000 For Youth Work

The City Council Monday night appropriated $6,600 to keep the youth work study program afloat.

The program is one in which students from local colleges work in city departments with Quincy picking up 20 or 30 per cent of their salaries.

Director William Trifone said the program serviced more than 100 youngsters in the past year and had run out of funds since Mayor Walter J. Hannan had trimmed its budget.

Trifone had built-in support in the City Council.

Councillor Paul D. Harold had once been one of his students in civics class and Councillor Daniel G. Raymond had taken part in the work study program when he was in college.

SUNBEAMS

How Long Will 'Honeymoon' Last?

By HENRY BOSWORTH

How long will the political "honeymoon" between Mayor Joseph LaRaia and the City Council last?

Some City Hall observers think the first signs of strain may already be setting in.

Traditionally, a City Council politely allows a new chief executive a grace period during which it withholds—publicly at least—criticism until he gets his feet wet in office.

Publicly, this City Council has adopted "a wait and see" attitude toward LaRaia. But privately—some members at least—are irked somewhat over a few recent developments.

One was LaRaia removing Mrs. Dorothy DiBona as secretary to Quincy Hospital Director Harlan Paine. The former personal secretary to Mayor Walter Hannan was one of the most popular persons in City Hall—and one of the most capable and cooperative.

And because she is a widow and mother of three, some of the councillors thought LaRaia could have overlooked her as an 11th hour Hannan appointee at the hospital until at least, she could have found another job.

Another peeve is the third floor conference room where councillors can meet with constituents or schedule. It reportedly has been locked. Councillors were informed to schedule use of the room in advance and then obtain the key from a secretary in the mayor's office.

One councillor was heard banging on the door the other day and yelling "Open up!" until it was opened.

Locks have been changed on a number of doors at City Hall.

LaRaia reportedly has his eye on the City Council office that adjoins his suite on the second floor off the Council Chamber. He would like to place his new budget director, Sarah Saccone there and have the council and council secretary, Louise Brabazon, move to the third floor.

And some councillors privately complain that the door to the mayor's outer office occupied by Executive Director John Salenius is now usually closed making them feel the mayor is not as accessible to them as was Mayor Hannan.

These incidents are not exactly earth shaking. But many a divorce has developed from minor peevess.

BUT, MAYBE IT'S not as bad as some think. His Honor is arranging a basketball doubleheader to benefit the Quincy Youth Commission Feb. 7, 7:30 p.m. at the Quincy Vo-Tech gym. The Fire and Police Departments will square off in one. The other will be Quincy and North Quincy High teachers against "LaRaia's Lancers". The latter will include city councillors. Only $1 per person for a worthy cause.

THE TRADITIONAL GAME of "Who's Coming, Who's Going?" meanwhile continues at City Hall. Mayor LaRaia will be soon announcing more appointments.

One name, however, that has been mentioned prominently in the past, will not be among the major appointees: Norman Forde, a key LaRaia man during the election campaign.

Speculation has had Forde being named hospital director or as head of some other department. But, says he:

"I never asked Joe for a job and he never promised me one. I'm not seeking one and I wouldn't take one if offered to me. I couldn't afford a municipal paid job."

Forde discloses he is going into business for himself. He has formed his own international tire distribution company, with office on Franklin St., Quincy. He will market a tire under his own trade name, manufactured for him by a major tire company.

Forde, who has been an executive with the Concorde Rubber Co. for 15 years says he expects to do a multi-million dollar business.

Forde, however, doesn't close the door on a possible appointment to an unpaid municipal board. "If asked, I would seriously consider it," he says.

JAMES PAPILE is expected to be named to the assessors board any day now. He's a member of the well-known Papile family and brother of former Ward 2 Councillor William Papile.

ASSISTANT CITY Solicitor Robert Fleming is expected to be kept on by LaRaia. But reportedly among those getting bye-bye notices is Downtown Development Director Harvey Towmim. Other notices have also gone out in the past few days.

QUINCY'S SAM MELE, special assignments scout for the Red Sox, is recuperating at home after a gall bladder operation. Sam hadn't been feeling well but thought it was the flu. He was one of the coaches for the Sox team which won the Florida Instructional League title recently.

WELL, if Congressman Morris Udall is elected President, Chick Papile, the Quincy barber, has one of the first invitations to the inauguration. Stopping off at Papile's shop in his Quincy tour Tuesday, Udall told Papile: "You all come to Washington a year from today for the inauguration." You all, Chick will.

An Australian athlete Tom Morris, once skipped his way from Melbourne to Sydney, Australia, a distance of 590 miles—a total of 472,000 skips!

MTA - Railroad Marriage Hailed

By TOM HENSHAW

A special legislative commission recommended daytime use by the Metropolitan Transit Authority (MTA) of three railroad commuter lines, including the Old Colony branch of the New Haven Railroad.

The commission promised:

"Communities which fear the coming of the MTA because of its huge deficit might find that the marriage of the MTA to railroad commuter lines would expand passenger traffic to such an extent that the deficit might melt away and even disappear."

George A. Yarrington, executive secretary of the Quincy Taxpayers Association, also waxed enthusiastic over the commission's conclusions.

"The report," he said, "contains the solution to the problem of our deficit-ridden railroad commuter service."

TRANSPORT PROBLEM SNAGS MAP

City Planning Director Regis J. Harrington had transportation problems of his own.

Seems the Planning Department's request for an automobile of its own was cut from the 1958 budget, leaving Harrington with no way to tour the city's streets while preparing an official map.

He complained that there was no city-owned car for his use and his $45 a month travel allowance was not enough to enable him to complete the mapping job by rented car or taxi-cab.

CHAMBER NAMES FIRST WOMAN

Miss Joan Sullivan of 50 Albion Rd., Wollaston, was named special projects secretary of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, the first woman to hold an executive post in the Chamber's history.

Miss Sullivan, who has been a Chamber secretary for several years, will have charge of the Christmas Festival as well as historical affairs and anniversary celebrations.

CITY COUNCIL DIVIDED

It was reported that the Quincy City Council was dividing into two distinct voting blocs.

One, called the "Old Guard", was made up of Councillors Thomas S. Burgin, Edna B. Austin and David S. McIntosh.

The other was composed of Council President James R. McIntyre and Councillors Charles L. Shea, Carl W. Anderson, Joseph E. Brett, William C. Ellis and John J. Quinn.

WILLIAM MARTIN ELECTED

William J. Martin, president of the South Shore National Bank, was elected chairman of the Board of Managers of Quincy City Hospital.

Dr. Joseph P. Leone, hospital director, reported that the hospital operated at a deficit of $303,190 during 1957.

RENTAL BILL EYED

Figures compiled by City Auditor Alexander Smith showed that Quincy paid $314,904.59 for rental equipment in 1957.

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa served notice that he wants to reduce the rental bill, particularly the $88 a day the city has been paying for a catch basin cleaner hired by the Department of Public Works.

A REGIONAL ECONOMY Working For The State

By ERIC SWIDER

State workers are being laid off. They've been denied a cost-of-living hike this year. With collective bargaining underway, state workers deserve a closer look. State personnel costs are the third largest spending item in the state budget, after welfare and state aid to cities and towns.

Collective bargaining agreements, once reached, could add millions to the state budget and play a key role in the state's continuing fiscal crisis.

How many state employees are there? Where do they work? How much are they paid? How do they compare in salaries and benefits with similar private-sector jobs? Answers to these and other questions are provided in a recent study of the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation.

Massachusetts employs over 66,000 people, including nearly 700 part-time and seasonal workers, according to Division of Personnel Administration reports for September, 1975.

Not included in the 66,000 are over 8,200 employees of the state's independent authorities such as the MBTA.

At least half of the state's permanent positions are located in state institutions, offices, or other locations outside the Boston SMSA, which covers Boston and 78 surrounding cities and towns. Of some 34,000 positions in over 80 state institutions, about 22,000 or 64 percent are located outside the Boston SMSA.

The Legislature, directly or indirectly, fixes all salaries. The salaries of elected officials, judges and various heads of agencies are set specifically by statute. In the executive branch all salaries, except for college faculties and certain administrative officials, are fixed by a general salary schedule which is adopted and revised from time to time by the Legislature. This schedule specifies for each of 33 "job groups" the weekly pay for each position assigned to that group, according to the job-holder's length of service.

Positions are classified by the Bureau of Personnel are grouped together and assigned to job groups on the basis of similar responsibilities, duties and difficulty of work.

Although advancement of individual employees from Step 1 to Step 7 on the salary schedule is not guaranteed, almost all employees do progress to their maximum rates. Salaries of employees of the Legislature are set by legislative committees.

The foremost objective of the state's salary policy is, or should be, to pay for each job whatever is necessary to attract and hold good workers in state service within the means of the state and with consideration of the value of job security and other fringe benefits. In other words, the state should meet market standards of pay, job for job, as long as these are reasonable.

To determine the "market" levels of pay for key positions by other public and private employers, the state has depended for a number of years on salary surveys made by the Bureau of Personnel. Those surveys, however, have failed to represent private employers outside the Boston area where a majority of all state workers are employed. All but one of the 16 private employers in the state's survey are located in the Boston metropolitan area.

Accordingly, the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation surveyed 18 major private employers - manufacturers, hospitals, banks, insurance companies and utilities - in the Springfield-Holyoke, Worcester, Fall River-New Bedford and Lowell-Lawrence areas.

The Foundation survey discloses that Boston area salaries paid by private employers tend to be higher than those in other parts of the state by a significant margin - more than 7 percent on the average.

It also shows that for positions involving the largest number of job-holders, state salaries on the average exceed private rates outside Boston by some 5 percent. State workers are also found to fair better than their private counterparts outside Boston in a number of important fringe benefits.

The Foundation survey, completed in early 1975, adopted the forms, procedures, and summary job descriptions of the state's survey, the resulting data must be taken as indicative rather than definitive since exact comparability of the duties of each position cannot be assumed. For each of 12 of the surveyed positions outside the Boston area, the number of employees reported by the private employers exceeded 75. For all but three of these 12 positions the state salary exceeded the average private rate by from 0.6 percent in the case of attendant nurses to 15.7 percent for institution domestic workers. Here they are:

Position	Salary Range		% State over Private
	State	Private

LIVING TODAY

'My Husband Won't Make Decisions'

By DR. WILLIAM F. KNOX

Dear Dr. Knox:

I have a husband who just won't make decisions. He has always left everything up to me. "What shall we give the children for Christmas," I used to say. His answer was always ... "I don't care ... anything you want." He would never make a decision. We couldn't talk things out. He was always evasive ... could hardly decide what to order in a restaurant ... dropped out of college because he couldn't decide what courses to select ... always took me with him to buy his clothes because he couldn't decide. Our relationship went down to nothing, and finally I've asked him to leave the house. Now he can't decide when to leave. What makes a person so indecisive? He seems so very weak. I have no respect for him now. What can I do? I don't want to spend the rest of my life with a man I can't talk things through with. I read your column in our local paper, so please tell me how to deal with this problem.

Sincerely, C.T.

Dear C.T.:

Your husband suffers from what we call decisionphobia ... the fear of making a decision. Other parts of your letter indicate that this fear has gripped him many years, long before you knew him. In his case, his strong, domineering mother made all his decisions for him. Now in his adult life, he leans on someone else ... in this case the second woman in his life, his wife, to make his decisions. His fear of making the wrong decision hangs over him so heavily that he won't take the risk ... even on matters which make no difference

... like ordering a meal, or buying a suit of clothes.

Mother fear is a real thing which afflicts many men ... and slope over into the relationship with all women. These men have not learned to think for themselves ... to make decisions. So they often disguise their fear by seeming to cooperate with the wishes of a girl friend or young wife. The wise young woman begins to see that this trait isn't goodness and loving consideration, but a weakness which in time will become a burden. You have found this to be true.

Your husband needs counseling help. He doesn't have to live on indefinitely with this handicap. He will need to sit down with a counselor he can trust, who will teach him how to make decisions ... not tell him what to decide ... but help to learn the principles for decision-making ... how to get the facts ... weigh the results of this ... of that course of action ... measure which will be better for me. With some guidance in practicing decision making, your husband ... or nearly any man ... can learn. He will need to deal with the here-and-now situation ... even if his mother did do a number on him in early life.

What shall you do about it? Suggest counseling for both of you. He may be more receptive than you first think, because decisionphobia is as painful an ailment for the sufferer as for its victim.

FOR YOUR COMMENTS: For private counseling, telephone counseling, contact Dr. Knox at 659-7595 or 326-5990 or write to 320 Washington St., Norwell, Ma. For his book "People Are For Loving" send $2. to Norwell address.

Starting your car noisily not only bothers the neighbors, it blows out a good deal of oil and smoke and hurts your engine.

Creedon Seeks Half-Day Double Sessions

"I feel that double sessions are deplorable. But I don't see any better solution to the problem."

"It certainly does no good to go back and say that we should have done this or we shouldn't have done that."

"A decision is way overdue. It's a shame it was allowed to go this long."

Mayor LaRaia, an opponent of the plan to close North Quincy High, said he planned to ask an extension of up to 30 days "to get together available resources and review this thing."

He also said he wanted the opportunity to meet with the State School Building Assistance Bureau, whose approval is necessary if the city is to obtain reimbursement for 50 per cent of building costs.

"I have been meeting with groups from around the city for the past week," said LaRaia, "and I have gone outside the city to look at the way it has been handled elsewhere."

"Obviously, it takes time. I don't want to feel as if we are doing this under the gun."

Dr. Creedon said there was some question as to whether the insurance company that writes policies on the students would honor a claim made in a building unless all the recommendations of safety officials were met.

He said he could not get a firm "yes or no" from the companies.

Quincy Fire Chief Edward F.

Barry, Building Inspector Allan F. MacDonald and State Building Inspector Joseph A. DiCicco have recommended against occupancy of the building during renovations and construction.

Meanwhile, the City Council lent its support to the Mayor in the form of a resolution that could give the School Committee a reason to put off a vote for a while longer.

Councillor Dennis E. Harrington pointed out during Monday night's meeting that the Department of Public Works, and thus the Mayor, has jurisdiction over city buildings under construction.

Only after construction is completed, he said, does the School Committee take over the building.

He asked that the legal problem of who is in charge of the building while construction is underway be turned over to the city solicitor for a ruling.

"I hope that the School Committee will not reach a decision Wednesday night while the solicitor is researching for the City Council and the Mayor," said Harrington.

Council President Arthur H. Tobin picked up the ball from there.

"It is my understanding," he said in a letter to the Mayor, "that the Mayor has the total prerogative for the execution of construction contracts for the construction and renovations of public buildings, [schools] pursuant to a bond issue.

"This interpretation states that the mayor has the sole jurisdiction in establishing scheduling of the construction project which would include safeguarding the safety of our children."

"I hope you will exercise the authority of your office to keep the school open with the primary objective being the safety of the children so that we will not lose a generation of high school students at North Quincy High."

"The City Council may not have any legal input into this situation," said Councillor Daniel C. Raymond, a former School Committee member, "but it is important for all of us to call members of the Committee and tell them how we feel."

"It is no longer a North Quincy problem. It encompasses the entire city of Quincy."

"I hope that people all over the city will get in touch with the School Committee or Dr. Creedon or someone on his staff and let them know how they feel."

"I want to go on record as opposed to double sessions," said Councillor Warren A. Harrington, and he echoed the feelings and frustrations of a lot of Quincy people when he added:

"I don't know the exact answer, but there has to be another way."

In Quincy Visit

Udall Says Intergration Should Have U.S. Aid, Minimum Busing

By TOM BRADY

Congressman Morris K. Udall, Democratic candidate for President, said Tuesday in Quincy, that busing of school children was counter productive and that the federal government should encourage communities to try and integrate their schools on their own with a minimum of busing.

Udall, on a two day campaign swing through Massachusetts, spent a day in Quincy, visiting 1000 Southern Artery, his campaign headquarters at 4 Maple St., the Adams birthplaces and the Quincy Sun.

He was escorted by City Councillor Paul Harold.

On the busing issue, Udall said:

"I believe in an integrated society," but added that he felt communities should be given federal money if they develop their own plans for racial integration.

"A bill I introduced in Congress," he said "would encourage communities to sit down as communities and map out a plan to reduce busing. I think the black groups who filed these suits would hold off on them if they saw co-operation in getting better schools and housing."

The 14-year Congressman from Arizona also suggested that the federal government should limit imports of foreign oil to force oil producing nations to bid against one another for a piece of the American oil market.

"With that plan," Udall said, "We might be able to set Saudi Arabia competing with Venezuela and so get the price down, or at least stop the increases."

Udall has also suggested a small tax on gasoline to limit consumption if the tax is linked to a rebate program.

During the campaign swing, Thomas Boylston Adams, a descendant of John and John Quincy Adams and one time candidate for the U.S. Senate endorsed Udall at the Adams birthplaces, saying he was the best of the Democratic candidates.

"The best of these [candidates]" Adams said, "the one most able, judged by his past record and the apparent decency of his character and abilities of his mind, to restore our nation to the respect of the world, and its government to the people seems to be Morris Udall."

After a visit to 1000 Southern Artery, Udall said that the Social Security Program would need some additional funding "for a while".

Montilio's Bakery Presents

Guest Editors -
Mrs. Ananis Third Grade
At Mass Fields School

A NEWSPAPER FOR AND BY THE CHILDREN OF QUINCY

Photography, Peter Jabaily

Have You Seen the Muffin Man

What's cooking? The parents, teachers and children of Mass Fields School are gathering their favorite recipes and making a dessert cookbook. It will have recipes for adults and for children. They plan to sell the cookbook on Institute Day in May and the profits will be divided between the Quincy Scholarship Fund and the PTO Fund. To announce this cookbook, we devote this "Young Ideas" issue to baking. Our sponsor is Montilio's Bakery. Our assistant editors are children in Mrs. Ananis' third grade at Mass Fields School. To get recipes for the children's section of the cookbook, we are having a recipe contest. See the back page. Winning recipes will be featured in the cookbook.

The children in Mrs. Ananis' third grade were interested in how a bakery works. Kenny Runge, 8, asks Mr. George Montilio some of their questions.

Artwork by Kenny Runge, 8

Mr. Montilio, what bakery product do you sell more than any other?

I'd say birthday cakes, Kenny. We sell about 2,500 a week.

Do you bake fresh every day?

We sure do, Kenny. We have 80 people working 7 days a week. One shift starts at 2 a.m. baking danish, muffins and bread. At 7 a.m., the cake shift comes on. They make donuts, turnovers and cakes. Then, the frosters begin working.

How do you know what to bake each day?

Orders come in the night before from our stores in Cohasset, Hanover and Quincy. There is a foreman and 5 people who tell the others what to bake.

What is the hardest thing to bake?

Sfogliotelli, Kenny. This is an Italian pastry in the shape of a clam shell filled with custard. We start with a 20-pound piece of dough 30 feet long. We roll it out until it is paper thin. We roll it tightly like a jelly roll and refrigerate it. Next two men pull the dough like a taffy pull until it is just 2" in diameter. Then we slice it into narrow wafers and spread them until they look like clam shells. Then we fill the shells with custard.

What is the biggest cake you've ever made?

The biggest was the Quincy Bicentennial cake. It weighed 6,000 pounds and covered a 40 foot float. It was 10 feet high. We used 1500 pounds of eggs, 2000 pounds of sugar and 1700 pounds of flour. It was a reproduction of all the historical spots in Quincy. We're baking lots of these specialty cakes. Recently we've done a gigantic Big Mac for MacDonalds, a 3000-pound Kentucky Derby cake which needed a fork lift to carry it and a 400 square foot cake for Hanover Mall.

How many ovens do you have?

We have three, Kenny. One is the newest oven available which holds 80 sheet pans at a time. Another is the oldest available—a circular, moving oven. We have to peel the cakes out like bakers did two hundred years ago. We use a peeler that looks like a huge spatula. Also, we have a 42-pan oven.

How do you make brownies so they don't get hard?

Kenny, for every bakery product, it is the formula of the batter that counts. If you have the right amount of each ingredient, the texture of your product will be perfect.

I saw the cake you made for the Red Sox when they came home from the World Series. How did you make that?

Kenny, we only had 12 hours to make that cake. Usually I have time to draw a blueprint. If you'll remember, the cake was a replica of Fenway Park. We had figures of all the players. The grandstands were millions of dots of different colored frosting. We had a huge baseball hat and a baseball; 4 feet in diameter. When we were carrying the baseball out to the truck, guess what happened! It cracked in half. I had to fill the crack with frosting and freeze it. And a few hours later it was okay.

If I Were A Baker

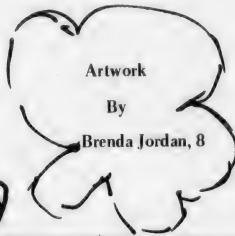

I wouldn't be a very good baker. Because I'm afraid I'd eat all the food.
Patty Gibbons, 8

I would bake a huge vanilla Valentine heart-shaped cake for all my friends.

I would like to make a huge cake in the shape of a rocket for the fourth of July.

The Magic Cupcake

One day there was a cupcake that came to life and a little boy bought him. That little boy was going to eat him until he said "Stop! Don't eat me up because I am magic and I can get you anything you want." "Anything?" said the little boy. "You mean like a bike, stuffed animals, fire trucks?" "No, I mean like cupcakes, cookies, brownies and a birthday cake on your birthday every year for the rest of your life." So the little boy decided to keep him forever. He put him in his room so no one would hurt him.

'Spend, Spend' has depleted the woodpile

By Philip J. Lawrence, President of Quincy, Holbrook and Wrentham

8 - 6 Weekdays 8 - 7:30 Thursdays

We in the savings and loan industry felt almost guilty throughout the post-war years as we urged thrift while many economists preached that the secret of this country's economic success was spending. "Spend more," they cried, "and keep industry's wheels rolling."

Now we are learning that industry's wheels cannot go faster to meet consumer demands simply because it can't get the capital for investment in plant development.

Reminds us of the backwoods fellow who used up the stock-pile of wood his father had laboriously cut—until he finally ran out and one winter froze to death. He hadn't replenished it.

It comes as a shock to learn that this country has one of the lowest percentages of investment in capital development in the industrialized world. We trail even such economically distressed nations as Italy and Britain and are far behind Japan, whose people are saving over 23 per cent of all personal disposable income, as compared with only 10 per cent for the U.S.

Yet some economists

BUSINESS/REAL ESTATE NEWS

COMPLETED -- 77 Adams Place, the 134-unit luxury high rise apartment complex, has been completed and is now celebrating its grand opening.

77 Adams Place Has Grand Opening

Quincy's 10-year, multi-million dollar plan for revitalizing its downtown area has received a substantial boost with the completion of 77 Adams Place, a 134-unit luxury high rise apartment complex.

Located adjacent to the estate of President John Adams and on the edge of the downtown area, 77 Adams Place marks the cornerstone of the renewal area.

Thirty percent of the units were rented prior to completion. Current renter profiles indicate a wide age range from the 20's to the 70's, with the median around 50. Two thirds of the new residents come from the local area. About half of these are selling their homes in favor of the convenience of an apartment; the other half come from other apartments. Those who work in Boston will leave their cars at home and take the MBTA Red Line, a short walk away.

The building features a rooftop pool, clubhouse, and saunas. The furnished model and office are open every day, 10 to 6.

Rents for a one bedroom start at $320 and for a two bedroom, $400. 77 Adams Place is a joint venture between Peabody Construction Company and Corcoran, Mullins, Jennison, Inc.

SGM Increases New Business Over $1 Million

SGM & Company, a long time member of the Greater Boston advertising community, will end this year with the greatest gain in a single year's billings in the agency's 28-year history, announces Robert H. Brandt, president.

With a total of 15 clients, SGM has added more than $1 million in billings in 1975.

"And this is but one step in our planned growth program," Brandt said. He added that the agency, located in Quincy, now has a good cross section of industrial, commercial and consumer accounts.

"It is this ratio of accounts which is the source of strength, stability and creativity of our agency. It is what we have been working toward for the past several years as we shifted from completely technical/industrial activities."

Some of the accounts added include: The Patriot Ledger,

Quincy: Spectrametrics, Inc., Andover; South Shore Co-operative Bank, Weymouth; Metabolic Products Corp., Cambridge; Dymno Business Systems, Inc., Randolph; Colonial Village, Quincy; Frost Controls, Inc., Cumberland, R.I.; Meditron Instrument Corporation, Milford, N.H.; Barker's, Quincy; Crosby Valve & Gage Company, Wrentham; Yankee Outlet, Quincy/Ilyannis.

Norfolk County Trust Reports Deposits Up $53 Million

The Norfolk County Trust Co. has reported a $53 million increase in deposits for the year ending Dec. 31, 1975, but at the same time earnings for the year slumped 4.3 per cent.

Deposits rose to $378,528,368, a 16.2 per cent gain over the $325,980,987 recorded a year ago.

Total assets went up to $421,512,498, a gain of 14.4 per cent over the 1974 figure of $368,456,761.

Earnings declined to $4,603,174 from the record high of $4,801,137 in 1974.

Bank President John F. Graham attributed the major portion of the growth in deposits and assets to consumer acceptance of new products and services offered by the bank in 1975.

'Voice Of Business' Program Underway By Chamber

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce has launched a program called "The Voice of Business '76'" to develop communication between itself and community groups and bring about a better understanding of issues confronting the area.

Chamber President Jack Conway said the program will offer knowledgeable speakers to South Shore clubs and organizations on any one of more than 100 projects the chamber is taking on during 1976.

The South Shore Chamber, the largest suburban chamber of commerce in the United States, directs the bulk of its efforts toward improving employment, transportation and working with elected officials on beneficial legislation.

Conway reported that he has commitments from each of the 36 members of the Chamber board of directors to participate in "The Voice of Business '76'."

Groups interested in the program should contact Executive Vice President Eric Swider at 36 Miller Stile Rd, Quincy, Mass. 02169, or call him at 479-1111.

environmental services, said: "The bars seem to need more attention. When the bars get busy, it's sometimes questionable how well the glasses get washed."

And the inspectors are tough. Wade says if he discovers utensil bacterial count exceeding the norm in more than two instances, he orders all the silverware cleaned immediately.

"You can't come back in one or two days," he said. "You have a potential health hazard and it must be corrected immediately."

According to Dr. Alfred V. Mahoney, who recently retired as the city's health commissioner to return to full-time private practice, Quincy's food service establishments measure up to the strict sanitary standards. "The restaurants are in excellent shape and the bar rooms are in good shape," Dr. Mahoney said. "We get excellent co-operation. And I think these men [referring to his staff of inspectors] do a fabulous job - and I can be a crab sometimes."

In his five years as Quincy's Health Commissioner, Dr. Mahoney closed only one restaurant in the city after the owner refused to correct violations.

In addition to the meticulous examination of restaurants and barrooms, the inspectors also monitor sanitary conditions in supermarkets throughout the city.

An entire team of investigation - a building inspector, a fire department representative and a health inspector - visits lodging homes, day-care centers and nursing homes in Quincy.

Health Inspector Albert Finn says the team inspects common kitchens and baths in the city's 39 lodging homes, and checks everything from mattresses to hot plates to the building's smoke detection system.

A similar team peruses the 20 day care centers in Quincy, checking wall sockets, water temperature, the fire alarm system and sanitary conditions in the cooking area.

Nursing homes receive spot-checks, too, and Wade says managers of the homes notify the sanitation division whenever an epidemic or contagious disease begins to spread.

Once a month, the division inspects the dietary kitchen and housekeeping department at Quincy City Hospital and conducts swabs on glasses and utensils four times every year.

The inspectors' job doesn't end there. They also investigate consumer complaints ranging from soured milk to moldy beer to unkempt restaurant rest rooms.

Some three years ago, the division seized and destroyed over 1,000 bottles of tonic which contained petroleum distillate. A consumer had complained to the division about "the funny-tasting tonic."

Inspectors must also investigate the scene of a fire involving a food-service establishment. Glynn explained the inspectors must assess the condition of all foods, condemning the unsalvageable products, okaying the undamaged goods and impounding other produce for further inspection.

An inspector must also monitor the destruction of all fire-damaged produce ruled unusable. The goods are brought to the disposal area where an inspector watches the material be crushed and covered to prevent possible reclaiming or consumption.

Thus, the entire team of inspectors - which also includes Carmelo Morreale and Frederick Prezioso - helps to protect the public in myriad ways. Proud of his staff, Dr. Mahoney said:

"I think the people of Quincy are fortunate to have these services."

Traffic Controls To Be Studied

The City Council Monday night approved and passed on to the Traffic Commission for study requests for the following traffic controls:

- Signs making Sachem St., Wollaston, one way eastbound from Quincy Shore Drive to Franklin Ave.

- Councillor Warren A. Powers presented a petition containing 80 names in support of the request "to ease the heavy flow of traffic, particularly in the spring, summer and fall months."

- Signs limiting to two hours parking in the vicinity of 792 Southern Artery, where, said Councillor Daniel G. Raymond, there are "inadequate parking facilities presently."

- Stop signs at the intersection of Cross and Copeland Sts., West Quincy.

Your Name On Sign Invitation To Burglars

It is fashionable in some quarters to have one's name printed in large letters on a sign in front of one's home.

It helps give one a feeling of belonging, of putting down roots.

It may be helpful to burglars, too.

Police Chief Francis X.

Finn feels recent arrests in the Wollaston section points to a gang that has parlayed the signs into a lucrative series of house breaks.

Arrested members of the gang were found to have in their possession a list of names and phone numbers of people living in the vicinity of recent breaks. All had their names on signs outside their houses.

Chief Finn said the burglars apparently jotted down the name from the sign, looked up the phone number, made calls until no one answered and then broke into the empty home.

A Year Of Growth

1975 was an excellent growth year for The Quincy Co-operative Bank, as these comparative figures will indicate:

	December 31, 1973	December 31, 1974	December 31, 1975
Total Assets	$90,909,102.26	$89,769,754.83	$96,758,784.89
Total Share Capital	$78,200,670.16	$77,350,730.85	$84,409,450.87
Total Surplus & Reserves	$ 8,708,707.68	$ 9,612,235.37	$ 9,980,151.33
Total Required Liquidity	$ 6,672,825.79	$ 6,732,230.03	$ 6,857,845.03
Total Actual Liquidity	$ 7,418,336.43	$10,541,597.87	$17,121,880.05
In excess of requirements for liquidity	$ 745,510.64	$ 3,809,367.84	$10,264,035.02

* These are the funds set aside for the protection of your deposits. Our most recent figures for surplus and reserves show The Quincy Co-operative Bank reserves to assets at 10.31%, while the statewide average for all co-operative banks is 7.19%.

The Bank's fiscal year ends April 30, 1976, and a fiscal year report will be issued at that time. However, our 1975 calendar year growth has been so impressive, we wanted to share this data with our customers and friends. The good record is a tribute to the hard work of the officers and staff and the excellent guidance of our Board of Directors.

In addition to our financial growth in 1975, we opened our very well received 1000 Southern Artery branch office, and next month we will be opening our new branch in Braintree.

To all of our customers, we say thanks for your confidence and patronage. We will continue to bring you the latest services in banking, administered by our talented and friendly staff.

NQHS: A Problem That Has Been Brewing For 12 Years

By TOM HENSHAW

It has been on the city's agenda for nearly a dozen years now.

Youngsters then just born are now almost ready for high school.

But will there be a high school ready for them?

It was in 1964 that a report by the Arthur D. Little Co. suggested all was not right with North Quincy High School.

The site was not big enough; 33 classrooms were too small; 46 more did not have adequate blackboard or teaching space; the library, home economics and science areas were badly outdated.

It was no one's fault in particular. Old age was catching up with the building at the corner of Hancock and East Squantum Sts.

North Quincy High School was built in the late 1920's as a junior high school for 1,600 students.

Since that time it had undergone only one major addition, the Cap Bryan Gym, dedicated in 1962.

The addition of the Teale and Little Buildings in 1970 provided little in the way of relief as student population soared to 2,000.

In 1972, the school was given a two-year accreditation by the New England Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges.

Normally, a 10-year accreditation is awarded but the NEASS found "the present facility was not adequately housing the needs of the different students in a comprehensive high school."

It was, in effect, on probation until something was done.

Ideally, the solution would have been a brand new high school.

This would have solved more than simply the problem of North Quincy High.

The old high school building could have become what it was originally intended to be, a junior high school.

Atlantic Junior High then could have been an elementary school.

This would have relieved the problem of the 80-year-old Central Junior High and permitted the retirement of Massachusetts Fields School.

"Central will need a new certificate of occupancy in 1977," says School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon.

"It may be very costly to stay in Central under the new building code.

"It is possible that the building inspector will tell us parts of Central are no longer usable."

Several sites for a new high school were discussed and rejected.

The Montclair Marshes off West Squantum St. were turned down by the City Council as potentially too valuable for commercial purposes.

The best choice appeared to be a 58.8-acre section of the old Squantum Naval Air Station.

It was one of the few open spots in the city that fulfilled the state requirement of 55 acres for a 2,500-student high school.

But the City Council rejected that site too as being too remote from the big population areas of the city.

Thus, all proposals for a new high school went by the boards.

The next best thing was an addition to the old high school that would expand its student capacity from 1,600 to 2,400.

It seemed simple, but state guidelines intervened.

The old high school occupied 5.3 acres. An addition would necessitate a minimum of 12 acres to satisfy the state.

And the state had to be satisfied so that the city could get a 65 per cent reimbursement on the cost of construction.

[Reimbursement went down to 50 per cent on July 1, 1975, so the city lost that much by the long delay.]

The first plan advanced was a free-standing addition in the rear of the present building.

But it would have required the taking of 25 homes on Hunt, Oliver and Price Sts., giving the school 14 acres.

The City Council turned that down, and, in December, 1974, came up with a plan of its own.

It voted to request a $12 million bond issue for renovations and additions with these stipulations:

Expansion must not exceed 100,000 square feet; the city must receive 65 per cent reimbursement; it must not cost Quincy more than $4 million; there must be no land taking by eminent domain.

The state's School Building Assistance Bureau turned that one down.

Finally, early in 1975, a plan was approved to build an attached 150,000 square foot addition which, with renovations to the old building, would cost $15 million.

But the problems of North Quincy High School were far from over.

Fire Chief Edward F. Barry, City Building Inspector Allan F. MacDonald and State Building Inspector Joseph A. DiCicco strongly recommended that the building not be occupied during construction.

"Buildings in the course of their construction are inherently more hazardous," they said in a letter to the School Committee. "Buildings undergoing alterations also possess hazards that are severe."

But what do you do with 1,800 students during the three years that their school is being constructed and renovated?

Dr. Creedon's answer - double sessions at Quincy High School, a phrase that is becoming to Quincy what forced busing is to South Boston.

"Some people are saying they didn't realize double sessions are in the works," said Dr. Creedon as he disclosed his recommendation to the School Committee.

"I alerted the School Committee in February and March of 1970 that unless the situation in North Quincy was corrected we would be in double sessions by the mid-1970's.

"In a report in August, 1973, I talked about the possibility of double sessions. In November, 1974, and April, 1975, I alerted the School Committee 11 times.

"People seem to think that we never talked about double sessions. The record clearly shows that we did."

And that's where North Quincy High School stands now, 12 years after the fuss began, moving inexorably toward double sessions - unless someone comes up with a better idea.

Quincy Court Earn-It, Drug Programs Receive $80,000

By TOM BRADY

Presiding Justice Albert L. Kramer, at Quincy District Court, announced Tuesday that two new court programs have received over $80,000 in federal grants to operate during the year and introduced the newly appointed directors of the programs.

The Earn-It program, an innovative sentencing program which will provide young offenders with a temporary job to allow them to work to pay restitution for their offenses, will receive $33,000 in Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) funds.

These funds will be used to pay a staff for the program and Kramer announced the appointments of Andrew Klein, an Administrative Assistant to Atty. Gen. Francis X. Bellotti, as director and Robert E. Flaherty, a Quincy resident, as Probation Coordinator for the program.

These two men will be responsible for the entire program including soliciting area businesses for work for the offenders, screening of both the employers and their prospective employees and placement. They will work closely with the court's probation department to supervise the youths hired.

Kramer also announced that the Drug Addiction Screening and Rehabilitation Unit at the Court has received $49,000 in grants from the same source. This Unit attempts to discover drug addiction problems among defendants and offers treatment to them as part of their court supervised rehabilitation.

Robert Hassey, formerly Executive Director of Survival, Inc., a Quincy human service agency, was named to direct the Drug Screening program.

Kramer had high praise for these three men and said that their arrival and the start of the programs "begins a new era in this court's efforts to rehabilitate offenders and protect the community."

Another program at the court, the Alcohol Education and Counseling Program, Kramer said, has treated 519 individuals charged with operating a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol.

Alcohol Programs director Robert McMakin, revealed that, while treating the offenders, the program has also turned a profit, which has been paid back into the state's general treasury. Participants in the program pay to take part, and to date have paid $74,000 more than the program costs to operate in this county.

The state uses this money to pay the costs of those who cannot afford the payments or to supplement similar programs in other areas that do not break even.

Klein, the director of Earn-It said that he and his staff would be interviewing businessmen who volunteer to hire young offenders in the program. Currently over 4,000 hours of employment has been volunteered.

The Earn-It staff will consider the job's requirements and the abilities and aptitude of the young offenders who are placed in the program and will try to match both so the employment can be successful.

The offenders will not get permanent jobs but will keep the jobs only until they have earned enough to pay back any damages they have caused.

Judge Kramer said that he was still formulating policies to deal with and determine which youths will be placed in the program, how much they can earn, and other questions about the Earn-It program.

New Criminal Trial Schedule At Quincy Court

A new system for scheduling criminal trial in Quincy District Court was announced Tuesday by Presiding Justice Albert L. Kramer who said the new system could save the state and localities money by limiting the number of times police and welfare officials come to court to act as witnesses.

Kramer said as of this month all larceny cases will be heard on the third Monday of each month. He said that this would free policemen from having to make several trips to court because they could take part in a number of cases in the same day.

All non-support cases, Kramer said, will be heard on the first Monday of every month so Welfare officials who testify in such cases will not be taken away from their jobs as often.

Kramer said that this change alone could save the state the equivalent cost of five full time positions in the Welfare Department.

Finally Kramer said that all shoplifting cases will come to court on the second Monday of each month so the store owners and businesses in the court's jurisdiction can make similar savings by sending employees to court only once a month to prosecute cases.

Quincy Continues To Roll, North Has Ups And Downs

Quincy's basketball team continues to roll along toward the best season in a good many years and the way they are going, Joe Amoroso's Presidents could be among the first teams to qualify for the Eastern Mass. Tournament, something which has evaded Quincy teams for several years.

Last Friday Quincy handed Cambridge Latin its 53rd straight defeat, 71-46, as Amoroso used everyone to give the reserves a lot of playing time. The win raised the Presidents' record to 8-1 in the Suburban League and 10-1 overall. Quincy needs only 14 wins or a first or second place league finish to make the tournament. Its only loss was a one-pointer to Rindge Tech, which is 9-0 in the league and 11-1 overall.

Meanwhile, Bob Nolan's North Quincy team, having its ups and downs, found out why Rindge is unbeaten in league play when it dropped a 83-72 decision at Rindge, dropping its record to 5-4 in the league and 6-4 overall.

Friday night Quincy hosts Weymouth North and North Quincy plays at Waltham. Next Tuesday the Presidents and Raiders clash for the second time at North Quincy. Quincy pulled out a one-point squeaker in their first meeting.

Amoroso credits the all-around play of the Presidents for their success. "The boys have been doing everything well, shooting, rebounding and playing great defense," Amoroso said. "The team play is a big factor. John Riggs is averaging 26 points a game but he is not a gunner and passes off for many other baskets. He has also been great off the boards. Against Cambridge Latin I substituted freely and some of the reserves got in a lot of playing time."

Riggs had been noted for his football ability with several colleges after him, but he has developed into one of the best basketball players in the Suburban League and now has a number of college basketball scouts looking at him.

Against Cambridge Latin Mike Lamie had 14 points, Riggs and Bob Dacey 13 each, Jack Uhlir nine and Bob Silva seven.

Rindge Tech's size and speed were too much for North Quincy and despite the loss, Nolan praised the Raiders and said they played the type of game they wanted. However, the tall Tech players hit on many easy layups.

Joel Devin and Dan Cuddy had 13 points apiece, Paul Kelleher 12 and Rich Mahoney and Jay Nelson 10 each.

North's junior varsity, coached by Eddie Miller, ran its undefeated streak to 10 with a 15-point victory.

Earlier last week Quincy had a slight letdown after two straight one-point games but defeated Newton North, 65-60, as Riggs had another big night with 26 points, 10 rebounds, four steals and three assists. Uhlir had 14 point and 12 rebounds, including some big one late in the game when Newton kept threatening. Quincy won the game from the foul line with a 19-8 edge, as Newton outscored the Presidents from the floor, 26-23.

Steve Connolly was outstanding with eight assists and eight steals.

North Quincy had an up and down night but a third period splurge and some more fine defense gave the Raiders a 58-56 win over Weymouth South.

Leading only 31-30 at the half, North had a 17-9 edge in the third period to take a 48-39 lead into the finale and then held South off.

Mahoney scored 19 points and Kelleher and Devin had 12 each. Nolan had words of praise for reserves Cuddy, Jim McGinley, Scott Roberts and Jack Browne.

North jayvees continued to roll along unbeaten with a 62-45 win to make their record 9-0. Jim Smith had 13 points and Jim Watts 10.

North On Top, Quincy Finds Hard Times

North Quincy' track team, back in a tie for first place in the Suburban League, will face Waltham Saturday at 10 a.m. at Newton North, site of all league games, while Quincy, which has fallen on hard times, meets co-leader Rindge Tech at the same time.

Last Saturday Lou Tozzi's Raiders, defeated only by Weymouth South, easily took Brookline, 61-25, and joined Weymouth South, defeated for the first time by Brockton last week, Rindge and Brockton in a four-way tie for the lead. Each team has a 5-1 record.

Even without the brilliant Bart Petracca, North had no trouble with Brookline as four Raiders turned in their best performances ever.

Dave Lorman's 6.3 second mark was his best as he won the hurdles, Jerry MacKenzie won the 600 with his best effort, 1:20.5. Jim Gavigan did 2:32.6 in the 1000 to finish second to teammate Ken O'Brien, and Steve Bonoli did 5-8 to place third behind teammate Rich Mahoney in the high jump.

Mike Morin won the mile with Mike Barrett second, North swept the two-mile with Bob Levenson first, brother Marty second and Dave Abbott third, Jim Cooney won the shot put at 43 feet, 1 1/2 inches, and Matty Constantino and Mike Adams finished 1-2 in the dash.

Paul McGuigan was second and Tim O'Neil third in the 300. Quincy was wallowed by Newton North, 60-26, to drop its record to 2-4 after dividing its first four meets.

In its previous meet North had suffered its only loss at the hands of Weymouth North, 55-31, as the Raiders failed for the first time to dominate the distance runs. Petracca in the 1000 had the only distance win. Quincy had lost to Waltham by the same score.

Petracca recently was upset by Jeff King of Dartmouth in the 1000-yard run in the state coaches' meet at Northeastern University, but it took a record performance [2:19.0] to upset him. Petracca earlier had broken the school and league records in the mile and two-mile runs.

Wrestling

Quincy's Experience Paying Off

Quincy High's wrestling team, in its second season after the sport was revived a year ago, is doing well after having its troubles last year against much more experienced teams and Coach Carmen Mariano's Presidents have a respectable 5-4 record.

The experience gained last year and the excellent junior high program are paying off for the Quincy grapplers.

"I wish more parents and students would turn out for our home meets," Mariano said. "We could use the support and I know the boys would appreciate it. They are doing a fine job and deserve more fan support."

The Presidents defeated Brookline and Weston in its last two matches to get its winning record.

Other wins were over Randolph, Weymouth North and Bridgewater-Raynham. While the losses were to Stoughton, Marshfield, Needham and Duffee.

"I'm extremely proud of these kids," Mariano said. "We have a few weak spots but, in general, we have progressed well as the season goes along."

Quincy has looked especially strong through the middle weight classes. Joe Moran is 7-0 with five pins in the 147-pound class. Brian Kelly has also done well in that class.

At 140 Timmy Cahill and Dan Thibault have six wins, two ties and two losses between them.

Gary Oriola has been holding down the 134-pound class single-handedly and is 7-1-1. All five of these boys are juniors and showing steady improvement.

Others showing steady improvement are Wayne Gardner [156] and Eddie Towers [128].

The heavier weight classes are handled by Sam Gravina and Mike Doherty [seniors at 169]; Lenny Picot, fine sophomore prospect, and one of the season's standouts, Anthony Luongo, a junior with a record of 6-2-1.

"Tony has been remarkable," Mariano said. "He weighs 175 but has beaten five opponents in the 187-pound class and pinned a Weston wrestler who weighs 215."

Rounding out the squad are the lightweight, Paul Madden [senior at 121]; Tom Bamberg [107-pound junior]; Dan Madden, Lou Ventrelli, and Joe Zimmerman, all sophomores; and two promising sophomore middleweights, Don Heath and Jack DeCelle.

"Barring any major injuries, and considering the dedication these boys keep showing me, I see a very, very promising future for wrestling at Quincy High School," Mariano concluded.

Meanwhile, Art Fallon's North Quincy wrestlers, who had started in fine fashion, dropped its last two matches to schoolboy powerhouses, Stoughton and Brockton, dropping its record to 3-5.

The Raiders lost to Stoughton, 30-18, last Friday, but Ed Beck and Karl Knudsen remained undefeated. Other North winners were Steve Ketches, Mike Nee and Rich Schiarizzi.

North bowed to undefeated Brockton, 44-20, with Knudsen, pinning his opponent and Beck getting a draw. Butch Montoya and Ed Evenson also won.

Sterling Matmen Defeat Point, Central

The Sterling Junior High wrestling team is coming along well under the coaching of Steve Joyce.

Following losses to Broad Meadows, 24-20, and to Atlantic North, 29-20, Sterling bounced back to roll over Point, 40-9, and Central, 42-13.

After the first three meets Steve Picot was 3-0-0 and Kevin McCarthy, Jimmy Mullarkey and Steve Venturilli were 2-0-1. None of them wrestled against Central and Joyce gave several of his younger grapplers a chance. Sterling had seven pins in the romp.

Ninth graders on the team are

Eighth graders are Dave Preston, 80; Charles Romano, 90; Bob Romano, 80; Sam Hassen, 100; Joe Callahan, 106; Jeff Heath, 155; Co-Capt. Steve Picot, 155, and Brad Aristide, heavyweight.

Seventh graders are Joe

Romano, 80; John O'Leary, 80; Greg Oriola, 90; Kyle Frazier, 116, and Dave Picot, 108.

"The boys have done a good job and are improving all the time," Joyce said. "They are very dedicated and have a lot of desire."

Sterling had a big meet Tuesday against Atlantic-North and today [Thursday] it hosts Point.

Joyce feels his team will be ready to give a good account of itself in the annual city championship meet to be held Feb. 5 and 6 at Broad Meadows Junior High School.

Lee Remick Nominated For Golden Globe Award

LEE REMICK is among those nominated for a Golden Globe Award this year. Given by the Hollywood Foreign Press Association, the awards will be presented this Sunday night on Channel 5. Lee has been nominated for her acting chores in "Jenny"... NBC is red in the face now that they've found out Nebraska station has been using their supposedly "new" identification logo for months... STEVE ALLEN will be hosting a special primetime "Salute to Broadcasting" for PBS shortly. To be taped next month, the special will feature scores of old-time radio stars... EDITH PIAF's life will be the subject of a forthcoming special called "I Regret Nothing"... The highly explicit made-for-TV film, "Born Innocent", starring LINDA BLAIR keeps cropping up. Having been shown once, then edited and shown in re-run, it is now up for syndication. A group of protesters stormed into the offices of its syndicator, Viacom, in an attempt to stop further showings of the film. The complaint is that Viacom intends to syndicate the original version... ABC will debut its "Rich Man, Poor Man" min-series on Sunday, February 1... Watch for a special salute to composer, RICHARD RODGERS in the near future... CBS Sports has bought the television rights to the world heavy weight championship bout between MUHAMMAD ALI and Belgian champ, JEAN PIERRE COOPMAN. The contest will be broadcast live on February 20... Morality in Media, the New York-based national organization against undesirable trends on television polled its membership recently and found out what those members thought to be the best and worst television programs. Among the best were "The Waltons", "Little House on the Prairie", "Mary Tyler Moore", National Geographic Specials, and "The World of Disney". Among the undesirables were "Cher", "Maude", "Kojak", crime shows and most of the soap operas... "State Fair", a film first released in 1933 and remade several times, may wind up on CBS next season. The hour series would be a blend of comedy, drama and music. The original film was a collaboration of RODGERS and HAMMERSTEIN... ABC Sports will telecast 43 1/2 hours of the 1976 Winter Olympics with 30 1/2 hours in primetime. From Feb. 3 through Feb. 15 there will be at least two hours of coverage each night... Leading television producers are urging less dependence upon the networks and more reliance upon independent broadcasting. The president of Lorimar Productions, responsible for "The Waltons", stressed the importance of programming interest on the local level. GRANT TINKER, President of MTM Productions and husband of MTM herself, agreed and said that he was disturbed at the networks' limitations, pointing out the carbon-copy look of game shows. NORMAN LEAR also suggested that series wind up production after five seasons, thus providing new material for broadcasters as well as the public. Lear is a strong believer in producing original programs for syndication, as is the case with his new Channel 5 entry "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman".

20 YEARS AGO

In January of 1956... Betty Hutton was Milton Berle's guest... Charles Laughton narrated "The Festival of Music", starring Maria Anderson, Jan Peerce, Roberta Peters, Isaac Stern and Arthur Rubinstein... Alfred Hitchcock looked at the trial of Lizzie Borden... CBS dropped "The Morning Show" and picked up "Good Morning", hosted by Will Rogers Jr., from 7 to 8 a.m.... Topper found a uranium deposit... NBC signed Claire Bloom, Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Judith Anderson to star in George Bernard Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra"... Lily Ruskin was investing in oil wells on "December Bride"... Jackie Gleason was guest host for Edward R. Murrow's "Person to Person". Gleason interviewed an NBC official and then appropriately questioned a bus driver comparable to Ralph Kramden... "The Jimmy Durante Show"... Charles Collingwood, president of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists' New York local charged that the House Committee on Un-American Activities had painted an inaccurate picture of communist influence in the broadcasting industry... Gordon MacRae and Paul Lynde were Martha Raye's guests... Lucy Ricardo was ecstatic at the prospect of being presented to the Queen of England.

Former Mayor's Secretary In Job 'Limbo'

By TOM BRADY

Mrs. Dorothy DiBona, removed last week as secretary to the Quincy City Hospital director by Mayor Joseph LaRaia, was left in a sort of job limbo this week.

Mayor LaRaia ordered her transferred to another position but there are no other openings at the hospital right now, which leaves her actually without a job.

To add to the confusion—and controversy—the 57-year-old widowed mother of three called in "sick" Monday according to the hospital personnel office.

Mrs. DiBona, personal secretary to former Mayor Walter J. Hannon, was appointed secretary to Hospital Director Harlan Paine by Hannon in the last days of his administration, after Paine's previous secretary, Lynn Peddie, resigned.

Paine said that Miss Peddie was not removed from the job to be replaced by Mrs. DiBona, but resigned on her own so that she could move to Florida.

Mrs. DiBona was removed from the $10,000 a year job by Mayor LaRaia, according to his administrative assistant Arthur Casey, because LaRaia "did not feel he should be saddled with any appointment made in the waning hours of Mr. Hannon's administration."

The Mayor's order was that Mrs. DiBona be transferred to another position at the hospital. However, because there are no positions currently open there, the order has the effect of leaving her in a job limbo until a vacancy occurs.

Initially, Mrs. DiBona protested her removal, meeting with the Mayor, his aides, Paine, and an observer to discuss the transfer itself and the methods the Mayor used in notifying her of it. But, by the end of last week, she was reported to be ready to forget the affair.

During the meeting with Mrs. DiBona, the Mayor displayed a list of an estimated 60 appointments made by Hannon in the last days of his term as mayor. LaRaia indicated that at least three of the appointees would be notified that they are to be removed.

Many of the people on the list were appointed to low level or temporary jobs by the former mayor, LaRaia said.

Councillors Want Sidewalks Plowed

City Councillor Warren A. Powers Monday night chided the city for its failure to plow sidewalks for school children during the recent snow storms.

Along with Councillors John J. Lydon Jr. and James A. Sheets, he urged the city to see that it does not happen again. They co-sponsored a resolution in the City Council to that effect.

In a letter to Mayor Joseph J. LaRia, Powers said:

"The accumulation of snow on the sidewalks made them impassable so that the young children were forced to use the street as a pathway."

"I believe this is a very unsafe situation when youngsters are forced to walk on the road and expose themselves to the dangers of being struck by skidding automobiles."

"I would suggest that the next time the city has a snowfall, that within the radius of a mile and a half from all the schools the main streets have at least one sidewalk plowed to provide safe access for young children to walk to school."

It was pointed out that the School Department is responsible for clearing only the sidewalks around the schools and Sheets noted that school sidewalks in Ward 4 were fine.

The Powers-Lydon-Sheets resolution was referred to the Public Safety Committee.

Quinn Suggests Official City Song

When Quincy folk get together far from home in this Bicentennial year they may soon sit down together and belt out a few verses of something like "My City 'Tis of Thee".

Councillor John J. Quinn proposed Monday night that the city of Quincy have an official song, so that "wherever Quincy people go in the country they will have something in common."

He suggested a song-writing competition, with a $1,000 to $5,000 scholarship as a prize for music and lyrics.

The judges could be the music department heads at Quincy and North Quincy High Schools and Eastern Nazarene College and the director of the Quincy Symphony Orchestra, Quinn suggested.

The prize money, he added, might come from the Quincy Sons of Italy, which annually donates money to the city for specific purposes.

Quinn's resolution was sent on to the Mayor's office for consideration.

THE SECRET OF SAVING MONEY.

The secret of saving money isn't really a secret. Although some people seem to think so. No matter how hard they try—or how good their intentions—they never seem to reach their savings goals. And that's too bad. Because saving money isn't really a difficult task if you observe a few simple rules—and stick to them.

For those who are finding it difficult to save—and because we're in the business of helping people save—Norfolk County Trust Company would like to present the following points:

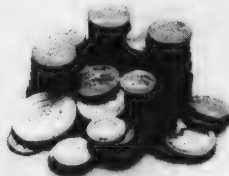

1. SET YOURSELF A SAVINGS GOAL.

That's first and foremost. Because saving is essentially a matter of motivation. And motivation is easier to attain and sustain if you know exactly what you're saving for. And be realistic when you set your goals. It's a lot easier to set a modest goal and reach it, than to set an unrealistic goal and fail. Once you've attained a modest savings goal, you have the added incentive to save for the bigger things.

2. PUT ASIDE A CERTAIN AMOUNT RELIGIOUSLY.

Hit and miss savings methods rarely work out. Saving a certain amount—even if it's small—on a definite schedule is more desirable than attempting to set aside larger amounts from time to time. If you need help in determining how much you can realistically save on a definite schedule, Norfolk County Trust Company will be glad to work it out with you. And if you need the assistance of an Automatic Savings Plan, Norfolk will be happy to set that up for you, too.

3. PICK THE RIGHT SAVINGS PLAN FOR YOU.

This would seem to "go without saying," yet many people fail to recognize this basic fact. If your savings goals are short-range, let's say, and you need ready access to your funds, a Regular Savings or 90-Day Notice Account would probably be right for you. If, on the other hand, you can allow your funds to remain in a savings account longer, then long-range

Thrift Certificates will pay more interest. Norfolk County Trust offers a complete range of savings plans—and can help you select the one—or more—that are exactly right for you.

4. GET YOURSELF A GOOD MANAGER.

Or, in other words, a good bank. A bank that offers you a program to meet all your banking needs. Norfolk County Trust Company has such a program in its All Purpose Bank Plan. The All Purpose Bank Plan includes among other things, a choice of Savings Plans, plus Free Checking and Interest Checking. It also includes Reserve Credit and MasterCard—all geared to helping you make the most of your money.

And that's really the secret of saving money.

To learn more about the many ways to save at Norfolk County Trust Company simply stop in at any of our 33 convenient offices.

Newcomb To Fight Ouster.

LaRaia's 'January Massacre': 19 Down, And More To Go?

Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia's "January massacre" of city employees continued this week with the firing of Putnam S. Borden, executive director of the Council on Aging since 1972.

It brought to at least 19 the number of city workers whose employment has been terminated by LaRaia in the 25 days since he took office Jan. 5. LaRaia defended the firings, saying:

"It is unfortunate that these steps have to be taken, but it is essential for my administration to be equipped with personnel who have my objectives in mind."

"My election would mean nothing if I retained most of the appointees of my predecessor. I need individuals in those positions who will serve with regard to my goals and not in opposition to them."

But Richard Newcomb, one of the 19, served notice that he is going to court, if necessary, to keep his job as assistant director of Quincy City Hospital.

And one of LaRaia's own appointees, A. Fred Lane, director of Quincy Heritage, was fired himself as chief engineer of WIDA after he was refused a leave of absence to serve in the city job.

It was also reported that at least four contractors, including Joseph H. Vissa and Peter P. Gacicia, were notified they would no longer be doing business with the city.

Borden was fired from $15,300 post Monday by way of a 2:30 p.m. telephone call from Arthur F. Casey Jr., the Mayor's patronage aide.

"I was asked not to report back tomorrow [Tuesday]," said Borden.

A followup letter from Casey explained:

"Traditionally, a new administration brings with it a new staff. This is the case with Mayor LaRaia's administration."

"Mr. LaRaia has begun formulating his staff which, in design, will include your present position as Executive Director-Council on Aging.

"It is at the Mayor's request you begin to utilize your accrued vacation of eight weeks as of Jan. 27, 1976."

"Rather than release you at the beginning of his administration, Mayor LaRaia has granted this interim period to insure an effective and orderly transition."

"Mr. Borden, the effective date of your termination will be Jan. 30, 1976. If there is any problem concerning this date, please contact me at the Mayor's office."

Borden had served in the post for three and a half years since he was selected out of a cast of 32 candidates by a special citizens committee.

"I'm sorry to leave," Borden told The Quincy Sun. "I'm sorry to see three and a half years of Atty. Gen. Francis X. Bellotti and Dist. Atty. William D. Delahunt, hinting at possible criminal action, have asked for an inquest into the controversial Nov. 4 Quincy city election.

Joseph J. LaRaia defeated Mayor Walter J. Hannon in that election but only after a recount that saw 500 votes in blocks of 50 switched from Hannon to LaRaia.

Delahunt said Quincy District Court Presiding Justice Albert Kramer indicated he would grant the request and conduct the inquest starting in mid or late February and running for several weeks.

Investigations by State Police of the Delahunt and Bellotti offices turned up a number of possible violations of the state election laws.

The request for an inquest said:

• "It appears that the election officers charged with conducting the count may have been improperly appointed..."

• "Unauthorized persons may have been within the guardrail [where counting was taking place]..."

• "Unauthorized persons may have contributed to an atmosphere of confusion leading to the improper entries."

• "To the extent that they are the result of human error and a faulty system, an election inquest will help clarify the problem... and eliminate recurrences."

Hannon said he would have no comment on the inquest bid. "Just let it run its course," he said. "I was the one who asked for the investigation. There were a lot of unanswered questions around. Maybe some of them will be answered now."

Mayor LaRaia said he would reserve comment on the matter

Hannon Says LaRaia 'Cry-babbling' Over Expenses

Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia charged Tuesday that former Mayor Walter J. Hannon spent almost three-quarters of the Mayor's expense account for fiscal 1975-76 leaving his [LaRaia's] half of the cupboard almost bare.

Hannon brushed off the Mayor's charges as "a lot of cry-babbling."

"He can always transfer money from other accounts," he said. "He knows that. He tries to give the impression that he doesn't know anything about government. He's been in it since 1959."

LaRaia said $11,000 was budgeted for the Mayor's expense account for office supplies, stationery, postage and auto expenses for the year. Another $358 was carried over from 1974-75.

He expected to find half of it left when he took office Jan. 5, LaRaia said, but instead he found that Hannon had spent $7,824, leaving the new Mayor only $3,282.

Another $252 was not officially spent but had been set aside by the former Mayor to pay for goods on order, said a spokesman for the Mayor, explaining the discrepancy in addition.

"This is just another obstacle my administration is faced with because of actions by my predecessor," said LaRaia.

"Former Mayor Hannon has done everything he can to disrupt my administration."

"First, he plays politics with an unrealistic tax rate by cutting

Feb. 3 Deadline To Register For Presidential Primary

Tuesday Feb. 3 is the last day to register for the March 2 Massachusetts Presidential primary election, according to a reminder issued this week by Assistant City Clerk Thomas Burke.

City Hall will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. on that day to accept new registrations.

Burke said that, as of Oct. 15, there were 48,232 registered voters in Quincy, broken down into the following party affiliations:

Democratic	28,028
Republican	7,987
American	7
Independent	12,210

This will be the first year in which the American Party will have a ballot of its own in a presidential primary in Massachusetts.

Disposal District Vetoed, Says Sheets

A bill to create a solid waste disposal district in Norfolk County minus Quincy - has been pocket vetoed by Gov. Michael Dukakis, reports Rep. James A. Sheets [D-Quincy]. The bill was passed by the legislature only after an amendment, put forward by Sen. Arthur H. Tobin [D-Quincy], Rep. Joseph Brett [D-Quincy] and Sheets, specifically exclude Quincy.

Sheets said he believed residents of West Quincy were opposed to having a waste compactor facility "permanently in their back yard" serving also Weymouth, Milton and Cohasset.

McCauley Requests Hot Lunch Program Accounting

School Committeeman Francis X. McCauley has requested an accounting of the hot lunch program and other grant fund programs administered by the School Department.

McCauley, in a letter to School Supt. Dr. Lawrence P. Creedon, noted that the hot lunch program is a revolving account and thus does not appear in the School Committee budget.

A revolving account is one in which receipts are applied directly to offset the cost of operating the program.

"I feel that a complete report on the hot lunch program should be provided to the School Committee at least once a year," said McCauley.

He also noted that the School Department administers grants totalling more than $1.3 million of which the School Committee does not receive any reports.

McCauley questioned the procedure of crediting the receipt of these funds to School Department operations since they are not directly expended on School Department programs.

HN Residents To Protest Nut Island Plant At Boston Hearing

Hough's Neck is gearing up for another round in the fight against a secondary treatment plant at the MDC's Nut Island sewage facility.

The occasion is a public hearing Feb. 18 at 10 a.m. in Faneuil Hall, Boston, into the whole $900 million project, which includes the filling in of 26 acres of Quincy Bay.

"We are making every effort to bring as many people as we can to Faneuil Hall to protest the landfill and the secondary treatment plant," says City Councillor Leo J. Kelly.

Kelly, whose Ward 1 includes Hough's Neck, said buses are being lined up to transport protesters to the meeting at $1 a head. Those who wish to go should call Pam Craig at 471-8968 or Alice Aiguier at 773-4767.

Kelly expressed confidence that opposition is mounting against the secondary treatment plant and the landfill in view of environmental hazards and high operating costs.

Even the MDC has its doubts about it, he said, citing a statement by MDC Commissioner John F. Snedeker before a hearing of the National Commission on Water Quality.

A recent study, said Snedeker, "concluded that adding secondary treatment facilities to our primary plants would not be particularly beneficial to the environment."

"The estimated capital cost for the addition of secondary treatment to our coastal plants is about $300 million. An additional $8.5 million would be needed annually to operate and maintain such facilities.

"This amount of money would be a 100 per cent increase over last year's operating costs."

Snedeker noted "a scarcity of funds to maintain the current level of services we provide and the economic and environmental uncertainty of adding secondary treatment to coastal primary plants."

He said he supports an amendment to the National Clean Water Act which would exempt sewage treatment plants that discharge into the ocean.

2 Point Bars Ordered To Close At 1 A.M.

Other Drinking Spots Warned They Could Face Early Closing

By TOM BRADY

The city license commissioners Tuesday ordered two Quincy Point bars to close earlier after nearly 300 area residents complained about noise and brawling caused by patrons of the establishments.

The Brothers Two lounge and the Washington Tap, both on Washington St., were forced to close at 1 a.m. after the board revoked the special permits which had allowed them to remain open until 2 a.m.

The unanimous voice vote of the board was greeted with cheers from about 70 Quincy Point residents who attended the meeting. Nearly 40 of them had picketed outside City Hall in the rain before the meeting demanding that the bars be closed earlier.

Earlier the board had received petitions signed by an estimated 200 residents from the Pagnano Towers across the street from The Brothers Two.

"They're trying to make Quincy Point into the Combat Zone of the South Shore," said Ted Harrington, former president of the area's civic association.

Mayor Joseph LaRaia, the only non-commissioner allowed to speak at the meeting endorsed the earlier closing time. He attributed the problem at the bars to people from outside the Quincy Point area who frequent the bars after working nearby.

Atty. Richard W. Barry, counsel for Brothers Two owner James McGuire, said the decision was "unfortunate", especially since there was no evidence presented to attribute the problems in the area to either in or around the Brothers Two.

Barry said that the Brothers Two probably would not appeal the license revocation.

Fire Chief Edward F. Barry warned other owners of liquor establishments that the decision to close the two bars could be brought to include all of the 11 bars with two o'clock licenses.

"If we have any trouble in any other area of the city," Barry said, "I'm going to personally see that they go back to the one o'clock closing."

Police Chief Francis X. Finn, who initiated the closing before the License Board, told residents that if the one o'clock closing did not solve the problem, the board would consider closing the bars at eleven p.m.

"We don't want to do that," Finn said, "we want to see the people of Quincy Point live in peace like they have a right to. If it does continue, we won't hesitate to bring them back in here."

Rep. Robert Cerasoli, who represents the area and helped to organize the campaign to close

MAYOR JOSEPH LaRAIA tells City Licensing Board that he supports the move to close Quincy Point bars earlier than 2 a.m. Board members (left to right) are City Clerk John Gillis, Police Chief Francis X. the bars at one o'clock said, after the decision, that he was "very, very happy the Licensing Board saw fit to grant our request."

But he added, "this is just a beginning step to correct some of the problems with the bar rooms in that area," indicating that he felt the residents of the area would later ask for an 11 o'clock closing time for the bars. "Judging from past performances, I'd say there is a good chance there'll be more trouble."

Plow West Squantum Street First, Harold Urges

Newly appointed Public Works Commissioner Vincent LoCicero has heard officially from his first city councillor.

Councillor Paul D. Harold called on him to give West Squantum St., North Quincy, top priority among city streets in snow plowing and sanding.

Harold said he received a number of calls complaining that "because of insufficient sanding at the MBTA bridge, rush hour traffic was backed up the entire length of West Squantum St.

"In addition, much of the traffic avoiding West Squantum St. was funnelled onto Holbrook Rd., creating a potential hazard for students at the Montclair School.

"I realize that during a snow emergency not every street can be done first but I would hope that West Squantum St., one of the main arterial routes in North Quincy, could be included among priority streets."

Tobin, Sheets, To Meet With MBTA Officials

City Council President Arthur H. Tobin and Councillor James A. Sheets will meet with officials of the MBTA Monday, Feb. 2, at 7 p.m. in the Council Chamber to discuss problems of service on the MBTA's Red Line.

Sheets is chairman of the Council's Committee on Public Transportation.

Today's Women

Wellesley College Policewoman

When Linda Goes To Work She Carries A Loaded Shotgun

[Special to The Quincy Sun]

WELLESLEY -- Linda Dalzell, a 24-year old Quincy resident, likes movies, bicycling, reading and tennis.

The attractive, blue-eyed young woman lives at home, and like most young people, she enjoys going out with friends on weekends. When she is working, Linda Dalzell wears a navy blue uniform, a silver badge and carries a loaded handgun.

She is a special police officer with the Wellesley College Police Force, and she takes her job and her law enforcement career seriously.

Linda is one of that rare breed of women who has invaded the formerly all-male bastion of police work, and at Wellesley, a women's liberal arts college, she is gaining on-the-job experience and putting the law enforcement philosophies she learned as a criminal justice major at Northeastern University to work.

The fact that she is one of two women on the Wellesley force doesn't matter a bit to her. Not surprisingly, she was one of less than a dozen women entered in the criminal justice program at N.U. when she was a freshman.

Linda, arrived at Wellesley College in Wellesley in September, 1975, and immediately embarked on a strenuous four-week training program at the state police academy.

"That was hard," she said with a grin. "We had a tough physical exercise regimen and classes with lawyers, forensic science experts and state troopers."

Linda was the only woman of the 24 people in the training program. "Being female is different. The instructors have taught a sufficient number of men, and a woman is more easily picked out of the class! The instructors want to know you right away."

Linda's entry onto a campus like Wellesley's couldn't have come at a better time for her. Colleges and universities throughout the nation have recently begun to improve their security systems due to an increase in crime on the campuses. The Wellesley security system was changed from a security force to a regular police force just prior to Linda's hiring.

The trained members of the Wellesley College force are special officers of the Commonwealth and have the authority to make arrests and, if warranted, use their weapons. Down-to-earth, Linda feels well-accepted by her fellow officers: "I think the people on our force feel a sense of accomplishment with the new police system - it's something to be proud of!"

Linda says the introduction of a sense of professionalism with the institution of the new police force has brought about pride in the officers' work. "We all help each other out," she adds.

As a woman who has entered a rough "man's business" Linda is aware of the necessity to work hard. "It all goes back to having to prove yourself. You cannot be mediocre. You have to be good. A woman has to go out of her way to show she is capable."

Beginning her work day on a new shift - 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. - Linda patrols the wooded, 480-acre Wellesley campus in a police car.

"We patrol all the sectors of the campus, and keep going back over them again," she says.

Her routine patrols are occasionally interrupted by special requests like infirmary runs for ailing students, or calls about a problem in a residence hall. Like other area institutions, Wellesley recently created an "escort service" to members of the College community who have to walk across the campus alone after dark. Patrolmen like Linda act as escorts to dorms, classroom buildings or out of the way parking areas.

"Sometimes individuals on campus are momentarily surprised to see a woman patrolman, but they are always pleased a female is on the force. I am asked all kinds of questions."

Describing herself as a "city person" Linda says she particularly enjoys working in a "rural" atmosphere. The Wellesley campus, 12 miles west of Boston, features a lake, hundreds of acres of woods and a golf course. "I love working outside, so this natural environment is perfect for me," she smiles.

Linda's interest in law enforcement began when she was a student at Cardinal Cushing Central High School in South Boston. Her friends, she says, don't really understand what she does for a living. "People tend to have the idea of the TV cop!" she laughs and points out that much of any police person's job is routine.

Linda's mother, Eleanor M. Dalzell, thinks her youngest daughter's career is exciting. "The entire family [brother Paul, 30, sisters Eleanor, 29, and Barbara Ann, 27] think it's funny that the 'baby' of the clan is a policewoman, but they're all proud that I'm doing what I always wanted to."

Getting settled made simple.

STAIRS TOP TROUBLE SPOT

Where is the most dangerous spot in your home? The stairs! That simple structure is involved in at least 350,000 serious accidents every year. And it's not just the old and feeble who are tumbling, although falls are more likely to be fatal to the elderly. Surprisingly, young adults between the ages of 15 and 24 suffer the most injuries.

Although safety experts can't pin the blame on any single mistake, they have turned up a few basic trouble spots. Here are some hints to help you stay on your feet:

Stairs should be well-lighted, with handy switches at top and bottom. Repair broken steps and railings, loose concrete. Replace worn carpets or tread coverings. Never use steps for storage. Pick up toys and other objects, wipe up spills, remove ice and snow. Don't rush up or down the flight of stairs. It only takes a few seconds to navigate so running or fooling around can wait until you reach the other end. Finally, beware of floppy slippers, platform shoes and extra long dresses.

'January Massacre'

In his inaugural address, Mayor Joseph LaRaia said he would welcome scrutiny and questions regarding his every appointment and administrative act.

We have a few questions and thoughts along that line and accept his invitation in the same spirit in which it was extended on Inauguration Day.

A new mayor has all the right in the world to make certain appointments and to terminate previous administration appointees as he forms his municipal team or so-called official family.

Anyone who accepts an appointment that does not have tenure, or a contract to go with it or is not protected by civil service should realize he or she can suddenly be out of a job when a new mayor takes over. That's politics.

But as Mayor LaRaia brings down his axe, you can't help but wonder if this isn't one of Quincy's biggest purges. It's already being called "The January Massacre".

His "pink slips" have gone down into the rank and file—including at least one secretary and clerk-typist.

One, of course, is Mrs. Dorothy DiBona who was former Mayor Hannon's personal—and quite able—secretary. In the waning hours of his administration he appointed her secretary to Hospital Director Harlan Paine. And, bingo, Mayor LaRaia removed her.

An interesting sidelight to this development is the fact that most people in Quincy thought the director of the hospital hired his own secretary like most executives are privileged to do.

We think he should do the hiring—not the mayor. He should have the right to select the one he believes is the most qualified for the job. Under the present set-up, it would appear the secretary to the director becomes a direct pipeline for the mayor.

But the thing that really bothered us most about Mrs. DiBona's dismissal was a quote attributed to Mayor LaRaia. He was quoted as saying he felt he was "betrayed" by her because she talked to a reporter when the latter called her for comment. The reporter should have talked with the Mayor instead, he said, according to the article.

We would like to think Mayor LaRaia really did not mean it that way. Because when the day arrives when an individual working for the city has to "clear it" with the Mayor before expressing his or her own views, then Quincy is in real serious trouble.

The appointment of Lt. Corady Solimini as inspector of divisions in the Police Department also raises a few questions.

Lt. Solimini was a campaign supporter for Mayor LaRaia and succeeds, in the job, Capt. Paul Nestor who with Police Chief Francis Finn was reportedly aligned politically with former Mayor Hannon.

Yet Mayor LaRaia says "no politics" were involved in his appointment of Lt. Solimini. Seems like an awful big coincidence.

Chief Finn has protested the appointment on grounds "the organization of the police department is the responsibility of the chief."

We are inclined to agree with him.

The appointment of a lieutenant—regardless of how capable he might be—to a job considered second in command to the chief is not going to help police department morale.

The fact that Lt. Solimini has passed the civil service examination for captain is not the point. The point is, he is not a captain but now in a sense outranks all the captains in the department.

If there is nothing wrong with that, then a lieutenant or sergeant could be appointed to head the traffic or detective bureau. Or captains be placed over deputy chiefs in the fire department.

The organization of the police and fire departments should be left to the chief. If the chief is not doing his job right, then the mayor should bring him up on charges.

In his new post, Lt. Solimini will also serve as liaison between the police department and the mayor's office. The department head [Finn] not a subordinate is the rightful liaison.

Frankly, we have been surprised there has not been more reaction to this. Perhaps we have the wrong slant on it but we really do not think so.

Meanwhile as new faces come and go, as the LaRaia administration takes full control, one thing seems certain: there are many people working for the city grateful they are under civil service protection.

When a storm hits it's smart to drive in and out a driveway every hour to keep tracks open—or at least once before you go to bed and once in the morning.

NEW AT LIBRARY

By JANET HUSBAND
Acquisition Librarian

Following are some of this month's new books at The Thomas Crane Public Library.

THE RELAXATION RESPONSE by Doctor Herbert Benson takes a close look at the new meditation techniques that are becoming so popular. His conclusions are interesting and controversial.

SHADOWS by Edwin Corley is a novel about Hollywood in the 40's in which real-life characters like Grable, Bankhead and Bogart among others play a part. Fascinating.

"MO"; A WOMAN'S VIEW OF WATERGATE is by Maureen Dean. Everybody remembers seeing John Dean's serene young wife sitting behind him as he testified on the televised Watergate hearings. Here's her version of those interesting days.

1776: YEAR OF ILLUSIONS by Thomas J. Fleming has been called the best bicentennial book yet written. It's many illustrations delight the eye, while the readable text may raise a few eyebrows.

MONCRIEFF by Isabelle Holland is the author's third novel. It is about book editor Antonia Moncrieff who inherits a large and mysterious old house in Brooklyn and a once-famous author [with whom she was once in love] at the same time. Romantic complications naturally result.

THE FIRST CASUALTY by Philip Knightly is an intriguing history of the war correspondent—from the charge of the light brigade, through Orwell and Hemingway, and up to the TV coverage of Vietnam. Truth, he says, is the first casualty of wartime.

WINGED ESCORT by Douglas Reeman is sure to please the author's many fans. This novel of the British Navy in WW II centers on the story of Pilot Tim Rowan and his brushes with death.

POWERS OF MIND by Adam Smith. With the wit and style that made THE MONEY GAME a No. 1 best-seller, Adam Smith now examines an even more fascinating subject: the human mind.

SUNBEAMS

Harold Has A Piece Of Watergate

By HENRY BOSWORTH

City Councillor Paul Harold has a piece of Watergate among his political souvenirs.

It's an actual piece of the carpet from the Democratic National Committee's former office at Watergate that was broken into.

The now famed burglars trod upon it and in doing so, eventually pulled the rug from under Richard Nixon.

Mounted on mahogany with a brass plaque complete with affidavit as to its authenticity, the memento was presented to Harold as a Christmas gift by the Virginia Young Democrats. Harold is National Committeeman for the Massachusetts Young Democrats.

The Watergate carpet is now being sold as the latest fund-raising gimmick of the Young Democrats National Committee.

The rug, you might say, symbolizes one of the biggest political "rocks" ever in history.

THE SECRET SERVICE is getting downright nosy when it comes to protecting Presidential candidates.

An agent dropped into The Quincy Sun office to routinely check out the place the day before Morris Udall's arrival last week.

Next day, a half hour before Udall's scheduled visit, four agents appeared. Nothing wrong with any of that. Nice to see them on the bail.

But then we noticed one agent drifting away from the other four. And presto, he was gone.

Then we heard some rummaging going on in one of the inner offices. The agent was poking through filing cabinet drawers.

"What are you doing?" he was asked. "Looking for a bomb?"

And that's just what he was doing. Not that anyone on The Sun staff looked that suspicious—we don't think. The agent was just being careful that an outsider hadn't gotten in and planted a bomb.

Come to think of it, from the reaction we have received from a couple of recent editorials, maybe we should check the drawers ourselves every once in a while.

PAT DISTEFANO, president of the Quincy Civic Association and one of Mayor Joseph LaRaia's staunch supporters in the recent campaign is believed to have the inside track for appointment as executive director of the Quincy Council on Aging. He would replace Putnam Borden who has held the post since 1972.

★★★

SABINA STENBERG, beauty salon operator active in political and civic circles, is recuperating at her Wollaston home following throat surgery at Beth Israel Hospital.

CITY COUNCILLORS usually like to sit in the same seats in the Council chamber throughout their terms. But not Ward 6's Dennis Harrington. When Paul Harold and Daniel Raymond succeeded Joseph LaRaia and Clifford Marshall in the council, Harrington used his seniority to take over LaRaia's old seat. Harold was given Harrington's former seat.

Harrington reportedly wanted the LaRaia seat because he could see the audience easier. But maybe he also thinks it might be a good luck seat.

JACK SILVERSTEIN, the North Quincy druggist, has written a new book "Better Sex and Diet Through Jogging."

A publicity blurb says he's been running for over 30 years. [From what, Jack?] There's quite a bit of amusing satire with illustrations. The book, published by The Christopher Publishing House, North Quincy, sells for $2.95 in softcover and is available at bookshops.

Jack dedicated book to his wife, Inez, who has to be one of the most understanding wives anywhere. [That should sell a few books, Jack.]

IF THE COLD weather has you down, this might warm you up. William O'Connell, vice-president of the Quincy Historical Society, cut forsythia in his Putnam St. yard during a mild spell in December. And they are now blooming in vases inside his home.

SMILE DEPT: Fr. Joseph Connolly of St. John's Church, recently told this little story which grandmothers—and grandfathers—should find amusing. It's about a third-grader who was asked to write a theme for school on "What Is A Grandma?" And wrote, she:

A grandma is a lady who has no children of her own, so she likes other people's little girls. A grandpa is a man grandma. He goes for walks with boys and talks about fishing and stuff.

Grandmas don't have anything to do except be there. Grandmas drive you to the supermarket where the pretend-horse is and they have lots of dimes ready. Or if they take you for walks, they slow down past pretty leaves and caterpillars. Grandmas never say, "Hurry up."

Sometimes grandmas are fat, but not too fat to tie kids' shoes. Grandmas wear glasses and funny underwear. They can take their teeth and gums off. They answer questions like, "Why do dogs hate cats?" and "How come God isn't married?"

When they read to us, they don't skip words or mind if it's the same story again.

Everybody should try to have a grandma, especially if you don't have a TV because grandmas are the only grown-ups who have got time.

QUINCY'S YESTERDAYS

January 29 - February 4, 1950 - 25 Years Ago

Quincy Men Questioned In Brink's Robbery

By TOM HENSHAW

Three Quincy men were questioned and released in connection with the $1 million-plus robbery of the Brinks counting house in Boston's North End Jan. 17.

One of them, a Hough's Neck man who operates a gunshop in Brookline, said he became suspicious when six men came to him to buy guns. He identified them by their photos.

SUPER DESTROYER KEEL LAID

The keel for the super destroyer USS Wilkinson was laid at the Bethlehem Quincy Shipyard but it was an occasion for sober thought, not rejoicing.

Once Wilkinson and her sister ship, Willis A. Lee, are delivered to the Navy in March, 1952, under a $30 million contract, work will cease at the shipyard.

But Frazier A. Bailey, president of the National Federation of American Shipping, held out some hope for the future at a "Save Shipbuilding" mass meeting at Quincy High School.

He told the meeting, sponsored by the Quincy Committee for the Advancement of the American Merchant Marine, that a long range ship subsidy bill will be passed soon by the Congress.

And Alexander Purdon, executive vice president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, urged those attending the meeting to bombard Congress with letters, telegrams and phone calls for the bill.

NEW SCHOOLS NEEDED

Mayor Thomas S. Burgin told the School Committee that the city needs to spend up to $3.5 million on improvements, including four new schools and an addition to City Hospital.

The problem, he said, is that the city's borrowing capacity within the debt limit is only $1 million. Borrowing outside the limit requires an act of the State Legislature.

The Mayor said the new schools needed are elementary schools at Fenno St., in Germantown and in the Cranch Hill Section, and a new junior high school.

SMITH IN RUNNING

Alexander Smith, an accountant at the Bethlehem Quincy Shipyard, was reported to be the leading candidate for a three-year term in the $4,500 a year post of city auditor.

Also among the 11 candidates were former City Councillor William J. Papile and a mystery man from South Quincy, long active in veterans' affairs, who asked that his name not be revealed.

ROBBIE HONORED

James N. Muir, former superintendent of Quincy schools, was the guest speaker as the Associated Scottish Orders observed the 190th birthday of Robert Burns with a dinner, concert and dance in Walter Scott Hall, South Quincy.

THE MAYOR'S VIEW— LaRaia Responds To Sunbeams Column

'How Long Will Honeymoon Last?'

The following from Mayor Joseph LaRaia's office is in response to last week's Quincy Sun "Sunbeams" column entitled: "How Long Will Honeymoon Last?" The response is written by Robert McCarthy, the mayor's information officer.

By ROBERT MCCARTHY
Mayor's Information Officer

You stated some of the city councillors are privately irked by a few recent incidents that have occurred the past few weeks.

One of those incidents was in regard to the transfer of Mrs. (Dorothy) DiBona. I want to stress the word transfer. The transfer was not immediate. She was invited to remain in position as secretary to the hospital director until Jan. 23. She was entitled to five weeks vacation with pay after that. Another position has become vacant and she has been offered it, but the mayor's office has been informed that she will not accept the position.

She has not been put out on the streets as was implied by your comment, "...some of the councillors thought LaRaia could have overlooked her as an 11th hour Hannon appointee at the hospital until, at least, she could have found another job."

In regard to the third floor conference room "peeve", a key can be obtained from one of the secretaries in the mayor's office. The city council office also has a key to the conference room. And access to the conference room can easily be obtained without a key through the solicitor's office. The mayor has asked the councillors to notify him in advance for using the room only to avoid conflicts.

As for changing the locks on some of the doors at City Hall, this is not uncommon with a change in administrations. We have no idea who was given keys to the old locks and we wanted some accountability for those keys.

It is true Mayor LaRaia would like to use the City Council office for his budget coordinator to maximize efficiency of the mayor's office. The budget coordinator is often called into conference with the mayor to discuss important financial matters, although he said they would like to remain in their present location. No decision has been made as far as I know, but I can assure you there is no problem here.

As you reported last week the door leading to the executive secretary's office is closed very often, but it is not locked, so passage is no problem. Mayor LaRaia is also easily accessible to all of the City Council members and will continue to be so throughout his administration.

Granted, these are small, possibly picaresque, incidents, but we feel some clarification was in order.

Thank you.

SPEAKING OUT—

Takes Issue With D'Olimpio On Common Situs Picketing Bill

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On Jan. 2, 1976 President Ford vetoed the Common Situs Picketing Bill. Nevertheless I feel that certain statements made in a December 18, 1975 letter to the editor by Mr. Carmine D'Olimpio President of the Quincy and South Shore Building Trades, should not go unanswered.

The Common Situs bill was not as Mr. D'Olimpio suggests legislation to "clarify a technicality in the current law and correct an unfair restriction placed on the unions in the building trades..." The bill would have legalized secondary boycotts in the construction industry. Secondary boycotts are contrary to the national labor policy. The building trades currently have vast picketing rights against the contractor they are in dispute with. To involve innocent third parties who set labor policy independently and are separate business establishments is to legalize secondary boycotts in the construction industry.

One of the major arguments of the proponents of HR 5900 was that a construction site is a joint venture. Yet under close examination this logic fails to hold up. A test of a joint venture is in the sharing of profits and losses on the job. The separate contractors on the job site do not share profits and losses. In fact the building trades unions recognize the separate entity because they negotiate separately with contractors in some 19 different trades.

Five Presidents, as Mr. D'Olimpio states have supported common situs legislation yet it is strange that given the vast powers of the Presidency that no President worked very hard to get a common situs bill enacted into law. In fact President Lyndon Johnson, in 1959 when he was majority leader of the Senate single handedly killed a common situs bill that was on the verge of enactment in the House of Representatives and in 1964 a common situs bill passed the House Labor Committee but it was killed by Congressman Adam Clayton Powell of Harlem because he was peeved at the building trades for their past racial discrimination.

Up until 1975 no common situs bill ever reached the floor of either house of Congress. Up until 1975 there was never a filibuster conducted by any Southern Senators. During the 25 year period that common situs kicked around Congress democrats had a majority of members in both houses of Congress except for one session. Why if common situs had so much merit did it fail to reach the floor of either the House or the Senate for 25 years.

President Ford should be commended for his courageous veto of this legislation. Some are crying double cross but for 25 years as a Congressman Gerald Ford opposed legalization of secondary boycotts in the construction industry. The truth is that the construction unions can and do have the right to picket at a construction job site. Their effectiveness is documented by the $10-$14 per hour contracts they have negotiated. President Ford realized that the building trades unions may have too much power. President Ford and the members of Congress who opposed HR 5900 should be commended for their courageous decision in the face of strong political pressure.

Telethon Donations Will Not Go To S. S. CP Area

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

At the end of this month United Cerebral Palsy Associations, Inc. will be conducting its annual Telethon for funds in most of the New England States.

Cerebral Palsy of the South Shore Area, Inc. has been disaffiliated from the National organization since 1968, and therefore, any funds donated through the Telethon will not come to this agency.

The Board of Directors of Cerebral Palsy of the South Shore Area, Inc. does not presume to advise any of its readers on how or to whom donations or contributions should be made. We would like to point out, however, that many individuals partial to the services we perform in the South Shore assume they are aiding our cause when they contribute to the National Telethon.

This appeal is directed only to those readers who mistakenly contribute to the Telethon in the hope that their funds will find their way into our program of services. We will appreciate your consideration of our request and hope that you understand the manner in which it is made.

Thank you for your past service and continued help in the cause of Cerebral Palsy of the South Shore Area, Inc.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

What Are Juror's Qualifications?

"What qualifies a person to be juror?" a caller recently asked the Voter Information Phone.

The VPhone volunteer answered that any person who is qualified to vote, even if he or she is not registered, meets the qualifications for jury duty. In other words, jurors must be at least 18 years old and be U.S. citizens by birth or naturalization.

This question is one of many now being received by the League of Women Voters Voter Information Phone, a statewide, free public service of the Lotte E. Scharfman Memorial Fund. If you have questions about government-local, state or national-call the VPhone Monday through Friday, between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. The number in the Boston area is 357-5880. Outside the Boston metropolitan areas, dial 1-800-882-1649, toll-free.

A NEWSPAPER FOR AND BY THE CHILDREN OF QUINCY

Immersion Week At Adams Academy

Quincy Then And Now

Donna Porcaro, 10, Susan Deehan, 10, and all the children from the Elementary Lab Center spent last week at Adams Academy.

They were studying the history of Quincy.
They used artifacts at the museum.
They interviewed resource people.
They visited libraries, industries, and historical places like

First Parish Church,

The Adams House

and City Hall.

They wrote reports and created exhibits for the museum.

And this is how they felt.

Carol Greene, 10, of Mass. Fields School studied Quincy architecture during immersion week. Her exhibit was a mock-up of the First Parish Church.

'I like to know who lived here before me'

I love history. Especially the history of Quincy. I like to know what kids did before me. Like the 'games they played. They even have games from long ago here at Adams Academy. I feel this week has helped me know our ancestors better.

Michael Miller, 10,
Adams School

'Wow. Is Quincy historical'

Before this Immersion Week, I felt Quincy was just like any other city. I can't believe how much history there is here. Like the old buildings, and the artifacts in this museum. It makes you kind of proud.

Ginger Erwin, 10,
Lincoln Hancock School

'I'll never forget what I've learned here'

I think this week was a good idea. My subject was shipbuilding in Quincy. I learned about it so many different ways. I'll never forget it. Did you know the only seven-mast schooner ever made was built in Quincy?

Steven Petrosius, 10,
Squantum School.

How Did You Like Immersion Week?

It was really fun. I think we all liked it because it was so different from the classroom. But the classroom is O.K., too. I studied the Quincy family. We made a family tree. Did you know there are six Josiah Quincy's?

Blair Hamaty, 10
Parker School

I've learned an awful lot. My subject was glassworks in Quincy. I learned how glass is blown and also I learned about all the ingredients. For our display, we made a diorama of a glassworks factory. The people of the Quincy Historical Society were very nice to us.

Dresses of Long-ago Quincy

During Immersion Week, our group studied the clothing in old-time Quincy. We made a display using dresses from Adams Academy. This dress is a funeral dress worn in 1850. It was worn by an elderly woman only on very sad occasions. I loved doing our exhibit. I felt sorry for the women of long ago. They had to wear clothes very tight around the waist. If your waist measured more than 21 inches, you were considered fat! I like the casual way we dress now much better.

Find The Hidden Slave In The Dorothy Quincy House

Paula Stanziani, 11, visited the Dorothy Quincy Homestead, built in 1709. She was fascinated by the big, beautiful rooms, the feather beds and especially the hidden slave chamber. She has drawn the room of long ago with Dorothy giving out supper. Can you find the hidden slave?

Andy's Granite Exhibit

I concentrated on the granite industry in our study of Quincy. My grandfather used to work in the quarries. I was looking through the Quincy Historical Society books here at Adams Academy and I decided to make a granite quarry as my exhibit. It is two quarries just beginning with a railroad for transportation. I made the railroad out of tooth picks. The granite is actually Quincy granite and clay.

Shipbuilding in Quincy

Darlene Burke, 10, and Laurie Hayes, 10, of Merrymount School, concentrated on shipbuilding in Quincy during Immersion Week. One project was this interview with H. Hobart Holly, president of the Quincy Historical Society and an expert in shipbuilding.

Mr. Holly, why did shipbuilding start in Quincy?

Well, Darlene, the people here needed ships. They were dependent on the sea. Also, there was deep water to launch the ships nearby. After the industry got started, there were always people here with the knowledge of how to build ships.

How are wooden ships built?

First a design is decided upon. Then the keel and frames are constructed from naturally curved oak so they don't have to be shaped. Then the planking is added to the keel. After the ship is launched, the mast is added.

Mr. Holly, how did they launch ships?

The ship was built on keel blocks, Laurie, on land. When they were ready to move it, they would put ways under it. These are timbers which are greased on which the cradle moved. When they were ready to launch, they cut the supports and it slid into the water.

How are ships painted?

Paint on steel ships is very important because salt water causes rust. The first coat is an anti-corrosive. Then finish paint is added for color. Anti-fouling paint is also added to prevent the growth of barnacles. Brushing was the common way to paint in the old days. Spraying is more popular today.

What type of ships are made in Quincy?

There aren't many types that haven't been built here, Darlene. At present, General Dynamics is building large LNG carriers for private owners and naval vessels.

When was shipbuilding most important in Quincy?

Shipbuilding has always been our largest industry. It is extremely important at the present time. The largest employment in shipbuilding was during World War II when about 40,000 men were working in our shipyard.

An A-Mazin' Plane

During their intensive study of Quincy Then and Now, Steven Varnado, 11, of Parker School, and Donald Gamble, 11, of Atherton Hough School, zeroed in on aviation. The Night of the Glassworks Fire

Nancy Allen, 10, of Squantum School, studied the history of Quincy glassworks during Immersion Week. She read about a tragic fire in the late 1700's which burnt down the entire Germantown glassworks factory. She wrote this poem to commemorate that event.

The night was dark.
The wind was still.
The Glassworks stood just over the hill.

There was no moon.
There wasn't one star.
There was heard a low rumble, which came from afar.

Then the rumble changed to a roar.
It started to die, then came more.
Flashes of lightning lit the sky
With: a background of blackness way up high.

An extra long arm of light came down,
And stopped the very hearts of the town.
All of a sudden, in the height of the storm,
A spark crackled, and started to form.
The rain stopped beating, the roar was faint,
But a fite lit the sky like luminous paint.
The townspeople were all too weary to care,
So they climbed into bed like animals in a lair.
The Germantown Glassworks burnt down to the ground,
After that there was only one sound.
'Twas a rooster crowing, announcing the day.
Light shimmered over that part of the bay.
Birds started to wake in their homes on the shore,
And as the dawn broke there was silence
once more.

Friendly Ice Cream Shop Opens In Wollaston

A new Friendly Ice Cream Shop, employing some 35 people, will open Friday at 695 Hancock St., Wollaston, with ribbon-cutting ceremonies at 9 a.m.

It will be the 501st in a chain of Friendlys that extends through 15 states from Massachusetts to Indiana.

The 500th store was opened recently in Richmond, Ind., at which the ribbon-cutting consisted of slicing through a six-foot long ice cream roll.

In addition to ice cream, the Friendlys offer quick service in soups, sandwiches, and beverages. A full breakfast is served each day from 7 a.m. to 11 a.m.

The Friendly firm was founded in Springfield, Mass., in 1935 by the Blake brothers, S. Prestley and Curtis L. who began with a $547 loan and a second-hand ice cream maker.

The brothers are still active in the business, which is headquartered in Wilbraham, Mass., and had sales in excess of $122 million in the past fiscal year.

A second Friendly is located at 213 Independence Ave., South Quincy.

Senator Birch Bayh [D-Indiana], announces his delegate caucus for the 11th Congressional District will be held at Eastern Nazarene College, Wollaston, Sunday, Feb. 15 at 2 p.m.

Two weeks ago, Senator Bayh announced the appointment of Miss Sydney Hanlon and Peter O'Neill respectively to serve as his district caucus monitors. Any registered Democrat in the Congressional district may attend the caucus, vote and/or run for delegate themselves.

Bayh praised the caucus system as a "genuine vehicle for translating the rhetoric of open and participatory politics into reality". He urged supporters from across the party to attend, saying that "a diverse party is a strong party."

First Five Floors At Clay St. Seniors Facility Already Occupied

Assignments for the first five floors are complete and senior citizens are moving into the Quincy Housing Authority's new elderly housing project at 80 Clay St., Wollaston, at a rate of five a day.

"Everything is beautiful; I couldn't be happier," said Mrs. Anna McGrady, the first tenant and a resident of Quincy for 50 years, who filed application for residency in 1969.

The QHA has reported more than 3,000 applications on file, a waiting list of four to six years.

The 12-story, $4.4 million project, which was built with state aid was opened Dec. 1.

Ten of the 12 floors are designed as living space with 20 units to a floor, most of them consisting of a bedroom, living room, kitchenette, bath and balcony.

There are also 10

two-bedroom apartments and 10 units designed for handicapped persons.

The first floor is occupied by office space, a sitting room for residents and a health room for the visiting nurse. The top floor has community space for social functions.

Laundry facilities on the first floor include eight washers and eight dryers. There are two elevators and two emergency stairways.

Edward McCarthy In Antarctica Recovery Mission

Petty Officer Edward McCarthy of North Quincy, a Navy aviation structural mechanic, was a key figure in a recent recovery mission in Antarctica.

McCarthy, son of Mrs. Thomas F. McCarthy of 77 Bay

State Rd., was one of 17 volunteers who salvaged a stranded aircraft from an 11,000-foot height not far from the South Pole.

The operation was scheduled to take 21 days but, working long hours in thin air and intense cold, the volunteers had the crippled Hercules aircraft ready to be flown out in six days.

It was McCarthy's job to repair a hole in the side of the aircraft, which was flown 625 nautical miles to the McMurdo base and thence to Christchurch, N.Z., for final repairs.

Wollaston Man Organizing Support For Harris

Louis Baum of 42 Ellington Rd., Wollaston announces formation of the Committee To Elect Cab Drivers as Delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

The Committee will hold a mini-convention Sunday, Feb. 1 at 2 p.m. at 715 Boylston St., Boston.

Purpose, according to Baum, is to increase support Democratic Presidential candidate Fred Harris has among cab drivers and taxi workers in the Boston area. The meeting will plan organizing steps in preparation for the Feb. 15 delegate selection caucuses mandated by the new Primary Law.

Baum said he believes that as many as two dozen cab drivers can be elected potential delegates at the caucuses.

Baum said cab drivers and taxi workers were organizing around the Harris candidacy because "Fred Harris is the only one talking plainly and positively about the economic issues affecting working families."

Call For Court Inquest Into Mayoral Election

until the results of the inquest are publicized. He did, however, urge an "expedient but thorough inquest so that the citizen's of Quincy will soon know what happened on Nov. 4th."

Delahunt said he has conferred with Judge Kramer on the inquest and "the sentiment at the meeting was to make the inquest open to the public."

"The feeling was that in the overriding public interest it might be appropriate to open the inquest to the public but that will be at the discretion of the judge."

"There would, of course, have to be built-in safeguards to protect the privacy of individuals involved."

Delahunt said the case would be presented at the inquest by Asst. Atty. Gen. Thomas R. Kiley and Charles Hely of Needham, who is soon to be appointed an assistant district attorney.

Kiley said he expects the inquest hearings will take place over a period of weeks.

"I don't believe they will be conducted on a full time basis which would disrupt the court schedule," he said. "I expect they will be afternoon hearings for several weeks."

He said the inquest probably will hear 15 to 25 witnesses, most of whom have already given testimony to state police investigators.

Delahunt said the request for an investigation into the election was made to him by telegram by City Clerk John Gillis. He added it was his understanding through the media the request came from Hannon.

Hannon defeated LaRaia by 134 votes in the original count.

LaRaia won the recount by 483 votes, a swing of 617 votes.

Blocks of 50 LaRaia votes were incorrectly given to Hannon in Ward 1, Precinct 1; Ward 2, Precinct 5; Ward 3, Precinct 4; Ward 4, Precinct 2; and Ward 6, Precinct 6.

In addition, another block of 50 LaRaia votes was incorrectly credited to Hannon on the tally sheets of Ward 3, Precinct 6.

The inquest statement said that a swing of 617 votes "is unprecedented in a municipal election of this size."

Text Of Bellotti - Delahunt Request For Election Inquest

Here is the text of the Bellotti-Delahunt request for an inquest into the Nov. 4 Quincy city election:

Att. Gen. Francis X. Bellotti and Norfolk County Dist. Atty. William Delahunt, acting pursuant to the provisions of M.G.L. c.55 s35, as most recently amended by Chapter 151 of the Acts of 1975, hereby jointly complain of potential violations of the Commonwealth's election laws which allegedly occurred during the Quincy Mayoral election on Nov. 4, 1975.

The Complainants therefore ask this honorable court to conduct an election inquest to determine whether or not such violations occurred, and if they occurred, whether they were willful.

In support of their request, the Complainants state the following:

1. A preliminary election was held on Sept. 23, 1975 in the City of Quincy, at which time the top two mayoral candidates were incumbent Mayor Walter Hannon, who polled 10,403 votes, and Joseph LaRaia, who polled 8,492.

2. The final election was held on Nov. 4, 1975. The count taken at that time indicated that Walter Hannon had won by 134 votes, 17,060 for Hannon to 16,926 for LaRaia. Both candidates requested recounts.

3. A recount was held on Nov. 22, 1975. At that time Joseph LaRaia was credited with receiving 17,231 votes and Walter Hannon with 16,748, a "swing" of 617 votes from the count at the election. A swing of this dimension is unprecedented in a municipal election of this size.

4. The recount revealed that 500 of the 617 vote swing was occasioned by faulty transposing from tally sheets to final vote sheets. Block of 50 votes which had been correctly credited to Joseph LaRaia on the tally sheets were incorrectly attributed to Walter Hannon on the final vote sheets in Ward 1 Precinct 1, Ward 2 Precinct 5, Ward 3 Precinct 4, Ward 4 Precinct 2, and Ward 6 Precinct 6.

5. In Ward 3 Precinct 6 a block of 50 LaRaia votes were incorrectly credited to Walter Hannon on the tally sheet, accounting for 100 of the 617 vote swing. Thus, a total of 600 votes were improperly entered in violation of M.G.L. c.54 s105.

6. A number of other factors may have contributed to the faulty entries. It appears that the election officers charged with conducting the count may have been improperly appointed in violation of M.G.L. c.54 s11, and that unauthorized persons may have been within the guardrail in violation of M.G.L. c.54 s69. Unauthorized persons may have contributed to an atmosphere of confusion leading to the improper entries.

To the extent that the alleged violations were willful, they give rise to criminal action pursuant to M.G.L. c.56 s22. To the extent that they are the result of human error and a faulty system, an election inquest will help clarify the problem and eliminate recurrences.

For all these reasons the Attorney General and Norfolk County District Attorney request that an inquest be conducted.

Quincy's Past, Present Featured In This Week's 'Young Ideas'

By CATHY CONLEY

This week's "Young Ideas" section spotlights the Quincy Historical Society at Adams Academy where fifth graders from the Elementary Lab Center at Lincoln Hancock School spent all of last week.

The Elementary Lab Center is a special program for children from all the elementary schools in Quincy.

The week was called Immersion Week, with the children focusing on an in-depth study of Quincy's past and present. Under the direction of their teachers, Lorraine Sholler, Mary Lee O'Brien and Gerald Butler, the children used artifact and books at the Academy.

They interviewed resource people, visited libraries, industries and old historical places, wrote reports on several topics and created exhibits for the Historical Society.

This "Young Ideas" four-page pullout section is sponsored by the North Quincy Business and Professional Association and begins on Page 13.

Highlights include: Children's displays, quotes about how they feel about Immersion Week, an interview with H. Hobart Holly, president of the Quincy Historical Society, about shipbuilding.

And several guest editors created puzzles, games, even a paper doll, about Quincy's past. One fifth grader summed up the whole week by saying: "It makes you mighty proud to be from Quincy."

A special feature is an essay contest open to all elementary school children. Just write a short essay entitled "I'm Proud to be from Quincy". Writer of the winning essay will receive a $25 savings bond from the North Quincy Business and Professional Association. The essay will be featured in the Quincy Sun. Deadline for contest entries is Friday, Feb. 13.

Meanwhile, don't forget the deadline for the children's recipe contest in last week's "Young Ideas" is Friday, Jan. 30.

Senator Bayh Opens Quincy Headquarters

Democratic Presidential candidate Sen. Birch Bayh (D-Ind.) officially opened his headquarters in Quincy at 57 Granite St., Quincy Center.

In attendance were Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia, City Councillor Daniel G. Raymond, Reps. James A. Sheets, and Thomas Brownell.

Brownell has formally endorsed Bayh.

Bayh emphasized the need for a President who will take positive action to remedy the nation's economic ills.

"When areas like Quincy are made to suffer mass unemployment ranging from 13 to 14 percent of the work force, then the time has come for a President who is less concerned that too many jobs will cause inflation, and more concerned that too few jobs will cause human suffering," said Bayh.

He spoke of the necessity for regulated gas and oil prices and attributed a large part of the current economic crisis to the monopolistic tendencies of large oil companies and multinational corporations.

Asked why he was running for President, Bayh said he believes he is the only man in the race who is capable of drawing together the many diverse elements of the Democratic Party and defeating the Republicans in November.

Council Wants W. Quincy Business Properties Screened

The City Council has referred to the building inspector a resolve directing that a business at 186 Willard St. be properly screened in accordance with an ordinance passed three years ago. Councillor James A. Sheets said the ordinance was supposed to be completed with a year after it was passed.

The Council also asked the building inspector to see that the Quincy Professional Building at the corner of Copeland St. and Furnace Brook Pkwy is screened in accordance with the ordinance.

Atty. Matthew McDonnell

Shriver Area Coordinator

Sargent Shriver has named Quincy Atty. Matthew J. McDonnell as co-ordinator for the Quincy-South Shore area in Shriver's campaign for the Democratic nomination for President.

As co-ordinator, McDonnell will head up the campaign in Quincy, Braintree, Canton, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwood, Randolph and Weymouth.

Sargent Shriver has impressed me with his sensitivity to people and the issues which vitally concern them," said McDonnell.

"The people are a real part of the Shriver campaign, and we openly ask people to become involved."

The Presidential Primary in Massachusetts will be held March 2.

Atty. McDonnell has a law office in Quincy Sq. and lives at 9 Moreland Rd., with his wife, the former Eileen Dervan of Dorchester, and their four children.

City Council's Seniors Committee To Meet

The City Council Special Committee on Senior Citizens Activities will meet Thursday, Feb. 5, at 7 p.m. in the Council chambers at City Hall to review programs and services currently offered to senior citizens.

Councillor Leo J. Kelly, chairman of the committee, said the meeting would give the council members a chance to evaluate the programs and review the remodeling and consolidation of Maple St. senior citizens building.

The Council has invited officials from the Council on Aging, the R.S.V.P. program, and some city departments to attend.

ONE COUNCILLOR'S OPINION

By Paul Harold
Councillor-at Large

Congress: Keep CETA

The City of Quincy has received considerable benefit from the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act [CETA] in terms of jobs for its residents and returns from public service employment.

So it was with a certain amount of disappointment that I learned that Congress does not intend to extend CETA. As a result, beginning this month and continuing till June, more of our neighbors will be out of work.

There's no question that public service jobs must be provided by the federal government to combat the nation's high unemployment rate. But instead of its proposed $6.2 billion public works employment bill, Congress would do better to extend CETA - a community jobs program with a record of proven value in Quincy.

Hajjar's Specializes In Clothing For Big, Tall Men

If you're looking for a pair of pants with a 74 waist or a 38 leg the place to go is the new Hajjar's Clothing Store for big and tall men on Quincy Ave. at the Braintree line.

The new one opened for business Nov. 15.

"We expanded the old store three times in 25 years," said John Hajjar, founder of the company who lives at 267 South St., Quincy Point. "This time there just wasn't enough room."

Typical items include suits up to size 62, shirts size 6X with 24 necks and 38 sleeves.

Weymouth N. Upsets Quincy, North Bows To Newton

Quincy's basketball team suffered its second defeat of the season last Friday, bowing to a deliberate Weymouth North team, 52-47, but remained in second place in the Suburban League.

The Presidents still look like a shoo-in to make the Eastern Mass. Tournament for the first time in 10 years. The Presidents have an 11-2 record.

Things are not so bright for North Quincy, which is on the brink of tournament elimination following two losses last week, the last a 52-49 squeaker to Waltham. Earlier in the week the Raiders had dropped a two-point decision to Newton. The Raiders dropped to 6-6 overall and 5-6 in the Suburban League.

Friday Quincy plays at Weymouth South and North is home to Brookline. Tuesday Quincy goes to Brookline and North hosts Brockton.

Quincy lost a chance to tie for the league lead Friday as Rindge suffered its first league loss to Brockton.

Weymouth's tight defense held high scoring John Riggs to six points. Jack Uhlar had 15 points and Mike Lamie had 14.

North's downfall was the second period when it scored just two points. The Raiders rebounded with 24 in the third period to tie the score but Waltham won it in the final period.

Jay Nelson and Rich Mahoney paced the attack with 12 points apiece.

Eddie Miller's North junior varsity suffered its first loss in 12 games, losing to Waltham, 63-48. Joe Deane had 11 points and Mike Gill 10.

Earlier last week Quincy ran into foul trouble but rose to the occasion and defeated Waltham, 55-44. Amoroso was forced to lift 6-6 Uhlar in the second period and hold him in reserve due to fouls but Waltham couldn't capitalize and all the Presidents came through to preserve the win.

Riggs had 19 points and 19 rebounds but, like Uhlar and outstanding guard Steve Connolly, missed a lot of action because of fouls. Mike Kennedy and Lamie picked up the slack, and the four guards, Connolly, Kevin Donovan, Bob Silva and Ed Daley all played well.

Things went badly, however, for North Quincy, which dropped a 44-42 squeaker to Newton North in a game which was halted for an hour at Newton by a power failure. The Raiders had bad first and second periods, falling behind, 24-17, but played better in the last half.

Mahoney tied the game at 55 for North with 55 seconds left but Newton won it on Keith Russell's basket in the final eight seconds.

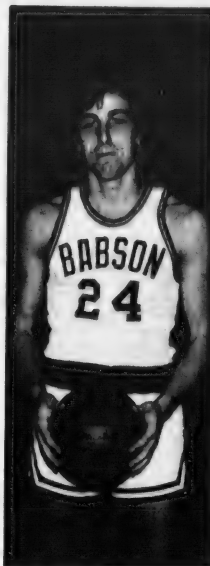

Nelson was the only North player to hit double figures with 16 points as another standout defensive performance went for naught due to a hot and cold offense.

North junior varsity ran its record to 11-0 with a 56-52 win as Bill McIntyre scored 16 points and John White had 15.

The Quincy girls' basketball team, which was rolling along toward a possible state tournament berth, had its hopes dimmed considerably last week when it lost twice.

Friday the First Ladies dropped a 47-34 decision to Weymouth North to drop their record to 7-5 [6-4 in the Suburban League].

Kelly Sparks led Quincy with Cindy Tozzi was high for the First Ladies with 11 points.

The North Quincy girls, who had lost their first four games, have come back strong and won four of their last six games.

Last Friday they defeated Waltham, 23-17, with a brilliant defensive effort. Marjorie Dow had seven points and Nancy Willard six, while Jean McCarthy and Elaine Shea spearheaded the defense.

In its previous game North had edged Newton North, 34-33, with Dow scoring 12 points and Cheryl Wren's eight.

Friday Barbara Webster's Quincy girls will host Weymouth South and Sandra Colletti's North girls will play at Brookline. Tuesday will be Brookline at Quincy and North at Brockton.

New Rivalry

Quincy, North Boys' Swim Teams To Meet Feb. 3

By TOM SULLIVAN

Still another first in the ever-expanding Quincy-North Quincy athletic rivalry will take place Tuesday, Feb. 3, at 3:15 at the Lincoln Hancock Community Pool on Granite St., when the cross-town rivals engage in their first boys' swim meet.

Last fall the schools had their first girls' swim meet in history with North winning and, despite the fact neither boys' team has a win so far, the competition Tuesday should be outstanding.

Lack of depth is a big reason for the winless records, just as it was for the girls, and both coaches, Bill Walker of North Quincy and Elaine Murphy of Quincy, have received some outstanding individual efforts. [Incidentally, the pair also coached the girls' teams].

"We invite all parents, teachers and friends to watch Tuesday's meet and encourage our swimmers," Miss Murphy said.

"This meet is rather exceptional because North and Quincy teams have been practicing together since Dec. 1 and now must face each other in actual competition. Both teams look forward to this opportunity as each considers this meet the most important of the season.

"It has been an extremely busy and enjoyable season for each team so far. Each team has outstanding young men and I was and still am impressed with their hunger to learn, their discipline as individuals and their dedication to their teams.

"Bill Walker and I work closely together with both teams. He is a man of unending patience, always has a moment to spend with not only his own swimmers, but mine, too. He is a super guy to work with."

"Our boys have done well in their first year of interscholastic swimming," Walker said. "Many are swimming competitively for the first time and most of our opponents have had varsity swimming for some time. There are 26 boys on our team and only six are seniors.

"Our team is strong in diving, breaststroke and freestyle. The butterfly and individual medley are the events in which we lack consistency and depth. We have only really been out of one meet this year. We expect an exceptionally close meet with Quincy. The boys on both teams are friends and train together daily, but friendships end in the pool and we expect keen competition."

Quincy's swimmers have been defeated by Brockton, always a powerhouse; Weymouth North, Westwood, Brookline and Randolph, while North has lost to Waltham, Cambridge Latin, Westwood, Weymouth North, Dover-Sherborn and Brookline.

Both teams will have entries in the Eastern Mass. championships Feb. 20 and 21 at Bridgewater State College and the state championships Feb. 27 and 28 at Harvard.

and Ed Reagan. Lahive and Rodberg are co-captains.

The swimmers have improved in each meet and brought their times down considerably.

Among the season's highlights were a sweep of diving against Weymouth North, Ray winning followed by Reagan and Johnson; a first for the 200-yard medley relay with a 2:15.2 timing. Lahive swimming the backstroke, Ezickson the breaststroke, Awed the butterfly and Kenney the freestyle; and second place by Awed in the 100 butterfly, Lahive in the 100 freestyle, Kenney in the 500 freestyle, Lahive in the 100 backstroke and Simpson in the 100 breaststroke.

In the Randolph meet, with stiffer competition, Ray took first in the diving with a forward double somersault, scoring 5's across the board; the 400-yard medley relay team of Fenby, Lee, Harvey and Kenney took first as did Lahive in the 100-yard backstroke.

The North Quincy squad comprises seniors Tim Griffin, freestyle; John Lydon, diving and freestyle; Frank Strazzula, freestyle, breaststroke and butterfly; John Collins, individual medley; John McKenna, freestyle, and Brian McMahon, backstroke; juniors Dan McGuigan, freestyle [distance]; Arthur Brattioni, freestyle; John Strazzula, breaststroke and individual medley; Paul Rizzo, individual medley; Neil Quinn, freestyle; Dave Palma, backstroke; Tom Nee, freestyle; Arthur McDaniel, freestyle; Bob Keezer, backstroke and individual medley; Jim Hynds, freestyle and backstroke; Dan Fowkes, freestyle; John Flate, breaststroke, and Mike Braun, butterfly and freestyle.

Also sophomores Don Martin, breaststroke; Phil Golden, freestyle [distance]; Kevin Greene, diving and individual medley; and Ed Boudreau, freestyle [distance], and freshmen John Conley, freestyle; Dave Donovan, diving and breaststroke; and Richard Forest, diving and backstroke.

Lydon and Braun are the Raider co-captains.

The Bay State Referees Association will conduct its seventh annual soccer referees course Monday, Feb. 2, at 7:30 p.m. at Quincy High School.

The course will run for five consecutive Monday nights.

a tremendous need for more qualified soccer officials.

Further information can be obtained by calling John Weil at 846-1205.

North then defeated Bridgewater-Raynham, 34-25, in a non-league meet as Beck and Knudsen remained undefeated with their 12th straight wins.

Other Raider winners were Butch Montoya, Schiarizi, Mike McGurl, Ed Hanahan and Nee, who won by forfeit.

Catalano Enters Silver Lake Marathon

Quincy High track coach Joe Catalano, one of the top New England distance runners, has entered the 10th annual Silver Lake Dodge Washington's Birthday marathon, which has already attracted more than 100 runners and is expected to have more than 500 starters Sunday, Feb. 15.

100 miles a week and takes part in many road races.

The Silver Lake marathon is officially designated as the final qualifying distance race for the 1976 Boston Marathon.

The race will start at Hopkinton High School and finish in front of the Silver Lake Dodge marathon headquarters, 444 Watertown St., Newton.

North Quincy, which stayed in first place Saturday with a 44-42 squeaker over Waltham, will meet Brockton, while Rindge Tech, an easy winner over Quincy Saturday, will clash with Weymouth South. All four teams are tied for the lead with 6-1 records.

Monday Quincy and North Quincy will meet at 5 p.m. as the league ends its season at Newton.

For the third time this season Lou Tozzi's North Quincy team had to win the relay to gain the decision and Paul McGuigan, Ken O'Brien, Bart Petracca and Jerry MacKenzie came through with MacKenzie, the anchor man, winning by four yards.

Petracca won the mile and Bob Levenson turned his best effort, 4:41, to finish second. O'Brien, beaten only by Petracca this year, won the 1000 with Jim Gavigan third, MacKenzie won the 600, and Rich Mahoney won the high jump with Steve Bonoli third. McGuigan and Tim O'Neill were 2-3 in the 300, Mike Barrett and Mike Morin 2-3 in the two-mile, Matty Constantino and Russ Chisholm 2-3 in the 50, Dave Lorman third in the hurdles and Constantino third in the shot put.

In a non-league meet earlier last week North, without some of its key personnel, edged Boston Latin, 45-41.

Petracca sparked as he turned in his best time [2:22] to win the 1000.

Other Raider winners were MacKenzie in the 600, Bob Levenson in the mile, Morin in the two-mile and Lorman in the hurdles.

[17,581]. The Elks rolled not only the weekly high team three but the season's high of 1405 and also had the high single of 491. Regan had the weekly high individual three of 342 and the high single of 139, which equals the season's high.

The Top Ten: Regan, 108.5; Brian O'Toole, 107.0; Peter Martin, 101.3; Dick Hallberg, 98.3; Bob Kelliher, 98.0; Joe Godas, 97.1; Paul Anastas, 96.8; Joe Piazza, 95.9; Dave Carr, 94.9, and Mike Hatfield, 94.7.

Giachetti In South Africa

Rich Giachetti, former North Quincy football and baseball standout, who set many pass receiving records at Tufts and is now the Tufts baseball coach, is a player-coach for a baseball team of U.S. athletes making a three-week tour of South Africa.

Giachetti, a top pitcher in baseball as well as a stickout football end, was scheduled to pitch the opening game Tuesday in Johannesburg.

Coaching the team along with Rich is Rob Nelson, a Cornell graduate who set up the tour. He is director of a baseball school in Portland, Oregon.

The invitation was extended by the South African Baseball Federation through Doc O'Connor of Arlington, who was over there.

The game will start at 8:30 p.m. following a contest between teams from the Police and Fire Departments at 7:30 p.m.

work so abruptly ended. A lot of things that might have happened might not happen now.

"But in a way it's kind of a relief. I've been expecting it but I didn't know when or how it was coming. I know now how the people of Germany felt when they were waiting for the Gestapo."

A week ago, Mayor LaRaia asked the City Council to boost the pay of the director of the Council on Aging from $15,300 to $17,000. The Council referred it to its ordinance committee.

It was rumored that the job would go to Pasquale DiStefano, president of the Quincy Citizens Association and a co-worker with LaRaia at the State Welfare Office in Quincy.

The Mayor declined to comment on the DiStefano rumors but he said an appointment to the post may be announced as soon as next week.

"If Mr. DiStefano gets the job," said Borden, "I wish him well. And I wish all the senior citizens I have come in contact with the very best."

"I hope that the incoming director will be able to continue the program that we have developed into one of the best in the state."

Meanwhile, Newcomb's attorney, former City Councilor Richard W. Barry, notified LaRaia that Newcomb was prepared to fight for his job. He said in a letter to the Mayor:

"I have advised Mr. Newcomb that Chapter 134 of the Acts of 1919 of the General Laws of this Commonwealth authorize the city of Quincy to establish a hospital and that the authority to employ and remove superintendents, nurses, attendants and employees of the hospital should be vested in the Board of Managers."

"We are further taking the position that Mr. Newcomb is an employee of the city of Quincy, that notice to Mr. Newcomb was a nullity, and if Mr. Newcomb does not continue to be paid by the city of Quincy, we will commence a damage action against the city."

Newcomb also was beneficiary of a petition signed by some 250 persons urging LaRaia to reconsider the firing. The petition called it "a gross miscarriage of justice."

It was presented to LaRaia by Irene Shannon, secretary-treasurer of Public Employees Union Local 1139.

LaRaia listed 14 persons who were released by his administration last week. They were:

Frank Rusconi, public safety inspector; Marilyn Alcott, senior clerk of the Hough's Neck Improvement Project; James Saunders, public safety inspector; Nick Fasano, assistant assessor.

John Caporale, public safety inspector; Ralph Maher, "intermittent" plumbing inspector; Carol Sutterly, Rent Grievance Board secretary; Richard Newcomb, assistant director of the hospital.

Fred Preziosi, food inspector; John Comer, assessor; John Cheney, community development coordinator; Richard McCormack, city solicitor; John Sharpy, assistant city solicitor; Harvey Towin, central project director.

Earlier, terminations were handed to Richard Buckley, purchasing agent; Brian Buckley, assistant director of Quincy Heritage; and John R. Graham in two jobs, director of Quincy Heritage and planning director.

In addition, Mrs. Dorothy DiBona, former Mayor Walter I. Hannon's secretary, was fired from her post as secretary to the hospital director. She was offered a lesser post but turned it down. By TOM HENSHAW back department budgets so far that some are already showing deficiencies.

"Then, he tries to embarrass me by filling all available city positions knowing full well I would be criticized by removing them once I took office."

"And now I find the mayor's expense account is short about $2,400. I'm sure this is only the beginning."

He said that among the

Quincy Mother, Quads 'All Doing Well'

Matthew, Amanda, Seth and William Herman were reported in satisfactory condition at Boston Hospital for Women this week after being born, all at once, but two months premature, 10 days ago.

Their mother, Mrs. Cecile [Fishman] Herman, formerly of Quincy, is also in satisfactory condition. She will probably be released from the hospital sometime this week, according to a hospital spokesman.

Mrs. Herman and her husband, Dennis, have been living with Mrs. Herman's mother, Mrs. Morris Fishman at 64 Joan Drive, Quincy.

The late Mr. Fishman, for many years, owned the Sher Drug Store, at Temple and Washington Sts., Quincy, where Cecile often worked when she was younger.

Mrs. Fishman reported Tuesday "that nobody was interested in anything except the fact that the children and their mother are all healthy."

expenses listed by the Hannon administration was $530 for a Christmas party for department heads at Stella Restaurant in Boston. Fifty three people attended.

"This is exactly what I find disturbing about the previous administration," said LaRaia, "taxpayers money being used to finance a Christmas party for people who receive the highest salaries in the city."

"A small, inexpensive party for each of the departments is one thing but $530 is excessive and unwarranted."

Busing To Cost $690,000

'Smooth' Transfer Of NQHS Students To QHS Sought

By TOM HENSHAW

Now that the knotty problem of North Quincy High School has been settled to virtually no one's deep down satisfaction, what happens next?

The School Committee voted to close North and send its students to double sessions at Quincy High while additions and renovations are made to the old building.

The vote was 6-1 with Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia not only dissenting but promising to "exercise my options to review this matter as mayor, regardless of the vote."

The next step toward a bigger and better North Quincy High was to be taken yesterday [Wednesday] at a 10 a.m. meeting between school officials and Carmine D'Olimpio of the Building Trades Union.

The discussion in the Heritage Room of the old Lincoln School in South Quincy was to center around double shifts for certain trades in construction work at the high school.

Meanwhile, the next move toward double sessions starting next fall has been going on for a couple of months.

"We are working right now to effect a smooth transfer of North Quincy students to Quincy High," says School Supt. Dr. Lawrence P. Creedon.

"It's a very complex thing.

"We have to assign teachers, figure a policy for busing [$690,000 worth], develop a procedure for feeding the kids, decide what courses to eliminate, and find a way to accommodate the extra curricular and athletic programs.

"We have to decide what equipment to move from North to Quincy High or to other schools. What are we going to put in storage and what are we going to discard or sell?"

"We have been working on this for about two months as part of reaching a decision to close North Quincy High."

In other future developments:

• Architect Barry Coletti hopes to have the plans for the addition ready in March for acceptance by the superintendent, the School Committee and the State School Building Assistance Board.

The drawings are about 80-85 percent completed at present.

• Contracts are expected to go out for bid in late March.

This is the point where Mayor LaRaia can exercise an option since the bids are put out by the Department of Public Works, which comes under the Mayor's office.

The school will also be under the authority of the Mayor while it is under construction.

"There will be more meetings to see what I can do to keep the school open with a view to the construction of a new building," LaRaia said.

Dr. Creedon said the bonds to pay for the $15 million project can be placed any time now by the city treasurer. He indicated it might be good to take advantage of a good market.

"The starting estimate was 6.5 per cent interest," he said. "Last week we could have put them out for 6.0 per cent interest. The bond market may go down even farther."

• Contracts should be awarded soon after so that ground can be broken on the site and work can get underway as soon as possible.

Mrs. DiBona Turns Down Hospital Job

Mrs. Dorothy DiBona, removed two weeks ago from her job as secretary to the Quincy City Hospital director by Mayor Joseph LaRaia, has turned down another job at the hospital which was offered to her this week.

Mrs. DiBona had been appointed secretary to Hospital Director Harlan Paine by former Mayor Walter Hannon in the last days of Hannon's administration. LaRaia said that he would not be saddled with such 11th hour appointments.

Her removal led to a stormy meeting between Mrs. DiBona and Mayor LaRaia in which the Mayor charged his predecessor in that post with making at least 60 appointments just before leaving office.

Asked for comment by The Quincy Sun, Mrs. DiBona said "the whole affair has upset me greatly." She said she did not want any job at Quincy City Hospital.

The new job, offered, clerk-typist in the hospital nursing office would pay about $30 less per week than Mrs. DiBona received in her previous position according to Paine.

Mrs. DiBona said that her plans are not clear yet. But she said she intends to take Civil Service tests to qualify for possible employment with the city in the future. She is eligible to take at least two weeks vacation on the city payroll.

Kelly Asks Appointee Probe

This Week's Scorecard: 20 More Come, Go, Shifted

Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia dealt out more appointments and disappointments this week as the City Council agreed reluctantly and gingerly to investigate at least one of them.

The Council was prodded by a semi-secret letter from former School Committeeman Paul C. Kelly into assigning its Oversight Committee to probe the Mayor's appointments.

Excerpts from the letter were read by Council President Arthur H. Tobin, who then turned it over to Councillor James A. Sheets, chairman of the Oversight Committee.

Sheets refused to make the letter public, even though he conceded that no names were mentioned in connection with the one specific case that drew down Kelly's particular wrath. Sheets said he planned to send a copy of the letter to the Mayor for response and to consult with City Solicitor Thomas Williams to determine the powers of his committee in the case.

LaRaia called The Kelly letter "a personal and political vendetta."

In the portion of the letter that was read by Tobin, Kelly noted that LaRaia, in his inaugural address, admonished citizens of Quincy "to question every appointment ... to scrutinize every administration act."

He requested scrutiny by the Oversight Committee, which is composed of the Council as a whole, into all the appointments made by LaRaia since he became mayor Jan. 5.

Kelly said he wanted the investigators to pay special attention to educational backgrounds, experience at the job, moral background [including possible criminal records]; whether the appointment is "blatantly political," and personal relationships to the Mayor.

Several councillors had reservations about such an investigation.

"I don't think the City Council should become a screening committee for the Mayor's appointments," said Councillor Warren A. Powers. "I don't think we should impede his way as chief executive."

"However, if something is damaging to the city we have to take a look at it."

"I don't think it does any good to continue the bitter mayoral election fight," said Councillor Paul D. Harold. "I don't think it serves the city's interest."

He supported, however, a "limited" investigation.

Twice in the discussion of the letter, Tobin used the term "delicate."

He paused in his reading of excerpts to note: "Everyone's rights should be protected so I am being delicate."

Again, while assigning the matter to Sheets' committee, he said: "I know the background of the chairman of the committee. He will handle it delicately."

Meanwhile, LaRaia announces some 20 appointments, reappointments, job shifts and dismissals. New appointees included:

James P. Papile of 12 Harkins St., Quincy Point, a three-year term as city assessor.

Alfred F. Colella of 9 Walnut St., Atlantic, retail store coordinator.

Pasquale DiStefano, director of Veterans Services.

Judge Albert Kramer will meet Friday with Asst. Dist. Atty. Charles Hely of Needham and Asst. Atty. Gen. Thomas Kiley of Quincy to set a date for the inquest into Quincy's mayoral election.

A joint state and county investigation turned up possible irregularities in the election in which Joseph J. LaRaia defeated Mayor Walter J. Hannon in a recount.

The recount saw 500 votes in blocks of 50 switch from Hannon to LaRaia.

Dist. Atty. William Delahunt said the inquest before Judge Kramer, who is presiding justice of Quincy District Court, probably will get underway in mid-February, maybe next week.

It will be conducted by Hely for the county and Kiley for the state over a period of at least two weeks.

"Both are capable, outstanding trial lawyers," said Delahunt.

He said some 20-25 witnesses will be summoned, including election wardens and clerks from the wards where the 50-vote blocks shifted.

Asked by The Quincy Sun if Mayor LaRaia or former Mayor Hannon would be among the witnesses called, he said, "I could not comment on that at this time."

He said City Clerk John Gillis will probably be called "to explain procedures of elections in Quincy," but he declined to comment when asked if Hannon or LaRaia would be summoned. "Witnesses will be testifying under oath," said Delahunt. "This is what makes an inquest an appropriate forum."

He said anyone with pertinent information should contact Kiley or Hely as a possible witness.

Judge Kramer has indicated that the court proceedings will be open to the public and press.

Traffic Commission Checking City Streets

Traffic Commission investigators will be checking city streets in the next few weeks making feasibility studies as the result of Monday night's City Council meeting.

The Council sent along to the Commission the following proposals:

- No parking signs on the west side of Green St. from Fenno St. to Waterston Ave., Wollaston.

- No parking signs on the south side of Waterston Ave. from Green St. to Wollaston Ave., Wollaston.

- A stop sign on Florence St. at the intersection of Fenno St., Wollaston.

- Removal of no parking signs on the entire length of Delano Ave., Germantown.

Councillor Paul D. Harold said the signs went up originally to solve parking problems created by the Quincy Adams Boatyard, which closed some 15 years ago.

- A stop sign on London Ave. at the intersection of Clement Terrace, Montclair.

- Removal of parking meters on School St., Quincy Center, in the vicinity of Nos. 3 and 13 and their replacement with no parking signs.

Harold said merging of two-lane traffic from Elm and Hancock Sts. into one-lane on School St. has made the area too heavily congested to allow parking.

- A no left turn sign on State St. at the intersection of Palmer St., Adams Shore.

- Making Federal Ave., South Quincy, one way.

- No parking signs on Grossman St., South Quincy.

What Will Happen Here If MDC Police Abolished?

The City Council Monday night asked Police Chief Francis X. Finn to determine what would happen in Quincy if the 537-man MDC police force were abolished.

Gov. Michael S. Dukakis is considering a recommendation by a citizens task force for abolishment of what has become the third largest police organization in the state.

Snow Costs $175,000

Removal of snow and ice deposited on Quincy by the storms of December and January cost the city $175,000.

Public Works Commissioner Vincent LoCicero asked the City Council Monday night to appropriate that sum from the excess and deficiency fund.

Auditor Charles L. Shea said the money would pay for all snow removal up to about 9 p.m., Monday, Feb. 2.

The request was sent to the Council's Public Works Committee for consideration.

Council Again Votes Against S. Quincy MBTA Station

Once again the City Council has gone on record against the proposed MBTA station in South Quincy.

The matter was brought up at the City Council meeting Monday night at the behest of Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia to give the new members of the Council a chance to go on record.

Each of the new councillors, Paul D. Harold and Daniel G. Raymond, thanked the Council for the opportunity and each voted "No" to the station.

Speedy Senior Service Seeks Volunteers For Visitor Program

Speedy Senior Service, information and referral center, is in need of volunteers to participate in the Friendly Visitor program.

In keeping with the philosophy of seniors helping seniors, the program is looking for older people who will visit other seniors in their homes on a regular basis.

All volunteers will be recruited through the Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP), which means that transportation and insurance will be provided while the senior is volunteering.

In addition, a short orientation will be offered to familiarize the volunteer with home visiting as well as all other available services in the area. An initial visit will be made by a Speedy Senior Service staff person who will then match the senior with the right volunteer.

Persons interested in having a visitor or in becoming a visitor should contact the Speedy Senior Service office, 1 Maple St., Quincy Sq. or call 471-3601.

Quincy Hospital Receives 2 - Year Accreditation

Quincy City Hospital has been accredited by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals (JCAH) announced Director Harlan L. Paine.

The accreditation, which covers from Jan. 12, to Jan. 12 1978, is the result of an on-site survey made by field representatives of the Joint Commission's Hospital Accreditation Program (HAP).

Accreditation indicates that the facility has chosen to operate according to standards set by JCAH and that the facility has, in the main, met these standards.

The standards, published as the "Accreditation Manual for Hospitals", set forth optimal achievable goals of excellence against which a facility can measure itself and be measured by the Joint Commission's survey. Quincy City Hospital is one of approximately 5,300 general hospitals throughout the U.S. that have earned this recognition. There are approximately 7,400 hospitals in the U.S.

The Joint Commission's accreditation surveys are voluntary. It is not legally necessary for a hospital to be accredited, but health care facilities have sought accreditation because it represents a benchmark of quality that is higher than governmental licensure alone.

The chief aim of the Hospital Accreditation Program, one of four such programs under the JCAH umbrella, is to help hospitals in their pursuit of excellence and thereby provide a higher quality of care to patients. The program also seeks to recognize, and to identify for the public, those facilities which meet its standards.

The Joint Commission began in 1951 under the auspices of the American College of Surgeons. It was incorporated in 1951 with the support of its present member organizations:

The American College of Surgeons, the American College of Physicians, the American Hospital Association, and the American Medical Association.

JCAH is a Chicago-based, non-governmental, not-for-profit organization. In addition to hospitals, it has programs for the accreditation of long term care facilities, psychiatric facilities, and facilities for the mentally retarded.

2 Downtown Buildings Sold, To Undergo $300,000 Renovation

Regent Realty of Boston has purchased two significant buildings in Quincy Center — the historic Adams Building at 1354

Hancock St. and the Norfolk Building at 1454 Hancock St. Principals Max Feinerman and Jason Rosenberg said they plan an immediate $200,000 renovation of the Norfolk Building, adding a new front and marquee, lobby and self-service elevator.

The unique exterior of the Adams Building will be preserved and the stucco and woodwork restored.

Regent will spend $100,000 on installation of new mechanical, heating and security facilities, and plans new carpeting in all its public areas.

Council Approves $1,540

For Christmas Bills

Ward 6 Councillor Dennis E. Harrington, risking cries of "bah, humbug," would like to see the city use "reasonable constraint" in its celebration of Christmas.

Harrington issued a word of caution at the City Council meeting Monday night after the Mayor's office asked for $1,540 to clean up some bills for Christmas, 1975.

It was the second time the Mayor's office had requested additional Christmas funds — although this time it was a different mayor.

The Council's original appropriation to cover the city's share of the Christmas Festival expenses, was $5,000. In December, it appropriated $1,000 more.

Auditor Charles L. Shea said he was told by the people who spent the money that Mayor Walter J. Hannon had authorized the cost overrun and told them to take it out of the Mayor's expense account.

The city pay's one-third of festival expenses, the merchants two-thirds.

Harrington cautioned the administration of Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia to "use reasonable constraints" when it came time to budget money for Christmas 1976.

"There are no financial goals set for this expenditure," he said. "Bills are continually plaguing us."

"There is a lesson to be learned. If we are going to be involved in this, money limits should be set."

Nevertheless, the Council approved the appropriation.

Newcomb Delays Court, Hopes To Be Re-instated

Richard Newcomb, recently fired by Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia, has delayed his decision to sue the city for damages in hopes that he will be re-instated to his job as assistant Quincy City Hospital director.

Newcomb was fired two weeks ago from Quincy City Hospital and, sources say, he was not paid on the last regular payday.

His decision to sue, according to his attorney, former City Councillor Richard W. Barry, was based on a law which he said gives the authority to hire and fire hospital employees to the hospital Board of Managers, not the Mayor.

If Newcomb's job is not returned to him, or if some other settlement is not made between him and the city, Barry said, he will go to court to seek damages at least equaling loss of salary for up to two years.

Hospital Director Harlan Paine said that the Board of Managers called a special meeting Tuesday night "presumably" to discuss the matter but the results of this meeting were not available at press time.

Meanwhile, it was learned, that members of the hospital medical staff have urged Mayor LaRaia to reinstate Newcomb.

LaRaia Asks $2,500 For Expenses

The Mayor's office is running out of money for expenses.

Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia asked the City Council Monday night for $2,500 to keep his office in supplies.

The money, he suggested, could be transferred from the Mayor's and Council's out of state travel account.

Last week, LaRaia charged that former Mayor Walter J. Hannon spent three-quarters of the office expense account during the half of the budget year that he was in office.

John Salenius, the Mayor's administrative aide, said the extra expense money was needed because "we found the supplies depleted when we came into office."

The request was referred to the Finance Committee.

Heated Waterbeds Can Save Newborn Babies' Lives

Heated waterbeds sound wonderful for winter nights. They may also save little lives, reports the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association.

Every year in the United States, thousands of infants die from a respiratory disease syndrome called crib death. The pattern is almost always the same. The baby is put to bed happy and healthy. During the night, there is no sign of disturbance of any kind. In the morning, the baby is dead.

The cause is not suffocation. Autopsies show no clear-cut pathology in the lungs or anywhere else; there's no evidence of vomiting or choking.

This fatal phenomenon, some experts believe, is brought about by spasms of the vocal chords which shut off the intake of air during sleep. A viral infection in the respiratory tract could cause breathing difficulties and trigger the lethal spasm. Death may result from an inability to breathe through the mouth when nasal passages close. No one knows for sure. But the disease happens more often in winter than any other season. Now doctors at the University of California hope that heated waterbeds can help reduce the death toll among newborn babies. Dr. Louis Gluck, who has developed a method for predicting this condition in unborn infants, says the small water matress, kept at body temperature, gives the baby the same sense of weightlessness that he or she felt in the womb itself. A beating oscillator can give the infant a constant sense of motion, and the recording of a heartbeat can duplicate the mother's and be passed through the waterbed.

Researchers plan to set up the gurgling, bleeping environ for babies in the infant intensive care unit at the University's School of Medicine at San Diego.

To find out more about ways of treating all kinds of lung disease, contact your Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association - the "Christmas Seal" people, at 326-4081. And answer your Christmas Seal letter. It's a Matter of Life and Breath [R].

Women's Caucus To Monitor Presidential Delegate Meetings

The South Shore Women's Political Caucus announces plans to monitor the upcoming Democratic Caucus meetings in the 11th Congressional District.

The 1976 Presidential delegate selection process in Massachusetts calls for one caucus per candidate for each of the state's 12 Congressional districts. Eleven Democratic candidates are holding caucuses in the area Feb. 15.

The 1976 Affirmative Action and Delegate Selection Plans clearly set out the policy that "slates of delegates and alternates must be composed of 50 percent women and 50 percent men." This means that Bayh, Carter, Harris, Jackson, Kelleher, McCormack, Shriver, Udall and Wallace must look to women to support their candidacies and run as their delegates and alternates.

Any Democratic women interested in monitoring a caucus or in participating in one should contact Joyce Baker, 162 Warren Ave., Wollaston.

Today's Women

Commands A.F. Unit

She's A Cadet Lieutenant Colonel And A.F. ROTC Unit Commander

Leona M. Bosader, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Bosader of 34 Chubbuck St., Quincy Point, is the cadet commander of the Air Force Junior ROTC Squadron which operates in the Quincy Public Schools.

She holds the rank of Cadet lieutenant colonel.

This is in keeping with the times when girls are entering the armed forces at a much higher rate than ever before. This year, 20 young ladies are enrolled in the Quincy unit. Only four girls were enrolled three years ago when they were first admitted to ROTC. Next year females will be admitted to the military academies for the first time in history and also will be eligible for ROTC scholarships at civilian colleges. Both the Air Force and Navy are to begin flying training programs to teach girls to become pilots who will fly military aircraft in a noncombat role.

Cadet Lt. Col. Bosader has been busy since she assumed command of the squadron last September. She led the units Color Guard during Quincy Sports Night at Veterans Stadium. She was responsible for the entire squadron when they took part in the annual wreath laying ceremony at the tomb of President John Adams in the Church of the Presidents, Quincy Sq.

She also met with her counterparts from other ROTC units from all over Massachusetts when Governor Dukakis issued an ROTC proclamation at the State House. She was responsible for planning and conducting cadet field trips to the Boston Science Museum and the battleship USS Massachusetts at Fall River.

These activities along with fund raising drives and academic pursuits have kept Cadet Bosader fully occupied during the first semester of her senior high school year and provided valuable experience in a leadership situation.

Other members of the Cadet staff are:

Deputy Commander, Cadet Major Russell Hodgkins; Operations Officer, Cadet Major Peter DelVecchio; Personnel Officer, Cadet Major Stephen Gutro; Finance Officer, Cadet Major William Norkus; Administration Officer, Cadet Major Kathy Coull; Information Officer, Cadet Major Diane Swanson; Material Officer, Cadet Major Patrick Younie; A Flight Commander, Cadet Captain Mark J. McCormick; B Flight Commander, Cadet Captain Joseph Weyres; C Flight Commander, Cadet Captain David Haddix; First Sergeant, Cadet Master Sergeant Brian Donovan; Guidon Bearer, Cadet Staff Sergeant Diane Nicholson.

The staff is rotated twice each year to provide opportunities for the cadets to work in several career fields while in the ROTC program at High School. The course is available to students at all three Quincy Public High Schools.

Conditioning Classes For Asthmatic Children At YMCA

Beginning Wednesday and continuing for 18 weeks, a second series of physical conditioning classes will be held for asthmatic children between 6 and 13 years of age.

Classes will be held Wednesdays from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. at the Quincy YMCA and asthmatic children from the cities and towns in the South Shore are eligible. The program is sponsored by the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association as part of their efforts in the field of respiratory diseases.

The children will participate in a supervised physical education program planned to improve the child's physical fitness and stamina which will, hopefully lessen the chances of an exertionally induced asthma attack.

Specialized diaphragmatic breathing exercises will be practiced in order to increase respiratory capacity and minimize the severity of asthma attacks. In addition, efforts will be made to increase the child's self-confidence and ability to manage his asthma.

The program is designed to augment the child's medical treatment, therefore the child's physician must approve enrollment in the class, and at completion a report will be sent to the physician.

For further information write to the Lung Association, 745 High St., Westwood, MA 02090 or call 326-4081.

FONDUE POT PERILS

One of the most dangerous cooking fads to come to the entertaining scene today is fondue pot cooking. Basically it is dipping meat into an open pot of hot oil or molten cheese. It's elements of hot oil and open flame are burn accidents waiting to happen. Although fondue cooking adds a touch of ceremony, it also adds a touch of danger. Here are a few recommendations from the National Safety Council for the safe use of a fondue pot.

Place an electric fondue pot close to an outlet, so no one will trip over the cord and upset the pot.

Never completely fill an alcohol burner. Alcohol, expanding with heat, can overflow and set fire to table covering. Reduce spattering when cooking meat by adding a teaspoon of salt to three cups of oil and blot the meat dry before adding to the pot.

Ignore recipes telling you that oil is ready when it bubbles. It could smoke and blaze before that. Test with a piece of meat.

Missing: 37 Tons Of Fat

There are 37 tons of fat missing in Quincy reports the Diet Workshop. But they're really not missed! Members of The Diet Workshop who have lost all that weight in the past eight years don't want any part of them nor will they issue a reward to the finders. Those pounds are gone and good riddance!

These "losers" will sleep better nights knowing that without all the excess fat they'll feel better and live much longer. Diet Workshop members only average a loss of about two pounds per week, yet over the months the total amount of weight loss obviously becomes more and more impressive!

If other Quincy residents want to contribute to the growing mountain of lost fat, they may do so weekly at Temple Adas Shalom, 435 Adams St., on Tuesdays at 9:30 a.m. [Classes also meet in several other Quincy locations].

There is no obligation for attending and new members [men, teenagers, too!] may join

QUINCY COOPERATIVE BANK THINKS A WOMAN'S PLACE IS WHEREVER SHE WANTS IT TO BE.

We don't just think that. We get her there. Walk into any of our branches and have a look at our employees. You'll find women working for us as tellers, secretaries, and executives. They hold those positions, not because they're women. But because we feel they're the best qualified people for the jobs.

They work here at QCB because it's a nice place to work. And we've done our best to make it a nice place for you to bank. From the warm, friendly greeting to the clean, modern decor. Add that to the full range of banking services we offer and you'll find us to be a bank for all reasons. Our attitude and services reflect the spirit of Josiah Quincy, Jr., founder of cooperative banking in Massachusetts and the man for whom our bank was named. Although Josiah lived long before women's rights and liberation, we know for certain . . .

JOSIAH WOULD HAVE LIKED THAT.

Your Hair Is Always Your Crowning Glory

Spring clean your beauty routine for freshened up, versatile look

Pretty look dawn to dusk

SOFT WAVES ARE SPRINGING UP on this season's prettiest heads. Women everywhere are going from straight to wavy, curly looks, with floppy bangs and flared sides.

cause today's blow-dry styles let hair follow its natural tendencies — bone straight or super curly.

Get hair back in great condition!

For the beauty-conscious here are some conditioning care tips to renew hair health and help it look its natural best:

- Always rinse hair thoroughly after shampoo, and towel blot to remove excess water.

- Apply conditioner two inches from the scalp, then work down to hair ends. It's the hair not the scalp that needs this therapy.

- To work in conditioner, separate strands with your fingers and use a wide-tooth comb to distribute it evenly through the hair.

- Leave conditioner on for one minute, then rinse hair thoroughly with fresh-flowing water.

- Keep in mind that wet hair should look shiny. If it's dull, there's too much conditioner left in and this can weigh hair down and make it limp.

- Give a final rinse with cool water — as cold as you can stand — to firm up strands and close the cuticle so it glows with shine. Now the hair is ready to style into your favorite campus look.

Popping up for spring are green trees and fresh flowers in vibrant colors that signal new bursts of growth and energy. It's nature's time for recharging batteries and time for you to take broom to garage and dust mop to closets in the traditional spring clean-up.

To get a head start on putting your own house in order, spring clean your beauty routine beginning with a new casual go-everywhere hair-style to freshen up a winter-weary appearance.

Start with a good professional cut — one that flatters the shape of your face, complements your individual hair-type, and can be easily styled with today's new hand-held dryers to look best with the least time spent.

And remember, by trimming split ends and re-shaping, you'll encourage new hair to grow in shining and healthy-looking.

A good versatile hair-style to choose is cut blunt mid-length between chin and shoulder. This length can be pulled back and tied off the face for tennis, swept up on top of the head for an elegant evening, or just swinging care-free for a day in the office or outdoor errand-

The Election Inquest

It seems the controversial 1975 city election just doesn't want to go away.

It's still haunting us, three months later. And will continue to do so for a number of more weeks at least until a court inquest is completed.

Atty. Gen. Francis Bellotti and Dist. Atty. William Delahunt called for the inquest last week after their respective offices spent weeks investigating alleged irregularities in the mayoral election.

Judge Albert R. Kramer, presiding justice of Quincy District Court, granted their request.

We applaud the action of all three.

For one thing it should silence the rumormongers who predicted Mr. Bellotti and Mr. Delahunt—both being Quincy residents—would “whitewash” the affair because of personal closeness to the local political scene and to some of the candidates.

Indeed, Mr. Delahunt's name was actually on the ballot as a councillor-at-large candidate though he had withdrawn as a candidate after being named district attorney last August.

Well, there certainly was no whitewash.

Findings of the Bellotti-Delahunt probe cited in their report for the inquest included:

- “It appears that the election officers charged with conducting the count may have been improperly appointed....

- “Unauthorized persons may have been within the guardrail [where counting was taking place]....

- “Unauthorized persons may have contributed to an atmosphere of confusion leading to the improper entries.”

- “To the extent that the alleged violations were willful, they give rise to criminal action....”

- “To the extent that they are the result of human error and a faulty system, an election inquest will help clarify the problems and eliminate recurrences.”

They are not saying there was deliberate wrongdoing. They are not saying someone tried to steal the election. They are not saying that someone purposely set the stage to make it appear someone tried to steal an election.

All of those accusations spread wildly throughout the city election night and the following day and they are still with us. There are those in Quincy who actually want and hope deliberate wrongdoing is uncovered. They are the haters—and we have them in Quincy. They apparently have been around for sometime but it took this bitter election for them to surface.

Judge Kramer is to be commended not only for granting the inquest but for voluntarily deciding to open the proceedings to the public and press. He cited “The overriding public interest in the election,” in his unusual decision.

Usually inquests are held behind closed doors. These proceedings, however, will remain open and will go into closed session only for a special valid reason such as protecting the identity of a witness or other individual for good reason.

We assume those who testify will be placed under oath. Thus, the truth about the election should be finally established.

We do not know what the final findings will be. If there was deliberate wrongdoing—or just sloppy election work conduct—we hope the inquest findings will prevent a recurrence.

The election tore the city apart. And it isn't going back together again very easily. The last thing we need is another bitter election in the future.

While commending Mr. Bellotti, Mr. Delahunt and Judge Kramer, we also think the two central and feuding figures, Mayor Joseph LaRaia and former Mayor Walter Hannon deserve a little praise for what so far has been proper restraint on their part in their reaction to the call for the inquest.

Mayor LaRaia who defeated Mr. Hannon by 483 votes when 617 votes—including six 50-vote blocks—shifted from Mr. Hannon, said he would reserve comment.

He urged an “expeditious but thorough inquest so that the citizens of Quincy will soon know what happened on Nov. 4th.”

Former Mayor Hannon who thought he had been re-elected to a third term by 134 votes until the recount, said of the inquest:

“Just let it run its course. I was the one who asked for the investigation. There were a lot of unanswered questions around. Maybe some of them will be answered now.

We hope so—once and for all.

COUNCIL BRIEFS

The City Council Monday night tabled a request by the School Department for $525 to purchase two used office safes.

School Purchasing Manager Basil Caloia said one was needed for the Vo-Tech School to protect culinary funds and the other for the business office to hold bus tickets and petty cash.

He said the School Department had found that used safes do the job as well as new ones, which cost up to $1,500.

The old and smaller safe at the Vo-Tech, he said, would be sent to the evening division, where night school registration collections sometimes reach $5,000.

The money, he said, is kept only overnight.

Caloia told the Council that the School Department once employed a bonded messenger to handle the funds but he quit when he decided the job was too dangerous.

Councillor Dennis E. Harrington suggested that if there was danger connected with the job it might not be the proper way to handle money with school children around.

“I don't know of any other business that holds money overnight,” he said.

A request by Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia for a zoning change on land at 86-106 Whitwell St. and 65-71 Colonial Drive was referred to the City Council's Hospital Committee Monday night.

The land is to be used for possible expansion of City Hospital.

Councillor Dennis E. Harrington, who is chairman of the Hospital Committee, said he would like to discuss plans for the land with the hospital's board of managers and director.

The City Council's Public Works Committee will hold a public hearing March 8 at 6 p.m. on the acceptance of Wentworth St., Wollaston, as a public highway.

The City Council Monday night appropriated $1,230 for the purchase of two electronic typewriters and two electronic calculators for the City Purchasing Agent. The items would replace equipment that was stolen.

The City Council Monday night appropriated $1,550 to pay the city's share of the salary of a director for a federally funded work project for pre-delinquent youths.

The project will be conducted under the auspices of the Youth Commission.

The Cemetery Department's expense account is nearly out of money.

The sum of $3,000 was requested from the City Council Monday night from the Excess and Deficiency Fund to replenish it.

Auditor Charles L. Shea said the Department's personal services account contains some $117,000 but it would be needed to meet payrolls from now to the end of the fiscal year.

The Council tabled the request.

SUNBEAMS

‘We'll Put You Out Of Business’

By HENRY BOSWORTH

When you get a letter like the one I received the other day, you first wonder what to do with it.

The easy thing to do would be to ignore it and toss it in the basket. But after thinking it over, I decided to share it with Quincy Sun readers who might be interested in some of the remarks in it and maybe wonder what it's like to be the editor of a local newspaper.

It is an example, I think, of the way a few others in Quincy think: those who want you to write what they want you to write, those who are always right and consider you always wrong, those who become infuriated if you don't agree with them, those who want to drag ethics into almost any issue and those who are bent on revenge.

There is a strong reference to both former Mayors Walter Hannon and James McIntyre in the letter. Remarks about Mr. Hannon's honesty borders on libel but he has given us permission to use it, saying: “I'm honest, they can say what they want.”

The writer signs the letter “Mrs. B. M. and a common last name beginning with the letter “K”, but with no address other than “Quincy, Mass.”

Because we do not have an address and the name could be confused with someone else we will merely refer to her as “Mrs. B.M.K.”

The letter follows with the grammar and spelling and sentence structure as they actually appear in the letter:

“Dear Mr. Bosworth:

“I've been buying the Quincy Sun ever since its been published, it seems that every time I look at it you always knocking Mayor LaRaia down, my husband and I voted for him because he was an honest man and still is.

“Mayor Hannon was very disgusted and dishonest. I hope that Hannon is punished for all the wrong he did and that goes for everyone that worked for him and people had to be sick to vote for him in the first place.

“We heard a rumor that you never cared for Italians any way so why don't you just leave Mayor LaRaia alone and start printing the good things about him, its about time they got rid of the big machine and more to go including James McIntyre he's the big—behind this whole dam mess.

“Also, I'll say one more thing, my husband [and] I are going to discontinue the Quincy Sun and we've made 34 calls to friends and relatives [who always bought the Sun] to do the same thing which they agreed.

“Before we're all through wile make sure your out of business because your too outspoken about many things. You must be related to Hannon the way you stick up for him. Your paper stinks so why don't you give it up.”

“P.S. My husband and I aren't Italian but we still voted for Mayor LaRaia because he's going to make a dam good & honest mayor he'll run this city better than Hannon ever did.”

The letter speaks for itself. But for what it's worth, I would like to set the record straight, Mrs. B.M.K.

I'm not related to former Mayor Hannon. And you might be interested in knowing that I'm Irish, English and Italian. I'm a member of Quincy Lodge Sons of Italy 1295—by blood line.

★★★

ONE CRITIC CITES the late Edward [Red] Lewis being replaced by James Ricciuti as Mayor James McIntyre's executive secretary. And that's true. But that didn't happen until two years after McIntyre took office. We still can't recall a mayor mowing down as many previous appointees as fast as Mayor LaRaia has.

★★★

REPORTS also have it that the City Council will hold onto its office on the second floor—the office Mayor LaRaia wanted for his budget coordinator, Sarah Saccone. Insiders predict that Sarah will get the Personnel Office space instead with Mary McGinty and her staff moving to the John F. Kennedy Board Center.

★★★

AND, observers think there will be a Hugo-for-a-Hugo change on the Quincy Housing Authority board. Chairman Hugo Saluti's term expires this month. Hugo [Flip] Fabrizio is believed to be in line as his replacement.

★★★

RELIABLE SOURCES say that Fred Lane, the new Quincy Heritage director, definitely was not fired by WJDA. Lane, the station's chief engineer—and a good one—reportedly was urged by management to stay on the job he held since shortly after the late Jim Asher put the station on the air in 1947. Lane reportedly was given his choice. And he took the Quincy Heritage job.

INCIDENTALLY, His Honor may be catching flak from some quarters as he lops off municipal heads from Walter Hannon's administration, but he got a royal welcome at the Montclair Men's Club dinner: a standing, rousing ovation.

Dog Track At Dennison Airport Opposed

By TOM HENSHAW

Proposals for a dog track at site of Dennison Airport drew vehement opposition at hearings in the State House and City Hall despite a favorable referendum for it at recent Quincy elections.

Harold T. Dennison of 36 Curtis Rd., Quincy, president of the Dennison Airport Kennel Club, Inc., said his group planned to spend $150,000 to make it "one of the outstanding tracks of its kind in this country."

The opposition was led by Rev. William B. Ayers of Union Congregational Church, Wollaston, Rep. Charles W. Hedges of Quincy and City Councillor John R. Shaughnessy, who said:

"There is nothing lower than a dog track. Three of the six operated in Illinois were controlled by Al Capone."

One of those seeking the permit to build the track was former Quincy Mayor William A. Bradford.

NORTH QUINCY ADDITION

The City Council authorized construction of the final wing of North Quincy High School with $349,000 in federal funds provided by the Public Works Administration.

Unfortunately, all present PWA funds had been allocated and construction of a North Quincy High addition would have to wait for Congress to pass a pending public works bill.

The Quincy Council of Parent Teachers Associations expressed concern that "political filibustering" would be used to delay construction.

The PTAs feared that the City Council, aware there were no PWA funds available, would borrow money for other city construction jobs, leaving North Quincy's youngsters high and dry.

NRA CODE VIOLATED

Edward A. Scolamiero, proprietor of Eddie's Modern Barber Shop in West Quincy, charged that some of his competitors were violating the code of the National Recovery Administration [NRA].

"They have slashed their prices beneath the NRA scale," he said, "and they keep their shops open 12 and 14 hours a day in complete disregard of the code."

The NRA code, agreed to by the barbers, set haircuts at 50 cents, shaves at 25 cents and closing times at 6 p.m. on all days except Wednesday [12 noon] and Saturday [9 p.m.].

HARD TIMES

The difficulties of the times were spelled out in the "Situations Wanted" columns on the classified ad pages:

"Young man, 24 years old, would like work of any kind, cleaning cellars, etc. Will work by day, hour or week, 30 cents an hour."

"Capable man, age 40, drive car, keep books, willing to do anything, $7 a week and room and board."

CURLEY SEEKS FEDERAL MONEY

Gov. James Michael Curley asked the federal government to approve his request for $230.5 million in construction projects throughout Massachusetts.

Quincy's share was set at $3,478,400, including $760,000 for a highway from Fore River Bridge to the Milton line and $1 million to widen Quincy Shore Drive.

SUBMARINER SPEAKS

Lt. Frank Wiesner of the U.S. Navy, who served aboard a submarine in the German Navy during the World War, recalled his wartime experiences for the North Quincy Knights of Columbus.

"One beautiful evening," he said, "we laid off Coney Island so near we could see the lights and occasionally catch the music."

SPEAKING OUT

Takes Issue With 'January Massacre'

[Ed. Note: It is the policy of The Quincy Sun not to print a letter unless the name of the writer appears with it. We are making an exception in this case because it is a counter view to last week's "January Massacre" story and editorial and because the writer does identify herself but asks that her name not be used.]

Webster, in the Concise Edition of the New World Dictionary, defines the word Massacre as "indiscriminate, merciless killing of human beings." I believe this was a very poor choice of wording on the part of The Quincy Sun. And, I was surprised when I heard your comment on Party Line that you could only remember such a tremendous change in administration when the administration changed from Plan E to the present Plan A.

Don't you remember 1966 and the names Charles R. Herbert, Edward T. Lewis, Thomas Sheerin, Thomas Morrissey, Douglas Randall and Stephen T. Keefe? Each of these persons were City employees, some having been employed prior to the late Amelio Della Chiesa's election and others having been appointed by him. There were also many members of boards appointed by him.

It is true that Mayor McIntyre may not have relieved all of these persons of their duties immediately after his inauguration - but if you will check the records all of them and perhaps others, whose names escape me at the minute, were not in the employ of the City at the end of Mr. McIntyre's term. In addition, it was not possible for any other Mayor to dismiss at least nineteen employees at any one period. Did you notice some of the titles mentioned in your article: Executive Director of the Council on Aging; Public Safety Inspectors [3]; Senior Clerk of Hough's Neck Improvement Project; "Intermittent" Plumbing Inspector; Rent Grievance Board Secretary; Community Development Coordinator; Central Project Director. When did these jobs come into effect; Were they created during Mr. Della Chiesa's term? Also mentioned were the Assistant Director of the Hospital and Mayor's Secretary. How many Assistant Directors did we have during Della Chiesa's term - and how many Mayor's secretaries were there during his term?

It has been reported that the Attorney for the Assistant Director of the Hospital recently "oustes" states it is not within the authority of the Mayor to fire this employee, but that this authority only lies within the scope of the Board of Managers. Why, then, was it within the authority of Mayor Hannon to appoint to that position - and not the Board? When did a Mayor appoint a secretary to any office - why do we have a Personnel Department, both for the City and for the Hospital - what is their function?

I believe, very strongly, that employees should be considered based on their qualifications for a position and then work performance should be given consideration when it comes time for new appointments. But it has always been true that any person appointed by a Mayor, to a non-Civil Service position, or to a newly created job without tenure, is well aware that this position can be considered of a temporary nature, only for the period during the term of office of the appointing authority.

It is inevitable that these persons, hired because of their loyalty and backing of a Mayor, who continue that loyalty and backing during their employment, will be dismissed by a new Mayor who, himself, also has loyal supporters and backers.

It is certainly unfortunate that some of these positions and employees are of such a temporary nature and that qualifications and work performance have absolutely no meaning - but for as far back as I can remember [26 years] it has always been so - and everyone rooted for their "man" so that they could build up their retirement benefits - and it was too bad if their "man" didn't win!

Thank you for allowing me the opportunity to express my personal feelings. For at least 10 years while I was in the front office at City Hall you and I saw what happened in the administration - and I was surprised that you couldn't remember that Mr. McIntyre had "massacred" some pretty capable and qualified persons when he took office. If I had remained in my position, until January 1966, I am sure I could add my name to the list of persons "released" or terminated (or not reappointed) by Mayor McIntyre - because I was a supporter of Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa during the period I was employed by him.

Questions NQHS Addition Article

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The public is cynical about the communication media in general, and about the press in particular. And rightly so. Printed statements can be verified. But retractions become so well hidden, that falsehoods tend to masquerade as facts.

The fault does not lie entirely with the press. Too often, what's actually said is accurately reported, but without questioning the statement. If publishers and editors wish to be respected, the fourth estate must check the veracity of what it prints.

By repetition, half truths and fallacies come to be believed as whole truth. Snowballing thus can become a propaganda technique, which is known as "repeating the big lie." Paragraphs 7 and 8 of Tom Henshaw's article on NQHS in the Quincy Sun (1/22/76) illustrate the point:

"North Quincy High School was built in the late 1920's as a junior high school for 1,600 students.

"Since that time it had undergone only one major addition, the Cap Bryan Gym, dedicated in 1962."

Dr. Crendon has stated the first quoted paragraph many times. I've heard him. It's true that the first section of NQHS was built fifty years ago for use as a junior high school. Additional facts, which delineate the whole truth, however, are succinctly stated by the late William C. Edwards in History of Quincy (1954), p. 125:

"The first unit of the North Quincy High School was completed and dedicated Feb. 8, 1927. The east wing was completed in Sept. 1931, and the west wing in 1936. The class of 1934 was the first class to be graduated from North Quincy High School."

It should be noted that the school was not shut down, while the new wings were added. Warnings of double sessions, therefore, seem to be but deliberate double talk, designed to promote a special building complex. Furthermore, those warnings have snowballed for almost six years, since February and March of 1970, despite a declining population.

That is, of course, if the last 6 paragraph of the NQHS article, (page 20 of the current Quincy Sun) with quotations attributed to Dr. Crendon, can be believed!

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

How Many Registered To Vote In Mass.?

"How many people are registered to vote in Massachusetts - and how many actually voted in the last state election?" a caller recently asked the Voter Information Phone.

The ViPhone volunteer replied that 2,828,309 voters were registered in Massachusetts in August 1974, approximately 72 percent of those qualified to register. In the 1974 state election, a total of 1,896,421 voters actually went to the polls, approximately 67 percent of those who were registered and only 48 percent of the total population eligible to register and vote.

This question is one of many now being received by the Voter Information Phone, a free statewide public service of the League of Women Voters. Individuals with any questions on government may call the ViPhone Monday through Friday, between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. The number in the Boston area is 357-5880. Outside the Boston metropolitan area, callers should dial 1-800-882-1649, toll-free.

40% Employee Increase

Business Up 65 per Cent At Barker's New Location

Business has improved 65 percent over the past year at Barker's, located in the downtown district.

Relocation, expansion, and an investment in the range of $50,000 to $60,000 for physical building improvements is credited.

The number of employees at the store has also risen approximately 40 percent.

Barker's, a stationery, office supply and gift store, is located in the heart of Quincy Center, the target of recent revitalization efforts.

Two examples of this process were the creation of the Quincy Center Development Plan, and the establishment of the Downtown Development Office, funded by the Economic Development Administration since September 1974.

When Barker's moved from 2,000 square feet of space into 7,500 square feet, Richard Barker, owner, made the decision to refurbish the new building.

"It was a choice between maintaining the status quo we had had for 40 years, or putting new life into the business. To make the store work for us in the new location, we had to make ourselves unique," said Barker.

Refurbishing included putting up a new exterior facade and modernizing the interior with paint, wallpaper, and lighting to create a "cheery" atmosphere. Some of the existing walls within the store were also removed to create more space for merchandise.

While Barker's carries basically the same lines it had in the old store, inventory is 300 percent over what it had been. "We've made substantial investments in the property but I look at it as a long term investment in the future. The extra profits have been reinvested into new merchandise, but I expect a leveling off of this by the end of next year," said Barker. "Over a long term period of about five years, the expenditures we've made will pay for themselves," he added.

He envisions a positive future for downtowns. He thinks that because of the rising cost of fuel, it will become more economically feasible for people to live closer to city cores. It will then become an even higher priority to revitalize these areas. He also believes downtowns have much more to offer at lower prices than suburban shopping centers.

Barker also pointed out some of the problems in doing business in a downtown.

"Most cities neglect to develop a basic shopping environment. A shopping plaza is owned by a corporation, and anyone who establishes a store there must conform to basic standards."

In a city however, property is maintained by individuals who have a variety of standards. Barker, as many others, has given some thought to this and offers a solution through the creation of a committee with representatives from City Hall, the assessors office and a core of merchants.

"These three elements could establish a basic business code that property owners would have to adhere to," said Barker.

He believes the city would also have to develop a tax abatement incentive program to encourage the upgrading of property to meet requirements.

Keohane Funeral Home Member Order International Golden Rule

Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy, has been accepted for membership in the International Order of the Golden Rule for the 12th consecutive year.

Membership in the order, the world's largest limited membership organization for funeral directors, must be renewed annually on recommendation of families it has served and professional men in the area.

It has nearly 1,300 members around the world.

"Over the years," Executive Director Roger Ytterberg said, "the Order has become a more and more professional group. There are now nearly 1,300 members throughout the world, and the knowledge and experience they share make them uniquely able to serve their respective communities."

Ytterberg noted that regional meetings and an international conference are held each year to offer members sources of new information relative to the profession.

"Our entire concept of what is 'relative to the profession' has changed in recent years," Ytterberg said. "With the growth of thanatology, grief therapy, and other fields of study in the universities, we are able to obtain speakers with new and valuable things to say. The emphasis is now placed upon making funeral service truly helpful and meaningful to the survivors, to those who are left behind and most go on."

Continuous research is conducted at the Order's home office, and information is made available to members through newspapers and newsletters.

"Our continuing goal," Ytterberg said, "is to work with our members for the improvement of the profession and the benefit of the families they serve."

Reliance Insurance Co. Moving To State Street South

The Boston based branch of the Reliance Insurance Company will be relocating its offices from 3 Center Plaza to State Street South, North Quincy.

The announcement was made by Kevin C. Phelan, vice president, SSB Realty, Inc., and completes several months of negotiations ending in an agreement for approximately 20,000 square feet of office space on the fifth floor of the building.

More than 125 persons will take part in the relocation which is expected to take place at the end of April.

Phelan cited Reliance's relocation as another strong indication of State Street South's growing popularity amongst office space users in the Metropolitan area. He added that some 90 per cent of the building has already been committed and that it would not be unrealistic to expect to complete the rental program by the end of this year.

Delahunt Appointed To Judicial Needs Committee

Gov. Michael Dukakis has appointed Dist. Atty. William D. Delahunt of Wollaston, to a 20-member Select Committee on Judicial Needs to be chaired by former Watergate Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox.

Dukakis charted as a major goal for the coming year the introduction of measures to reduce delay in the Massachusetts courts. The new panel will play a central role in achieving that goal, he said.

"I am charging the Committee with the task of making legislative and administrative recommendations to reduce backlog and delay in our courts," Dukakis stated. He noted that he expected the Committee to report back its recommendations within six months.

'Young Ideas' Recipe Contest Winners To Be Announced Feb. 12

Because of the many entries received in the "Young Ideas" recipe contest, winners will not be announced until next week, Feb. 12.

The extra time is needed to read all of the entries.

Twenty-three prizes—including a 20-pound Valentine cake—are being awarded by the famed Montilio's Bakery, sponsor of the four-page "Young Ideas" pullout newspaper for elementary school children that appeared in The Quincy Sun Jan. 22.

In addition to the huge Valentine cake, 20 monster cakes will be awarded to 20 other winners.

All winning recipes will be featured in the Massachusetts Fields School dessert cookbook being prepared by parents, teachers and pupils of the school.

Proceeds from the cookbook will go to the Quincy Scholarship Fund and the PTO Fund.

The deadline in the "Young Ideas" recipe contest was last Friday. No more entries are being accepted.

Meanwhile, don't forget that the deadline for the essay contest, "I'm Proud To Be From Quincy" which appeared in the Jan. 29 issue of "Young Ideas" is Friday, Feb. 13.

This contest is sponsored by the North Quincy Business and Professional Association. Winner will receive a $25 savings bond from the association. The winning essay will also be printed in The Quincy Sun.

Bingo Games Must Have Uniformed Police Officer

By TOM BRADY

The city Licensing Board Tuesday ordered all bingo games operating in the city to have a uniformed police officer on detail during the operation of the games or to go before the board to ask for an exemption.

The order, initiated by Police Chief Francis X. Finn, was based on a recommendation by the State Lottery Commission which regulates the gambling aspects of the games.

The Commission said, in a letter to bingo operators across the state, that there have been several robberies during or after some games and suggested that the operators hire police details as a deterrent.

The Licensing Board members decided to require such details, but agreed that games with low attendance, such as those operated in senior citizens buildings, would not require an officer. Operators of these games must now go before the board to "show cause" for exemption from the ruling.

director of the Council on Aging.

Robert Beniers of 41 Grenwald St., director of recreation.

Herbert Reppucci, assistant director of RSVP.

Ken Walsh of Pearl St., Civil Defense director.

John McAuliffe of 65 Grogan Ave., assistant assessor.

Dismissals included:

David Player, food inspector, who "will not be replaced in another attempt to cut back expenses."

Those shifting jobs included: Charles Alongi, from director of recreation to assistant director, "the position he held prior to his 11th hour appointment by Mayor Hannon."

Francis Sullivan, from director of Veterans Services to his old post as assistant director.

Charles LoPresti, from assistant director of Veterans Services to his old post as Veterans Services investigator.

Four assistant assessors were reappointed. They were:

Kendall Mills of 191 Independence Ave.; Robert Keyes of 18 Colby Rd., Wilbur C. Bevans of 101 Crabtree Rd., and Alfred DelCupolo of 61 Kemper St.

LaRaia called them "people who have served several years in these functions and whose work has been more than satisfactory."

The Mayor found it necessary to dispel rumors of firings by announcing that three city employees will remain in their jobs. They are:

Winifred Pulsifer, director of RSVP; Raymond Cattaneo, administrative assistant of park and recreation; and Adam Trubiano, relocation agent.

Richard Koch left the post of director of Natural Resources and returned to his other job of executive secretary of park and recreation.

Robert McCarthy, the Mayor's information officer, said Koch "agreed to leave his post ... recognizing that Mayor LaRaia has long been opposed to that position, even while he was a councillor."

Also, two meter maids were cut from the Police Department by LaRaia, who promised in his inaugural address to seek "productive alternatives" to parking meters.

They were identified as Beverly Reinhardt and Laura DeCristofaro.

Mary Forrester Named Hospital Director's Secretary

City Hospital Director Harlan Paine has a new secretary starting Monday, Feb. 9.

The new secretary is Mrs. Mary Forrester, currently a clerk-typist in the Police Records Dept., who has worked for the city off and on for some 15 years.

"The Mayor gave me a free hand in choosing her," said

Paine, adding that she was selected from eight or 10 applicants.

She succeeds Mrs. Dorothy DiBona, who was appointed to the post by former Mayor Walter J. Hannon and removed in mid-January by Mayor LaRaia in a sweep of Hannon's 11th hour appointments.

Mrs. DiBona turned down a lesser job at the hospital.

Although JQC fared badly in the recent Raider invitational Tournament in Johnston, N.Y., losing both its games, Rogers was outstanding and was selected to the all-tournament team. Quincy In Early Tourney Berth, North's Back Against Wall

The Quincy High basketball squad is an early qualifier for the Eastern Mass. Tournament.

Coach Joe Amoroso, in his third year as head coach, brings the Presidents into the post-season event for the first time in 11 years and they did it in no uncertain terms as they ran over Weymouth South, 91-53.

Quincy has six games left and, although it doesn't matter how it fares as far as the tournament is concerned, there will be no letdown as the Presidents try for the Suburban League crown.

Quincy, with an 11-2 league record and 13-2 overall mark gets its chance to tie for first place Friday night when it hosts Rindge Tech's league leaders, who nipped Quincy by a point earlier. The Presidents face another big one Tuesday at Brockton.

Meanwhile, things are not nearly so bright at the north end of the city with the Raiders facing tournament elimination with one more loss. And they meet some of the best, starting last Tuesday with Brockton. They play at Cambridge Latin Friday and host Weymouth North Tuesday.

Last Friday Bob Nolan's North team kept its slim hopes flickering with an easy 65-39 win over Brookline to make its record 7-7 overall and 6-7 in the league.

Quincy's balance was again evident Friday as Jack Uhlar, 6-6 junior, had his biggest night with 24 points and had 12 rebounds, and Chuck McDermott also came up with his best scoring game with 19. John Riggs had 11 points and 12 rebounds and Mike Lamie 10 points.

"It was a tremendous overall team effort and I'm very happy for the boys," Amoroso said. "We just missed the tournament by one game two years ago and they deserve it this year."

North outrebounded Brookline, 41-21, and had another strong defensive game to win going away.

Rich Mahoney had 17 points, Jay Nelson 12, Dan Cuddy 10 and Nolan had good words for Scott Roberts, Tom D'Angelo and Joel Devlin.

Earlier in the week Quincy had topped North, 60-55, in a game postponed the night before as the sudden change in temperature and the humidity made the floor too slippery to play on.

North's hopes went out the window when it scored just two points in the third period.

For Quincy Bob Dacey had 18 points, Uhlar 15 and Riggs 13, while North was paced by Nelson with 11 and Roberts with 10.

Eddie Miller's North junior varsity, looking for first or second place in the league and a playoff spot (the top two teams will play the night of the league all-star game), played on schedule before the floor became too wet and topped Quincy, 58-43, to run its record to 13-1.

HOLLYWOOD - The TV Mailbag:

Q. I heard a rumor the other day that Henry Winkler had died a couple of weeks ago. Is that the truth? I think "Happy Days" is one of the best shows on television and it wouldn't be the same without him. - T.J., Blackwood, N.J.

A. Henry Winkler - better known as Fonzie to his "Happy Days" fans - is very much alive. No one is quite sure how these rumors about television and movie personalities got started, but this one seems to have been pretty widespread and was completely without merit.

Q. How tall is Willie Aames of "Swiss Family Robinson"? Also, where is he from? - N.M., New Hampshire

A. Willie was 5 feet 2 at the beginning of the television season, according to biographical information distributed by the ABC network, although he may have grown some since then. A native of Los Angeles, he has been working since the time he was in grammar school when he began appearing on television shows and in commercials.

He is a high school sophomore and lives in Huntington Beach, Calif.

Q. How old is Paul Michael Glaser of "Starsky and Hutch"? - D.S., Amherst, Wis.

Get Out And Get A Job Advises Bonnie Franklin

"Get out and get a job!" This is Bonnie Franklin's advice to divorcees - or almost any woman for that matter. The problem of job-finding for women is a problem that is very much the concern of Ann Romano, the character Bonnie plays on the new Norman Lear series, "One Day At A Time." "From the age of nine," says Bonnie, "I knew I was going into show business, but I still went to college. I was brought up in a family that included five children and we were not wealthy. I was told that it was very important that I learn to type and that I get a teaching certificate so that I'd have something to fall back on." "The character I play on 'One Day At A Time,' unfortunately, is very typical of millions of American women who married in their teens and did not go to college or learn a skill. So, Ann Romano, a newly-divorced 34-year-old woman with two daughters, is searching hard for a way to support herself. "The lady accepted child support for her two children but she has guts and gumption and would not accept alimony. She's not quite sure exactly how she's going to do it but some how she is going to make a living and be independent. She's not going to make an ex-husband support her when she's healthy, able and willing to work."

"Ann's work has consisted so far of odd jobs such as selling cosmetics door-to-door and office temporary work. She's great with people, however, and we know that somehow she's going to hit on a line of work that will suit her outgoing personality."

Bonnie concluded, "Women should try to avoid being in Ann's financial situation. Everyone should try to have some second skill to fall back on such as typing or teaching or being a waitress so long as it is an honest, money-making skill that will keep one independent and able to hold their head up."

Council Tables Request To Hire 3 Former CETA Employees

The City Council Monday night tiptoed cautiously around a proposal to put three former CETA employees on the city payroll in the same jobs once paid for in federal funds.

"What precedent are we setting here?" asked Ward 3 Councillor John J. Lydon Jr. "There are many CETA employees whose jobs are being phased out. How many are we going to hire?"

The three former CETA employees filled positions of two police cadets and one mechanical handyman with the Police Department. Two jobs were phased out Jan. 7, the third will be on Feb. 28.

The Police Department asked the Council for $10,125 to keep the trio on the job at least until June 30. Cadets were paid $125 a week; the mechanic $145.

Auditor Charles L. Shea placed the number of CETA employees in Quincy at "well over 100". The whole program is currently being phased out.

"Under present guidelines," said Shea, "one-seventh were phased out Jan. 7 and one-seventh will be phased out at the end of each month until all are gone by the end of June."

"There will be enormous pressure on us to retain the CETA people who are phased out," said Councillor Dennis E. Harrington.

"The city is faced with an extreme financial crisis. We cannot afford to retain them no matter how good a job they have done."

A Police spokesman said the two cadets were used to answer telephones in the station, one by day, the other by night.

"If we didn't have them," he said, "we would have to pull two officers in from the street to do the job."

The argument struck a responsive chord in Councillor James A. Sheets.

"I'll not support any measure that reduces the number of patrolmen on the streets," he said.

"Each year we face a rise in crime. Each citizen has a basic right to security."

"I'll not reduce the number of police by voting against this."

Council President Arthur H. Tobin noted that two meter maids had been let go in the past few days.

"Why not use them on the desk in the station?" he asked.

"Here they let two people go and then they come in and ask us to appropriate money to hire two more. It doesn't make sense."

The Council tabled the matter for further thought.

Consultant Named

NQHS Plans Inch Forward

The plan to renovate and expand North Quincy High School inched forward on two fronts this week.

Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia named Earle F. Littleton of Winchester, former professor of civil engineering at Tufts, as his consultant on the project.

LaRaia, who is still seeking ways to avoid closing North Quincy High during construction, said Littleton will advise him on the directions he should take in the matter.

Meanwhile, the City Council urged the Mayor to get together with School officials and "engage a nationally recognized construction management firm ... to oversee and expedite" the project.

Robert McCarthy, the Mayor's information officer, said Littleton's position was not what the Council had in mind.

At the urging of Councillor Leo J. Kelly, the Council added the Merrymount School to its North Quincy resolve, saying:

"That the Merrymount School construction be placed on a critical line toward completion so as to bring an immediate solution to the school building needs at Merrymount."

Whatever is done, the Council urged whoever is going to do it to do it quickly.

"We've been talking about this long enough," said Councillor John J. Quinn. "The School Committee has indicated what it wants. The Council has concurred. The Mayor and others should now move forward."

Councillor Dennis E. Harrington pointed out that the North Quincy project has been studied for 10 years and is apparently being restudied now.

"It is mandatory that a decision be made to move forward," he said.

"The City Council should forcefully resolve to endorse the proposal to engage a management firm. I hope this will elicit a response from the Mayor, not to the City Council but to the people."

"With proper management we may not need to close the school and hold double sessions for three years. Perhaps proper management could cut one-third to 40 per cent off that time."

Littleton, whose duties for Mayor LaRaia will begin immediately, has served as chairman of the State Designer Selection Board [1966-73] and as a member of the State Advisory Council for Hospitals, Hospital Surveys and Hospital Construction [1970-73].

He has also been active in Winchester as a member of the Planning Board, the School Committee, the Elementary School Building Committee and the Mystic School Building Addition Committee.

Water Department Trying To Tap $155,000

The Water Department is still seeking a way to get at $155,000 that it has but can't use.

The sum, plus an added $15,000 that is encumbered, is what remains of a water bond issue that was used to construct water mains on Quarry St.

The catch is that state law forbids the use of bond issue money for any purpose other than the specific project until two years after the project is completed.

The $155,000 is thus embargoed until 1978; unless the state legislature enacts special legislation setting aside the statute.

The large sum was left over from the bond issue, said Auditor Charles L. Shea, because the price of material had gone down since the original estimate and land costs were lower than expected.

Now the Water Department wants to use the money for water mains other than Quarry St.

A bid for special legislation to free the money was referred to the City Council's Public Works Committee.

By TOM HENSHAW

He has been in office barely a month but already the hand of Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia is being felt strongly at the helm of the city of Quincy.

Some feel it's good; some feel it's bad; but it's felt by all.

In an exclusive interview with The Quincy Sun, Tuesday, Mayor LaRaia expressed his own feelings about his first 30 days in The Big Chair in City Hall.

And he gave a hint at what is to come.

● He still feels that someone tried to job him out of his election and not even a clean bill of health from an inquest will change his mind.

● He feels that a boost in the tax rate is a distinct threat but much of it depends on how well his administration trims the cost of government.

● He plans to keep a close scrutiny on spending in the school department by having his own team of watchdogs to review its activities.

● He may station a constable or two in the Ross parking area garage to make it more secure for both shoppers and merchants at a small cost.

● He is still optimistic that something can be done to keep North Quincy High School open during alterations; and he is still dead set against the South Quincy MBTA station.

● And he feels that the media in Quincy has not treated him fairly by magnifying the little things and ignoring the important things that have been done by his administration.

The far-ranging interview, trimmed and edited for brevity and clarity, went like this:

SUN: What are your thoughts on the progress your administration has made during its first month in office?

MAYOR: It's unfortunate that the appointments, releases and transfers have been considered by some to be sensational news. It was necessary on my part to start the term with people I feel would follow the objectives I have set down. It's not something that's very comfortable because no one likes to make changes. My first priority was placing people in positions I feel would carry out my objectives. I think we have accomplished a large percentage of that effort.

We also have placed priority in determining the status of the city financially. This has meant communications from the departments regarding their fiscal condition through June. It requires a great deal of effort on the part of the budget coordinator to put all this information together. We have determined that we are at least a million dollars in the red as projected.

Another priority was to try to free police officers and put them in areas where they can more effectively pursue their police work. Through my inspector of divisions [Lt. Corady Solimini] we are attempting to determine the best use of personnel currently in the police station or working in areas in which we feel they are not effective. We'd like to make some changes.

We're also considering putting a constable at the parking garage. He would have police powers and the same resources as police officers but it would not be as expensive. It's very possible that we might have two constables there to increase the security of the garage for merchants as well as shoppers.

These are just a start. You know it takes time to consider, then implement and test. I wish we had overnight solutions. Obviously, no one does.

SUN: You mentioned in your inaugural the possibility of taking out the parking meter system. How have you progressed in that?

MAYOR: We are presently awaiting the results of a study by the planning department as to the effectiveness of meters and the pros and cons of having a metered parking system. I'll review that before I make any comment on it.

SUN: Is your own team in City Hall complete now?

MAYOR: No. Realistically, a complete team would be formed by starting from scratch. Obviously, you have to make changes in moderation. I think I have done it in moderation. I have kept on personnel who were in the previous administration and I have put in people I feel will do an effective job in areas where vast improvements could be made.

I think I can work with the administration I've put together now. It takes time because some of those who worked for another administration are accustomed to doing things a certain way and, just like anything else, you've got to turn them around and make a few changes. There is a certain amount of reluctance on their part to conform but I feel we can work the administration into shape to follow the same objectives.

SUN: Do you ever have the feeling that you're fighting for a lost cause in North Quincy High School and the South Quincy MBTA Station?

MAYOR: No. We have hired a consultant [Dr. Earl Littleton] who is now reviewing the overall plan for North Quincy High to determine what changes if any we can make at this stage. I'm optimistic that we're going to come out with something that is going to be materially different from the current project, which, as you know, is to close the school and have all students attend Quincy High. I'm more optimistic about that than I am about some of the other problems of the city.

SUN: And the South Quincy station?

MAYOR: I'm still opposing the station. I just offered through the City Council another resolve against it. I have written to UMTA in regard to their environmental study. At this point I'm just going to wait for their decision before I do anything further than that.

SUN: Can you make a guess as to what is going to happen to the tax rate?

MAYOR: No. There are so many factors involved like revenues received, increases in valuation which could result in additional revenue and, most of all, the cost of operating the city.

One of the biggest expense items we have is our school department and it is well insulated against checks on excessive spending. We have

Board For Early Bar Closings

Usually when a city councillor advances on his mimeograph machine it's a complaint that comes rolling out.

Not so Councillor Daniel G. Raymondi.

The ink was barely dry on a Licensing Board order closing two Quincy Point bars an hour earlier at 1 a.m. when Raymondi dispatched the commissioners a big "thank you" note.

"I join with the residents of Ward II in thanking you for listening to our views and for making the decision that I feel will greatly benefit the quality of life in our neighborhoods," he said.

"I also would like to extend my deepest appreciation to the residents of Ward II who came forward and voiced support for this important decision."

The Board recently revoked the special 2 a.m. permits of the Brothers Two Lounge and the Washington Tap after nearly 300 residents complained of noise and brawling by patrons.

Baharian Hails Appointment

LaRaia Names Lundin City Planning Director

Lars Norman Lundin, director of the Houghs Neck Community Development Program, has been appointed City Planning Director by Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia.

The 36-year-old Lundin, an architect, succeeds Geoffrey Davidson, who resigned the post to take a job in the office of Norfolk County Dist. Atty. William Delahunt.

The planning director's job pays $22,500.

Rev. Bedros Baharian, chairman of the planning board, said: "I am very pleased with the appointment of a professional person to the post. He has a great deal of experience as an architect."

"This is a non-political appointment as a planning director should be."

Lundin lives with his wife, Ann, and three daughters in Randolph, but, the Mayor's office added, he grew up in Houghs Neck, moving to Randolph in 1972.

A graduate of the Rhode Island School of Design, he studied engineering at Northeastern, construction law at Harvard and safety engineering at California Institute of Technology.

He has worked for the architectural firms of Edgar H. Wood and Associates in Quincy; Perry, Dean and Stewart [cq] and Peirce [cq], Pierce [cq] Architects in Boston.

He has operated his own architectural firm in Randolph for the past four years but, the Mayor's office said, he plans to phase it out following his appointment.

Lundin has worked on the master plan of Otis AFB where he is a civil engineering staff officer. He has also been on special assignment for the director of civil engineering at the Pentagon.

His wife, who holds a masters degree in chemistry, is a research chemist at Childrens Hospital, Boston.

Sheets Asks Land Use Study

City Councillor James A. Sheets has urged the city's new Commission on Growth and Policy Development to study the land used for a disposal facility in West Quincy and the land around Swingles and Granite Rail Quarries.

He asked that the commission consider making a detailed recommendation to the city on possible development of the areas.

"It is my belief that a copy of the commission's recommendation should be filed with the Army Corps of Engineers so that they might consider the impact development of this area might have on flooding since the natural retaining area will be destroyed," he said.

McCauley Wants To Cut Over $350,000 From School New Programs Budget

School Committeeman Francis X. McCauley planned to lead a fight to cut more than $350,000 from the proposed new program's budget of $417,747 at the Committee's meeting Wednesday night.

The budget was proposed by Supt. Dr. Lawrence P. Creedon.

McCauley noted that the Quincy school population has declined 9.7 per cent since 1971 and Dr. Creedon predicts further reductions in the next few years.

"Why then, McCauley asked, has Dr. Creedon continued to recommend new positions, 18 in this section of the budget alone?"

McCauley was critical of request to upgrade to department-head status 19 persons at the junior high and senior high school levels at a cost of $20,805.

Other items that would be eliminated are 13 additional positions in the professional and maintenance areas costing $136,940 and a partial renovation of Quincy High School estimated to cost $150,000.

McCauley said that in 1970, the average cost per pupil in Quincy was $814.00 vs. the statewide average of $756.00. At that time, Quincy's cost per pupil was $58.00 or 7.7% above the state average. Four years later, in 1974, Quincy's average cost soared to $1,347 vs. the state average of $1,129, a difference of $218 or 19.3%.

Over 100 To Attend Nut Island Hearing

More than 100 people have signed up to attend a public hearing on the proposed secondary sewerage treatment plant at Nut Island next Wednesday (Feb. 18) in Faneuil Hall, Boston.

Chartered buses will leave from LaBrecque Field on Sea St., Houghs Neck, at 9 a.m. to take protesters into the hearing.

Meanwhile a meeting was held Tuesday, Feb. 10, with John McGlennon, regional director of the Environmental Protection Agency, which has given its okay to the project.

City Councillor Leo J. Kelly said: "I thought the meeting went well. The EPA indicated that it was willing to listen to alternatives to the secondary treatment plant."

One proposed alternative is that Nut Island be changed to a screening and pumping station and Deer Island be the primary and secondary treatment plant.

There were indications that Councillors Kelly and Dennis E. Harrington, two opponents of the secondary treatment plant might accept that alternative, even though they are against any secondary treatment plant on the harbor.

Kathleen O'Donnell Democratic Candidate State Committeewoman

Kathleen O'Donnell of 1025 Hancock St., Quincy, announces she is a candidate for Democratic State Committeewoman in the Norfolk Senatorial district, which includes Quincy, Braintree and Holbrook.

A committeewoman and a committeeman will be elected from each of the state's 40 senatorial districts on the March 2 Democratic Presidential Primary.

Miss O'Donnell, a social studies teacher at Quincy High School, is an honors graduate of the University of Massachusetts, Amherst with a bachelor's degree in government. She also attended the graduate program in legislative politics at The American University, Washington, D.C.

Miss O'Donnell is the former National Committeewoman for the Young Democrats, and serves on the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women where she held the position of co-chairwoman.

She formerly worked at the Democratic National Committee, Washington, D.C., was named to "Who's Who In American Politics". She has been active in the campaigns of local and state Democrats and served as a district coordinator for Senator Edward M. Kennedy's campaign.

Miss O'Donnell a member of the Quincy Historical Society, the Ward 2 Civic Association, U. Mass. Alumni, South Shore Women's Political Caucus, a nominee for the Democratic City Committee, a member of the board of directors of the Quincy Good Government Forum, steering committee for the Massachusetts Women's Political Caucus, the Massachusetts Teacher's Association, and the Quincy Education Association.

In announcing her candidacy she said:

"The position of Democratic State Committeewoman is one that is most often overlooked on the ballot. However, it is a very significant position because the committeewomen and committeemen of the state make up the official governing body of the Democratic party. The state committeewoman is in the position to help make the Democratic State Committee and the Democratic Party more viable.

"Especially, with the new and broad reforms of the party, the state committeewoman can reach out on a district level to the people, as well as to the town and city committee members to keep lines of communication with the party and its leaders open. Most importantly, she can help to make the people aware of the new avenues of participation in the party that are open to them."

Exotic But Low-Caloried

Wollaston Woman's Golombki' Forbidden Foods Recipe Winner

Folks on a diet don't have to give up such exotic foods as "golombki."

Phyllis Burke of Winthrop Ave., Wollaston, proved that by winning first prize in a recent "Forbidden Foods" recipe contest conducted by The Diet Workshop.

Her recipe, which drew the raves of the judges was for low-calorie "golombki," or cabbage stuffed with meat balls. If you want to try it yourself, here it is:

LOW CALORIE GOLOMBKI

1 lb. lean ground beef
1 medium onion
1 medium cabbage (not savory)
4 oz. stewed tomatoes
1 teaspoon celery flakes
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder

Cut core from cabbage and place in boiling water for 5 minutes. Drain in colander. In bowl, mix ground beef, one-half of the onions (chopped), 1/2 teaspoon celery flakes, salt, pepper and garlic powder. Make 10 2-oz. meatballs from this mixture.

Peel off 10 leaves from cabbage. Wrap each meatball in a cabbage leaf and secure with a toothpick. Cut remaining cabbage coarsely. Spray a 9"x12"x2" baking dish with Pam. Place chopped cabbage in bottom of pan, add remaining chopped onion. Place cabbage rolls on top. Add stewed tomatoes. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, and remaining celery

ALCOHOL FATAL TO TOTS

It doesn't take much alcohol to kill a child. According to Dr. Richard Moriarty, Director of the National Poison Center, "Alcohol poisoning is becoming more and more common among children under the age of five."

It doesn't take much alcohol to kill a child and the major problem is that there is no antidote once it depresses the nervous system or drops the blood sugar level low enough for death to occur. That is why alcohol is so dangerous when consumed by tots. The ability to "metabolize" alcohol is directly related to the body weight. The less you weigh, the less you can handle. That's why alcohol and small children are such a dangerous combination.

How do children consume the liquor? The largest number of cases showing up at emergency rooms are from children finding many unfinished drinks around on a Sunday morning after a parental party the night before. The answer is simple. No matter how tired you may be after you host a party, make sure that all the drinks are removed and poured down the sink. Then go to bed.

Unity At Nut Island

The proposed filling in of 26 acres of Quincy Bay for a secondary treatment plant at the MDC's Nut Island sewage facility seems to have brought about the first sign of unity in a city politically embattled since last year's election.

Political figures who cannot see eye-to-eye on many issues, can on this one. They're against it—maybe not walking hand-in-hand—but still against it together.

For example, Mayor Joseph LaRaia and Senator-City Council President Arthur Tobin have not exactly been allies in the past. But they are on this one.

They, along with Rep. Thomas Brownell and Ward I Councillor Leo Kelly are spearheading the opposition to the proposed 26-acre fill with assists from such others as Grace Saphir, two-time unsuccessful mayoralty candidate.

So if they are all against it, there's got to be something wrong with the plan.

When you think of it, 26 acres is a pretty large chunk of Quincy Bay and Mother Nature to be fooling around with.

The filling could seriously hurt marine life in the area. And if you let them take 26 acres today for this, they'll come up with a reason to take 26 more tomorrow and 26 more the next day. Quincy Bay could eventually shrink to a water-hole.

The controversial fill and secondary treatment plant are part of a $855 million program that has the blessing of the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

Purpose, says the EPA, is to improve sewage treatment and water quality in the Metropolitan District.

Secondary treatment is now required by federal law but efforts are underway to amend that law.

Local officials opposed to filling in Quincy Bay, generally opposed the upgrading of the present primary treatment facility at Nut Island and construction of two satellite treatment plants—one in Wellesley, one in Canton.

This, they point out, would reduce the volume of sewage to be handled at the Nut Island plant and eliminate the need for a secondary plant there.

City, state and MDC officials were to meet Tuesday in Boston with EPA Regional Director John A. S. McGlennon to discuss the Nut Island Plant issue.

Senator-City Council President Tobin who arranged the meeting, said Mr. McGlennon indicated he would give "serious consideration" to alternate plans for upgrading the present Nut Island plant.

Meanwhile, the EPA has scheduled a public hearing on the Nut Island issue and the entire $855 million program for Wednesday, Feb. 18 at 10 a.m. at Faneuil Hall, Boston. A fleet of buses will take Quincy residents to the hearing to voice their opposition.

That $855 million the EPA is so willing to dip into taxpayers pockets for should be carefully looked at along with the land-filling impact on Quincy Bay. There's a lot of money-impact and that figure may not be all of it.

Councillor Kelly, who has opposed the land-fill since it was first proposed notes that the MDC itself had doubts about the plan.

Kelly cites a statement made by MDC Commissioner John F. Snedeker before a hearing on the National Commission on Water Quality.

Snedeker is quoted as saying a recent study "concluded that adding secondary treatment facilities to our primary plants would not be particularly beneficial to the environment."

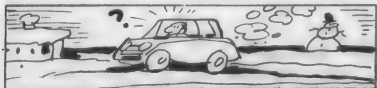

"The estimated capital cost for the addition of secondary treatment to our coastal plants is about $300 million. An additional $8.5 million would be needed annually to operate and maintain such facilities."

Snedeker also said he favors an amendment to the National Clean Water Act which would exempt sewage treatment plants that discharge into the ocean.

Our main objection to a secondary plant at Nut Island is the filling in of those 26 acres of Quincy Bay. It is creating one problem to try to solve another. And it is a dangerous precedent.

If satellite treatment plants are constructed at Wellesley and Canton to treat their own sewage then the volume at Nut Island would be reduced so that a primary plant here could suffice.

This is one issue we would like to see the people win and governmental agency lose. It would restore our faith in the system.

SUNBEAMS

George Burke Mayoral Candidate?

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Joseph LaRaia has been mayor of Quincy only 38 days but thoughts of some political observers—and potential candidates—have already turned to next year's city election.

There's little doubt that LaRaia will meet up with formidable opposition in 1977 and it will surely be a fellow Democrat.

Who?
Well, the name of Senator-City Council President Arthur Tobin is usually the first you hear when potential candidates are being mentioned.

He came within a whisker of getting into the race last year and many are convinced he would have walked off with the win if he had.

But he didn't get into the race then and it isn't certain he will run next year. But he has to be considered a strong potential candidate.

City Councillor-Rep. James Sheets' name is also popping up when possible candidates are being speculated about. His political star is rising rapidly.

But—hold onto your hats—here's another name that would really put some zing into next year's municipal election: George G. Burke.

The former Norfolk County district attorney and Wollaston resident reportedly is itching to get back into the political scene. And, close sources say he just might run for mayor next year.

Burke, as a city councillor, was one of Quincy's top vote getters and almost ran for mayor in 1965. But he decided to go for district attorney the following year instead and James McIntyre ran against LaRaia for the mayoralty seat vacated by Amelio Della Chiesa. In that year, incidentally, McIntyre trounced LaRaia 22,034 votes to 7,713.

Burke isn't giving any public indication he will run for mayor but friends say he's giving it some thought.

Tobin, Sheets or Burke would have to be considered serious threats to LaRaia if one of them decided to run.

There are still many political observers in Quincy who are convinced that LaRaia won last year because of three major ingredients: people wanted a change, a built-in strong anti-Walter Hannon front that showed up before when political novice Grace Saphir polled 10,000 votes, and the fact that LaRaia ran as a Democrat against a Republican incumbent.

The big question of course is: will LaRaia "grow in office" and be strong enough next year to hold off a challenge from someone like a Tobin, Sheets or Burke—all Democrats and magnetic vote getters.

CITY HALL sources say that Richard Koch took it like a "soldier" when LaRaia informed him he was shifting him from commissioner of natural resources back to Park-Recreation Board executive secretary. "That's part of the game," reportedly replied Koch who has been around political circles for a long-time. LaRaia voted against creation of the resources post as a councillor, so it probably will be abolished.

ALTHOUGH Robert Tweedy is listed as an interim executive director of the Quincy Council on Aging, City Hall sources think the appointment may become permanent.

FRANK FONTAINE turned up as a surprise attraction at the Montclair Men's Club annual awards dinner salute to the Red Sox Saturday night.

Ol' Craze, got off a few quips while others spoke but when he took the mike, turned quite serious with a patriotic pep talk, and a commendation for the Men's Club for recognizing deserving individuals.

Frank also led the audience in singing "God Bless America" and Kate Smith will probably never believe it, but he fumbled the lyrics.

HARRY CARLSON, the Milton-Dorchester tire dealer and president of the Bosox Club arrived late because of a previous commitment. As he entered the hall, Fontaine quipped: "What did you do, get a flat tire?"

AS MOST Red Sox fans in this area know, Fred Lynn, Jim Rice, Cecil Cooper and Jim Burton lived in Quincy during the 1975 pennant winning season. Whether they will return to Quincy this coming season no one knows for sure. Lynn reportedly is looking for a house in the general Quincy-South Shore area.

But Quincy does have another representative of the Sox living here. Tommy McCarthy, Fenway Park press box steward, has moved to a Greenleaf St. apartment. Tommy, who loves just about everyone gave Mayor LaRaia quite a plug: "Greatest mayor in the country."

JIMMY CARTER, seeking the Democratic Presidential nomination calls Russell Johnson of Quincy, "My first friend in Massachusetts." Johnson was instrumental in bringing the then Georgia governor here in May, 1973 as keynote speaker for the Men's Prayer Breakfast sponsored by the South Shore Council of Churches. Johnson and his wife are now Carter's Quincy campaign coordinators.

QUINCY'S YESTERDAYS

February 12-18, 1954 - 22 Years Ago This Week

Deegan Sees Tax Rate Passing '$50.80 Mark'

By TOM HENSHAW

City Manager William J. Deegan Jr. submitted to the City Council an all-time record high city budget of $13,960,027.43, nearly a million dollars more than 1953.

"It may be impossible to avert a tax increase next year," he warned.

The Quincy tax rate for 1950 was $50.80 per thousand.

Three quarters of the budget increase was listed for items such as education, debt service and interest, and state and county taxes, over which the city manager had no control.

VA OFFICE THREATENED

Employees of the Quincy Veterans Administration office, located in the Chamber of Commerce Building in Quincy Square, were waiting to learn if the office would be one of 17 closed on April 1.

Since its opening in 1946, the office had been shut down for four months in 1948 and threatened with closure in 1951, 1952 and 1953.

Herbert F. Carroll, contact representative in charge, said the office handles about 800 personal requests and 500 telephone calls a month.

COMFORT STATION URGED

Z. Cranston Smith, chairman of the parking and traffic committee of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, got behind the move to build a comfort station in Quincy Center.

A request for $60,000 to construct such a facility was contained in City Manager Deegan's 1954 budget.

"A comfort station in Quincy Center is overdue for many years," said Smith, noting that it was first proposed in 1918 by William A. Bradford, later mayor of Quincy.

RENT BOARD RIVALS

Arthur I. Burgess, former city solicitor and state representative, was elected chairman of the Quincy Rent Control Board, replacing Joseph P. McDonough, who didn't want to go.

McDonough said he planned to appeal to the State Supreme Judicial Court his dismissal from the Board by City Manager Deegan. He said he still considers himself a member and chairman.

NEW HOME FOR BRYAN POST

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa attempted to resolve a dispute between the George F. Bryan VFW Post and Christ Church by offering the post a plot of city-owned land on Broad St. for a new post home.

The post was being evicted from its present home by construction of the second part of the John Hancock parking area.

The post had its eye on the old city dispensary on High School Ave., which drew protests from members of Christ Church, located across the street.

MAINE PROTESTS

Sen. Margaret Chase Smith [R-Maine] asked for an investigation of a contract to build three destroyers awarded to the Bethlehem Quincy Shipyard by the Navy.

The Quincy bid was $53 million, third lowest, and $6.5 million more than that of the low bidder, the Bath Ironworks in Maine.

A REGIONAL ECONOMY

Two Bucks For Eight--C'mon!

By ERIC SWIDER

Psst...come over here...I got a deal for you. I'll give you two bucks, and in return you give me eight bucks. Like it? Of course not.

But a naive group called Massachusetts Fair Share, who are promoting a thing they call Lifeline electric rates, are basically selling that type of idea to the citizenry and intimidating State Reps and Senators with a demand that they'll vote yes on that bill or be exposed as being friends of the rich.

Now, I want to pay less for electricity too, but the $1.87 a month that Lifeline might save me at home, I estimate will cost me two bucks more a month in groceries, a dollar a month more in services from increased costs of dry cleaning, haircuts, etc. and eventually, five bucks more a month in increased state taxes to pay for the increased welfare load that will result from all of the people who become permanently unemployed by the loss of industry that could occur.

The reason is that business and industry will have to pay 14 percent more for their juice and they'll either pass those costs on to me as a consumer or might opt to do their manufacturing someplace else.

I'd like my State Rep and Senator to know that if they vote yes on Lifeline, I won't consider them a friend of the rich or an enemy of the poor, but instead an undercover agent for the South Carolina Industrial Development Commission.

Being naive has its place when it comes to the cause and effect relationships of Legislative proposals, but we should be suspect of bills that are wrapped in the cloak of being for the poor, the workman, or for labor, especially today when that generally means the bill is anti-business and, therefore, anti-jobs.

What's said to be good for the little guy or the underdog does not necessarily have to be so, and those elected officials that have the courage to do what is correct despite the threats of being labeled with some onerous tag, I feel deserve our thanks.

Massachusetts is not the "Universe" when it comes to business decision making as it is for the Great and General Court when it comes to legislative decision making. They can pass a bill like Lifeline, Strike Benefits, Supplemental Health-Care, $3 an hour Minimum Wage, and its impact only reaches to Massachusetts borders.

Not all businesses that are located in this state have to be here, so in many cases, the ones that don't have their end products totally consumed in Massachusetts flee to other states where the cost of doing business is less so they can price their product in line with their competition in the "world" marketplace.

They take their jobs with them, but no necessarily their employees, so we are left with increased social costs.

The tragedy of late is not the firms that are fleeing Massachusetts but the ones that have opted for "cost of doing business" reasons to handle their growth and expansion elsewhere.

One member told me the other day about a southern operation they opened two years ago. Better employee attendance. More availability of help. Productivity on a par per person. The difference? The cost of making the same item here due to power, state and local tax and increased labor costs is 40 percent higher. A big factor is the $4 an hour wage they pay in the South vs. the $8 an hour they must pay here. But just as devastating are his higher local property taxes, state taxes, unemployment compensation charges, electric charges, fuel oil costs, etc.

One thing he jokingly assured me was that Chamber of Commerce dues here were competitive. We could be critical of this businessman for his decision to move his operations southward if Massachusetts were his universe. But his products are sold worldwide and he must compete item for item, price for price, and so, rather than going out of business for lack of orders and going on the public dole himself, he opts to grow and expand where he can improve, but as he said, not necessarily maximize, his chance for profits. He said if he were really serious about maximizing profits, he would set up a shop in Taiwan, but that's another story.

A bill like Lifeline, when you really think about it, benefits no one - and especially not the consumer. Anyone who tries to wrap an anti-consumer label on people or organizations that oppose Lifeline should be taken a second look at. I'm a consumer and I don't want to pay another six bucks a month for Lifeline so that some naive group can feel good about earning a victory of intimidation with the Legislature.

LIVING TODAY

Family Life Re-Awakening

By DR. WILLIAM F. KNOX

Dear Dr. Knox:

There's something bothering me and I thought I'd share it with you. It's this ... who speaks for the family any more? For living happily in a marriage? We've had so much about the development of the individual, personal growth and I wonder why there isn't more education on how to relate to another person. That's why marriages break down, it seems to me, because people never learned to live peaceably and happily with another person. Would you write a column and try to answer where you think the family and marriage is going? I'm a teacher, so please don't use my name.

Mr. C.K.

Dear Mr. C.K.:

You are observant that there are forces which seem to be working against the family and marriage ... often from quarters where we would expect greatest support for family life. For example our 8.3% national employment figure [12% in Massachusetts] certainly doesn't help family life very much. Still our government sits on its hands waiting for things to get better. The fact that one in every three Americans is single doesn't mean that the state of single life is particularly happy. Most of the 43,000,000 singles are busy trying to find some kind of companionship in singles bars, clubs, cruises.

The divorce rate continues to climb, largely due to the lack of knowledge of how to relate man to woman ... woman to man. Here is where our emphasis needs to be placed, because we are not taught how to relate as we grow up. If we happen to have a good model in our parents, we're lucky. But most people are not so fortunate. So they must lean ... or blunder along. And there's a lot of blundering along.

There are forces trying to help the family and marriage. One is the National Alliance For Family Life, a great alliance of counselors, psychologists, doctors, clergymen and non-professionals interested in happier family life. Another is the Family Doctor who treats sex as important enough to unabashedly ask "How's your sex life?" Sex is an important part of family relationships. Another is the School which encourages parents to follow and support the progress of their children. Another is the Church which still says "Families that worship together stay together" ... which develops programs and forums on marriage and family life ... talks of loving one another and living in peace.

For families and marriages which are having difficulty to relate happily with each other, there's another helper ... the Friendly Counselor who recognizes the need to teach men how to relate to men, how to communicate, how to develop a comfortable companionship, how to enjoy a satisfying sexual relationship. He is as essential to today's family as the dentist ... or the auto mechanic.

Mr. C.K. ... there's still no substitute for the family ... the family and marriage will be around for a long time yet. Most singles are out there busily seeking someone they can be happy with in marriage.

THE READER SPEAKS OUT

Complains About Copeland St. Conditions

Editor, Quincy Sun:

Let anyone drive down Copeland St. and they will see a wood frame structure about 15 feet from a two family house. This wood structure is to house a thousand gallons of inflammable material. [Who is to check the thousand gallon limit?]

As for the traffic situation, we are told that only several gallons a day would be needed by different customers. We know that once the license is granted, the situation will change.

As you drive down Copeland St., don't you often wonder "Who is responsible for allowing the conditions that you see?"

The answer to that question is long overdue.

BUSINESS/REAL ESTATE NEWS

Conway Reports January Sales Up 89%

The South Shore and Cape Cod real estate firm of Jack Conway & Company reports 1976 is off to a "flying start" and cites January sales up 89 percent over the same month a year ago.

The figure follows the firm's year-end sales report showing sales up 36 percent for the 12 month period 1975 over 1974.

"This fast running start for 1976 really thrills me," said Realtor Jack Conway, president of the 16 office real estate firm including offices in Quincy Center and Wollaston. "The fact that we did 89 percent more business this January over last January is great, but the thing that really excites me is that we are 13 percent ahead of January of 1973 which was the best previous January in the history of our company."

This means that the long dormant real estate market is beginning to catch on fire." In reporting these facts to his company at the February sales meeting, Conway cited several reasons for the dramatic increase in sales.

"I think that public confidence is returning very quickly," Conway said. "The fantastic rise of the stock market has put everybody into a buying mood. There has been a great increase in savings at the various thrift institutions and, if this continues or at least remains level at its present course, we'll have more than enough mortgage money at sensible rates to solve the mortgage needs of our customers."

Conway said that mortgage rates generally have been lowering over the past few months. Current rates in the market for most mortgages runs from 8 1/2 percent to 9 percent, while mortgages with extremely low down payments in most cases are demanding a 9 1/2 percent rate. He also pointed to the new 'flexible' and 'float' rate mortgages where the rate is a variable factor and changes with the rise and fall of money rates as being a great boom to the mortgage market. Rates are 1/2 to 3/4 of a percent lower if a buyer prefers to take the flexible or float rate, he told his group.

The number 1 sales office for the Conway organization in January was West Bridgewater which logged in 15 residential sales with a total volume of almost $500,000.

Top individual sales producer for the Company during the month of January was JoAnn Haag of the Scituate Harbor office with $150,000 in sales. Closely behind was Dick Cahill of the Wollaston Office and Irene Godfrey of the West Bridgewater office, both of whom sold more than $100,000 in residential real estate.

North Quincy FISH

To Hear Rev. Underhill

The Rev. William Underhill of St. Chrysostom's Church will be the speaker tonight, Thursday, at 8:30 p.m. at a meeting of North Quincy FISH volunteers in Sacred Heart Church.

FISH, which stands for Friends In Helping Service, is seeking volunteers to donate one day a month to helping others in emergency situations.

From the first chapter organized in Oxford, England, in 1961, FISH has grown to more than 3,000 chapters around the world in such faraway places as New Zealand and Africa.

The North Quincy chapter, which includes volunteers from Wollaston and Squantum, was begun almost three years ago.

The sponsoring churches are Atlantic Methodist, Memorial Congregational, Sacred Heart, St. Chrysostom's, First Church of Squantum, Union Congregational and Wollaston Nazarene.

Volunteers or people with emergency problems should call 773-3475 (or 773-FISH), which is a telephone answering service open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Interview With Mayor LaRaia On His First Month

almost to accept the will of the school committee and the administrators in the school in running the department from a financial viewpoint. I feel there is a great deal of expense in the schools that could be shaved, and not necessarily at the expense of the education of the youngsters.

That terminology is overdone. When you talk about excessive spending in the schools right away you are categorized by some, especially school officials, as against education, against children. I am not intimidated by those remarks because I know that, in many instances, the critics are out for their aggrandizement more than they are the students.

I am thinking seriously of putting together a team that would review for the mayor the activities of the school department. If I cannot have the strong voice in the schools that I have as mayor with the other city departments then I can at least recognize publicly what is happening and the best way I can do that is by having my own team review the activities of the school department.

SUN: Wouldn't that duplicate the job of the school committee?

MAYOR: No. Actually the school committee doesn't have the teeth. They rely heavily on the advice and information from the people in the school department from the superintendent on down. I don't believe they get the two sides of every issue presented to them.

'It's unfortunate that the appointments, releases and transfers have been considered sensational news by some...'

In most instances, I think school officials would be partial to promoting their own objectives. I don't feel there are checks and balances over there. There are plenty of checks and balances in city government. You turn a knob over here and it creates front page news. You hire someone, it's front page news. You fire someone, it's front page news. But how much really appears on the front page concerning the school department? Very little when you consider that it represents a great deal of the expense of running the city.

I'm not using the schools as a release of frustrations but they are part of the total picture of city government and one area in which I feel we could cut costs. I would like to see some proposals from the school department as to how they could cut some employees or how they could bring about some cost saving measures that would convince me they are interested not only in educating but in getting the most for a dollar spent.

SUN: There was talk early in your administration of possible layoffs of city employees. Are you still considering it?

MAYOR: We have reviewed some of our major problems at the hospital. It has been determined by the city auditor and verified by the hospital that there are some 20 to 25 employees working in the hospital for whom money has not been provided in this year's budget. That creates the most serious problem we have financially because our deficit objective is about $800,000 in the hospital alone. We're seeking other ways to cut down expenses first. That would be the last resort, releasing personnel. Hopefully we won't have to.

SUN: You haven't commented very much about the investigation into the city election. How do you feel about it?

MAYOR: I feel the phase they have been going through is a legal one involving an investigation. Now it involves appearances in court. I'm not convinced at this point that there wasn't something in the improper tabulation of votes ... but I suppose I ought to let the hearing ...

SUN: You sound as though you feel that the errors in tabulation were deliberate.

MAYOR: Yes, I do. I don't think that the feeling will ever escape me regardless of what happens in the final analysis. It has never been done to my knowledge in the country, ever. There are too many things that indicate to me it was not an accident. But that is my own personal feeling. It is not based on any legal substance, as far as that goes. I think I'm entitled to my feelings.

SUN: Do you feel that you have been treated fairly by the news media in your first month in office?

MAYOR: No. I'd say the news media has picked up on every little thing that's happened in my 30 days in office. I know from the past, having been in city government, that these things I call little are little in comparison to how the press handled news prior to my getting into office. I'm speaking specifically about the appointment and releasing of personnel. It's unfortunate but I've had to do it as mayor and we've tried to do it in an orderly, considerate manner which takes time.

Unfortunately, I think the press has taken away from all our efforts in this regard by a great deal of sensationalism. I think a lot of the important things we've been doing and a lot of the priority items we've been involved in have not gotten any attention and that is because the questions have been about the hiring and the firing of people more than they have been about things that have happened. And that goes for The Sun as well as the other paper, so I'm not being partial.

SUN: What single thing do you feel attention should be called to?

MAYOR: I think progress in whatever area we're pursuing should interest the public, whether it's the appointment of a board or taking a position on certain issues or showing some kind of progress in running the city. I think it falls into that category rather than what we've discussed.

SUN: That's pretty general. Can you be more specific?

MAYOR: I think the one thing that stands out in my administration now is that we are threatened by an increasing tax rate. We've got to seek out ways to cut down the cost of government. We are attempting to pursue that in several directions. One thing that we haven't mentioned is the central maintenance facility. We've done some groundwork on it and we hope to implement some of the ideas.

Another thing, obviously, is our review of the budget to determine how expenses can be cut. Some of our ideas may not take effect quickly because it takes time to implement changes. But we are pursuing them.

Colonial Village Mall Seeking Larger Businesses

By TOM BRADY

The new manager of the Colonial Village Mall told the City Licensing Board Tuesday he is trying to attract larger businesses to the mall in an attempt to make it a "more professional operation."

Stephen Dreier, President of Mall Merchants Inc., the management company for Grossman's Industrial Properties, the mall's new owner, told the board the mall was in financial trouble when his company took it over Jan. 23 because the small, non professional businesses were failing.

"I think a lot of people in business there didn't have the right to be in business," Dreier said. "Either they didn't have the money, the brains, or the ability. We're trying to find a dynamic to make it work up there. Right now, we're talking to some large operators to act as a drawing card."

Dreier said later, however, that the mall did not plan to evict the smaller businesses, but would ask some financially sound businesses to expand.

In other business, the licensing board:

- Issued one day wine and malt licenses to Quincy Junior College for a Washington's birthday party Feb. 22, and to the Pollard School PTA for a party for parents on Feb. 28.

- Granted a license to Sidney Hajjar for a parking lot at 572 to 580 South St. in Quincy Point. The lot will be limited to 100 cars and is required to meet certain requirements concerning its setback.

- Continued hearing on license requests from Shore Taxi for two additional hackney licenses to give other taxi operators an opportunity to express their views at a board meeting Feb. 24.

- Delayed decision on a common victualer's license for Mid Eastern food outlet to be located at 16 Beale St., Wollaston. The week's delay is to allow the board to hear any objections from other merchants

Presidents Bow To Rindge In Thriller Raiders Keep Tourney Hopes Alive

SUN SPORTS

Thursday, February 12, 1976

While Quincy's basketball team had already clinched an Eastern Mass. tournament berth several games earlier, North Quincy, faced with the unenviable task of winning its last six games to qualify, has won three of them and kept its hopes alive last week with two wins to make its record 9-7.

Joe Amoroso's Quincy team, although achieving its tournament goal, just about lost any hope of at least tying for the Suburban league title when it dropped its second one-point decision to league-leading Rindge Tech, 79-78, last Friday in one of the most exciting games ever played in Quincy. The loss dropped Quincy's record to 14-3.

Both coaches agreed it was one of the best games they have been involved in as the Presidents, trailing by a wide margin during the first half, made a tremendous comeback only to lose on a foul shot with six seconds remaining.

Quincy was led by 6-6 Jack Uhlar with 25 points and Bob Dacey had a sensational game and scored 21. John Riggs had 16 and Mike Lamie 12.

North Quincy handed Cambridge Latin its 59th loss in a row, 58-47, with Paul Kelleher having 13 points, Scott Roberts 12 and Jay Nelson having 11 points and 15 rebounds.

Eddie Miller's North junior varsity improved its record to 14-2 with a 57-41 win as Mike Gill had 15 points and Jim Watts eight points and 10 rebounds.

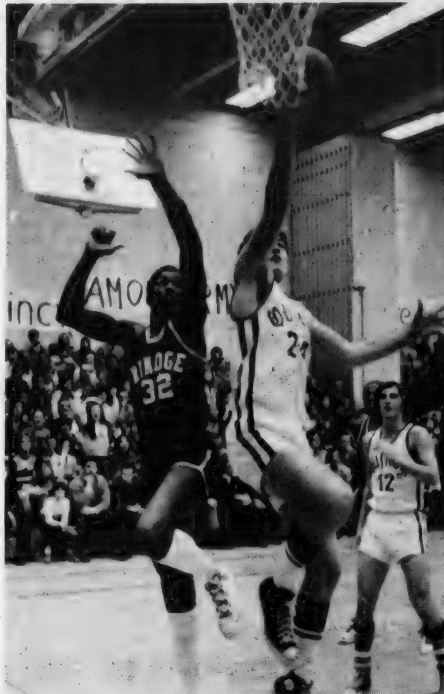

Earlier in the week North had made one of the greatest comebacks in years as it trailed tall Brockton by 12 points with four minutes to play, tied it up with two seconds to play on Rich Mahoney's basket and won it, 67-62, in overtime.

The Raiders went to a full press with defeat staring them in the face and forced many Brockton turnovers.

Mahoney, scoring the last five points, and Joel Devlin, sparked North in extra session.

"It was a tremendous game, just great," Nolan enthused. "John White, a junior guard, came into the game, and played super, controlling our offense."

Mahoney had 21 points, Devlin 16 and Jay Nelson 12. Quincy walloped Brookline, 76-45, as the losers continually fouled the Presidents, who hit on 31 of 40 foul shots in the second half and had 37 foul shots for the game. "It was very fortunate that no one was seriously hurt," Amoroso said.

"The referees did a tremendous job, though, and called everything."

Quincy played without its high scorer, Riggs, and Kevin Donovan, an outstanding guard. Uhlar, playing only half the game, scored 16 points as did Lamie [10 of his points were foul shots]. Steve Connolly has 11 points and Chuck McDermott scored 10.

Quincy plays at Newton

North Friday, plays at Xaverian in a non-league game Monday and closes its regular season Tuesday at Cambridge Latin. North hosts Weymouth South Friday and is home to Rindge Tuesday in the finals.

Crusaders Rebound With 2 Wins make their record 10-5 and keep their tournament hopes alive.

Jim Smith's ENC squad will try to avenge two defeats suffered in a recent trip to New York State when it hosts Nyack College Friday and King's College Saturday. Both games will start at 8 p.m. at the ENC gym in Wollaston. Monday night at 8 the Crusaders will be home to Curry College and next Wednesday will play at Southeastern Mass. University.

In its latest outing, ENC romped over Gordon College, 88-65, after piling up a 42-19 halftime bulge.

Mike Barefoot, who has had a great year, sparked the Crusaders with 17 points, followed by outstanding freshman Pete Ribeiro with 12. Gordie Wetmore had 10 points and eight rebounds as did Barry Jones, and Ken Harrison also had 10 points.

In their previous game the Crusaders had defeated Bridgewater State, 75-60, with Barefoot again pacing the attack with 18 points. Wetmore scored 13 and had 14 rebounds, Mike Cox had 14 points and Ribeiro and Kevin Gibson had 10 apiece.

On its ill-fated New York trip, ENC had lost to Nyack, 85-73, and to King's 97-85.

4 North Trackmen In State Finals Saturday

North Quincy's track team, co-champion of the Suburban League with its best record, will have four members in Saturday's state finals at Reading High.

In the Class B qualifying meet last week the Raiders' Bart Petracca qualified in the mile by winning with a fine 4:29.8 effort. Bob Levenson also qualified in the mile with a 4:40 timing, the second best ever at North.

The other North qualifiers were Brian Doherty in the dash and Jerry MacKenzie in the 600, his excellent 1:18 giving him second place.

Coach Lou Tozzi had several others turn in outstanding efforts but fail to qualify. Ken O'Brien did a 2:27 in the 1000, Mike Morin had a 10:02, the second best ever at North, in the two-mile and Marty Levenson did 10:12, his best ever.

"It was too bad these boys didn't make the finals with their fine performances," Tozzi said.

Joe Catalano's Quincy team, hit hard all year by illness and injuries, failed to qualify anyone in Class A.

Earlier North had tied Weymouth South for the Suburban League crown with an 8-1 record [10-1 overall]. In meets involving four co-leaders, the Raiders had defeated Brockton with surprising ease, 51-35, while Weymouth South topped Rindge Tech.

North finished up with a 67-19 breeze over Quincy, which finished 2-7.

Petracca broke the league mile and two-mile records, while Doherty ran the fastest dash, 5.7, just missing the league mark.

There will also be films of middleweight title fights between Rocky Graziano and Tony Zale.

Jim Mastrantonio is chairman of the committee. Members of his committee include Mario Salvatore, Rocco Buonovincino, John Marella, Rocco Marella, Arnold Miele, Peter Pirio, Gus Purpura, John Rossi, Jack Brown, John Tomasco, Joe Sacco and Domenico D'Arcangelo.

Lynn and Malden also have two teams each and Newton and North Suburban Y of Woburn having one entry apiece.

Quincy Team 2 has a 5-1 record, while Team 1 is only 1-4, but the interest of both teams is extremely high as they approach mid-season. The playoffs will start the third week in March and both Quincy teams are aiming for berths.

Both Quincy teams have flourished under the direction of coaches Bill Galarneau of Team 1 and Stefan Rohach of Team 2.

A-N Runnerup

Broad Meadows Wins Junior High Wrestling Title

Coach John Bogan's Broad Meadows Junior High wrestling team is the Quincy Junior High League champion and last week finished off an unbeaten [8-0] record when it defeated Sterling.

Brooks Maloof's Atlantic-North grapplers were second with a 6-2 record, losing only to Broad Meadows. This reversed last year's finish when unbeaten A-N finished ahead of BM.

Atlantic North lost its chance to tie BM for the league crown when it had to forfeit the heavyweight bout and the six points gave BM a 21-20 win.

"This was the most exciting match I have seen in four years of junior high wrestling," Maloof said. With A-N leading, 17-15, it needed a pin and six points in the 155-pound bout.

Atlantic-North's Mike Bulman won by a decision and the three points gave A-N a 20-15 lead. The forfeit in the heavyweight bout, the meet's finale, gave BM the win.

Eighth graders were Frank Zamperini, Bob Lavigne, Howie Chadbourne, Bernie Van Tassel, Brian Murphy, Ronnie Horn, Dave Burke, Capt. Jeff Gaylor, Gordon Spencer, Dennis Mayhew, Bill Flynn, Mark Ladas, Richard MacDonald, Roy Higgins and Dominic DiAngelo.

Seventh graders were Dan Shea, John Carvello, Randy Grimmer, John Moberg, Scott Matthews, Bernie Macauley, Paul Flynn, Scott Henebury, Mike Monahan, Jim Silcox and Danny Murphy.

Atlantic-North compiled its fine record despite the absence of a heavyweight.

The squad included: 80 pounds, John Fitzgerald, Steve Fitzgerald, Bob Cataldo and Steve Dodd; 90 pounds, Jean Pillard and Frank DiCroce; 100, Bob Reney and Dave Stoehberg; 108, Bob McCarthy and Paul Anastas; 115, Dave Newton; 125, Capt. Raiders Over .500

Quincy Icemen In 2 Big Wins

It couldn't be done but Quincy's hockey team defeated the 1-2 teams in the Suburban League last week to move into a second place with an 11-4-2 record and greatly enhance its chances of making the state tournament.

Saturday Bob Sylvia's Presidents, playing inspired hockey, followed up a great win over league-leading Brookline with a 5-4 win over Brockton, its first win over the Boxers since Quincy entered the league.

With three games left (Newton North last night, North Quincy Saturday at 7 p.m. at the Youth Arena and at Waltham next Wednesday at 2:30) Quincy must win or tie two of them to clinch a tourney berth. If it should lose twice, it could still make it if it finishes in second place.

In every game someone different seems to take the spotlight for the Presidents. Saturday the Bertoni brothers, Dennis and Brian, were the big guns with four of the five goals, two apiece. Brian also had two assists and Dennis one. Dennis now has 27 points.

Bill Hamill scored with assists for Frankie Guest, the league's leading scorer with 47 points, and Brian Bertoni, and Dennis Bertoni scored with Nick Cyr and Mark Giordani assisting in the opening period.

Brockton scored three goals in the second period for a 3-2 lead but Dennis Bertoni tied it up with Bob Barry and Brian Bertoni assisting.

In the finale Brian Bertoni made it 4-3 with assists for Dennis and Hamill, but Brockton tied it up. At the 9:52 mark Brian Bertoni scored the winner with Giordani and Mike Gulizia assisting.

"This is just great, the boys really have played inspired hockey," a happy Sylvia said. "Beating the top two teams in the league should really boost our confidence for the last three games."

North Quincy, eliminated earlier from the tournament, continued to play good hockey and a 4-2 win Saturday over Rindge Tech put the Raiders over the .500 mark with a 7-6-3 record.

Jim Moore, with John Andrews assisting, and Frank McGinnis, unassisted, gave North a 2-0 lead in the first period. Goals by Paul Hurley, with an assist for Moore, and McGinnis, with Moore and Jeff Gavin assisting, made it 4-0 in the second period.

North played at Brockton Wednesday night, will meet Quincy Saturday and will finish up hosting Weymouth North next Wednesday at the Youth Arena at 5 p.m.

Earlier last week Quincy had come up with its biggest win of the year, a 6-4 decision over Brookline, only Brookline's second loss in 14 games, both to the Presidents.

Quincy made a remarkable comeback with five goals in the final period after scoring late in the second period. At that time Brookline held a 4-1 lead.

"This game really perked us up and it was unreal," Sylvia said. "Guest played his best game of the season, Dennis Bertoni made the big plays on defense, and Walt Pimental and Bruce Aristides played excellent defense. And Bob Barry was just superb [four goals]. He has come alive all of a sudden and he and Paul Lynch have been playing excellent hockey."

Barry scored with Guest and Lynch assisting late in the first period to make the score Brookline 3, Quincy 1. After another Brookline goal in the second period, Brian Bertoni scored with Gulizia assisting.

The third period was all Quincy as Barry scored three goals and Brian Bertoni and Guest one apiece. Dennis Bertoni had two assists in the period as did Hamill.

North, still battling, blanked Cambridge Latin, 3-0, as Glenn Hanson, John Cooney and Mike Smith had the goals and Brian Watts, Greg Dillon, Andy Burke and Bob Weddleton had assists.

Previously Quincy had defeated Cambridge Latin, 6-2, while North had bowed out of tournament contention by losing to Newton North, 3-1.

Runs Into More Trouble

JOHN DAVIDSON will star in a spring-summer variety series for NBC. To begin airing in mid-May, the series will be built around Davidson's nightclub act... When BETTE MIDLER receives Harvard's Hasty Pudding Pot Feb. 17, she'll become number 26 in Harvard's line of Women of the Year. Previous winners include CAROL BURNETT, KATHERINE HEPBURN, SHIRLEY MACLAINE, LIZA MINNELLI and last year's choice, VALERIE HARPER... If you wait long enough, everything turns out fine. CBS was very discouraged when its daytime version of "All In The Family" was lagging in the ratings, but viewers slowly found Archie and Edith in their afternoon timeslot and "All In The Family" became the top-rated daytime series during the final week in Jan. SANDY DUNCAN is starring in a new musical version of "Pinocchio" scheduled for airing in March... ABC News Close-Up will examine the question of gun control on March 9... Veteran actor, LOU JACOBI, is working on a comedy series pilot for CBS titled, "Ivan The Terrible"... "Westworld" will make its television debut shortly and MGM is already working on a sequel for theatrical release. "Futureworld" is tagged as being "an extension of 'Westworld'" and will be released this summer... Pianist, ARTHUR RUBINSTEIN, recently told a London television interviewer that he still gets a case of nerves before each concert. His cure? Consume with raw egg yolks... "Viewer discretion" will be suggested when NBC airs its made-for-TV film, "JAMES DEAN." As well, CBS will urge similar concern when it airs "The Last Detail"... "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" continues to serve as a topic for discussion. The NORMAN LEAR comedy-soap opera is now being cancelled in Virginia.

Reportedly, hundreds of letters and telephone calls were received protesting the show. A station official said that the program "goes beyond all borders of good taste," and "We decided we don't want the show on our station at any time..." Who did TELLY SAVALAS get to be his surprise guest on his special next Wednesday? His race horse, "TELLY'S POP"... It has been estimated that the outstanding "Eleanor and Franklin" reached more than 15 million homes during its two-part showing... The Boston-based Action For Children's Television media group passed out the first awards in their four-year existence last week. Among those winning honors for making a significant contribution to children's television were "The CBS Children's Film Festival," "Captain Kangaroo," and "Go-USA"... And while on the subject of awards, The American Academy of Humor Awards will be presented on ABC in April, however, the winners already know who they are. LILY TOMLIN won an award for presenting funniest television special of the year, ED ASNER for funniest supporting performance in a series for "The MARY TYLER MOORE Show," JEAN STAPLETON for her performance on "All In The Family" and ALAN ALDA for his antics on "M*A*S*H." As well, "The MARY TYLER MOORE Show" received top honors for being the funniest series on television. In other categories, ART BUCHWALD was named funniest writer in print, and CHARLES M. SCHULZ, creator of "Peanuts," funniest cartoonist in print. Both MADELINE KAHN and GENE HACKMAN received honors for their roles in "Young Frankenstein," and MEL BROOKS was named to the lofty position of Funniest Man in America for 1975.

Brenda Vaccaro's 'Sara'

Debuts Friday

Brenda Vaccaro stands alone against a fierce prejudice she can't understand Friday night in the premiere episode of CBS's new dramatic series, "Sara," to be seen at 8 p.m. on Channel 7. Emmy Award-winning actress Brenda Vaccaro stars as Sara Yarnell, who has traded a dreary and predictable existence in the East for the job of schoolteacher to the frontier town of Independence, Colorado. In her spirited independence and commitment to learning, Sara is something of a puzzle to the school board members who hired her, sight unseen, with someone more docile in mind. In Friday's episode, Sara faces a crisis of conscience when the townspeople vent their pent-up rage over years of conflict with Indians on a ten-year-old girl, half Indian, who wants to attend Sara's school. Her insistence on the child's right to an education pits her against the town, and even against those she has called friends.

"Sara" marks Miss Vaccaro's first television series after three Tony-Award nominations for her Broadway roles and an Emmy for her work on the special TV musical revue, "The Shape of Things." She recently received a Golden Globe Award for her performance in the film version of Jacqueline Susann's "Once Is Not Enough." Her previous motion pictures include "Midnight Cowboy" and "I Love My Wife."

Mayoral Election Inquest Opens

Ted Eventual Candidate

Shriver Sees Kennedy Relation Campaign 'Mixed Blessing'

By TOM HENSHAW

Ted Kennedy won't run in 1976 but eventually he will be a candidate for President.

That's the opinion of someone whose opinion is better than most, Ted's brother-in-law, Sargent Shriver, who is running for President himself in '76.

"I hope he does, sometime," said Shriver the other day on a visit to The Quincy Sun. "Do I think he ever will? My guess would be yes. But I don't have anything to base that on. It's just a hunch."

Shriver, who is married to Eunice Kennedy, figures that his relationship with the Kennedy family is a "mixed blessing" on the campaign trail.

"I'm proud to be married to one of the Kennedy sisters and I have great admiration for the family," he says.

"But it is also true that I seem to get all of the negative vote of everybody who is opposed to the Kennedys. They voted against me automatically because I'm related to the Kennedys.

"The opposite is not true. Everybody who likes the Kennedys doesn't automatically like me or support me."

Shriver, who was the first director of the Peace Corps and Democratic candidate for vice president in the ill-fated 1972 election, thinks he should finish about fifth in next week's New Hampshire primary.

"I should end up behind the four guys who have been running up there for two, three or four years," he says, identifying them as Fred Harris, Morris Udall, Birch Bayh and Jimmy Carter.

"I was in a little town of about 4,000 up there for the first time three weeks ago.

Jimmy Carter has been there five times. His wife has been there twice. God knows how many times his son has been there.

"If I came in fourth in New Hampshire I would consider I was doing very well. If I came in third obviously I would be doing better. If I win there then the rest had better give up. But I don't expect that."

"I hope to do better in Massachusetts [March 2].

"They haven't been concentrating here. The population is bigger so you can't get as much results by simply shaking hands. Also I have much better recognition in Massachusetts.

"And don't forget, Vermont has a primary the same day as Massachusetts. I might even win that one. I have an outside chance, put it that way."

Shriver says he doesn't look

6 Security Officers Sought For Seniors Facilities

Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia is beefing up security at four of Quincy's senior citizen housing complexes.

Interviews with candidates to fill six security officer posts were begun Tuesday with the hope that they can be put to work by the end of the week at Pagnano Towers, Martensen St., Clay St., and the Oceanview complex.

The security force is to be funded by the federal CETA program which will be available at least until June-30.

Mayor LaRaia said the action was prompted by reports of vandalism and nuisances at the complexes.

"We in Quincy have been fortunate to have some of the most modern senior citizen facilities in the commonwealth," he said. "But what we don't have is adequate safety for our senior citizens."

"It is impossible for a police officer to spend all of his time at these senior citizens complexes. I'm hoping the security officers will fulfill that function."

The long-awaited inquest into the controversial Nov. 4 Quincy city election will get underway today [Thursday] at 2 p.m. before Judge Albert Kramer, presiding justice of the Quincy District Court.

Asst. Atty. Gen. Thomas R. Kiley, who is presenting the case for Atty. Gen. Francis X. Bellotti, declined to comment but indications are that City Clerk John Gillis will be the first witness called.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Charles Hely of Needham is representing the office of Dist. Atty. William D. Delahunt.

Kiley said the inquest which will be open to the press and public, is tentatively scheduled for five afternoons - today and tomorrow and Monday, Thursday and Friday next week.

"The number of sessions will depend on how long we go each afternoon," said Kiley. "Some probably will be short, two or three hours, and some will be longer, five or six hours."

He pointed out that the inquest "is an investigatory hearing only. It is not accusatory."

The inquest was ordered by Judge Kramer Jan. 27 at the request of Delahunt and Bellotti after a joint investigation by the offices turned up a number of possible violations of state election laws.

In the election, Joseph J.

LaRaia defeated Mayor Walter J. Hannon after a recount that saw 500 votes in blocks of 50 switched from Hannon to LaRaia. LaRaia won by 483 votes.

Delahunt and Bellotti said: "It appears that the election officers charged with conducting the count may have been improperly appointed."

"Unauthorized persons may have been within the guardrail [where counting was taking place].

"Unauthorized persons may have contributed to an atmosphere of confusion leading to improper entries."

"To the extent that the alleged violations were willful, they give rise to criminal action..."

Bans First Grade Reader

Creedon Tells Principals To Check New Books

School Supt. Lawrence P. Creedon called his principals together Friday to apprise them of something authors and readers have been aware of for some time.

You just can't trust those who review books.

The occasion arose when Dr. Creedon found it necessary to ban from the shelves of school libraries a book called "My Special Best Words," by John Steptoe, which was designed for first grade readers.

"The book is not pornographic," he said. "It is not filthy. But it uses some idioms of close-in family situations. Idioms like 'stinky' and 'pee pee'."

"And there is a cartoon on the last page that shows a boy sitting on a closed toilet seat and urinating."

"The book is done in the dialect of a 3-year-old black boy and his 1-year-old brother. The syntax, sentence structure and spelling have no positive reinforcing value for first graders learning to read."

"I'm sure we can find books of a more positive nature."

Dr. Creedon banned the book after parents complained of it on telephone talk shows on radio stations in Boston and Quincy.

"There were only six copies of the book in the whole system," he said. "And four of them never circulated from the library."

He said the books were purchased for the school system on the basis of what was said about them by a book review service.

"I told the principals," said Dr. Creedon, "that you can't trust reviews. I told them to make certain to look at the new books and see that they are consistent with the reviews."

$47,000 Requested For State Primary, City Census

The city of Quincy blew its whole election budget on unexpected events in 1975.

City Clerk John Gillis had to go to the City Council Tuesday night for an extra $47,000 so that the city could hold the state primary March 2 and a census.

Gillis explained that the two special elections to fill the House seat vacated by Rep. William D. Delahunt and the recount of the city election used up the budget money earmarked for the primary and the census.

QCA Receives $23,000 Grant

Quincy Community Action has received a grant of $23,000 to implement the second year of the Emergency Energy Program and begin a Winterization Program.

The Emergency Energy Program provides interest-free loans up to $100 to low income families for energy-related purchases, such as oil, gas and electricity.

Eligibility is based on income and family situation, such as sickness, age and children.

The Winterization Program authorizes grants of not more than $300 for home repairs to minimize heat loss and improve thermal efficiency, with the emphasis on owner-occupied homes.

Those who feel that they qualify should call the Energy Coordinator at 471-0796 or apply at Southwest Community Center, 372 Granite St., or Germantown Community Service Center, 9 Bicknell St.

Council Approves Money Transfers

The City Council has approved the following transfers of funds among city accounts.

- $38,222 from the Water Reserve to pay partial interest on water bonds.

- $26,871.42 from Parking Meter Receipts to pay partial interest on building bonds for the Ross Parking Garage.

- $120,000 from the Excess and Deficiency Fund to cover temporary loan interest on money borrowed in anticipation of taxes.

The original request of $60,000 was doubled after Auditor Charles L. Shea disclosed that the city had received "bids most favorable to borrow" now on the bond market.

- $1,200 from the Excess and Deficiency Fund to increase uniform allowances for six members of the Fire Alarm Division, who won the raise in recent labor negotiations.

- $1,000 from Parking Meter Receipts to increase uniform allowances for five meter maids, who won the raise in the latest labor contract.

- $40,000 from Parking Meter Receipts to replenish parking areas accounts.

[Parking Meter Receipts began to intrigue Councillor Dennis E. Harrington at this point.]

"Could they be used to pay for snow removal in certain areas?" he asked.

"Probably, yes," said Auditor Shea, "but it wouldn't make a substantial dent in snow removal costs this year."

- $3,000 from Parking Meter Receipts to a pensions account.

- $1,500 from the Excess and Deficiency Fund to pay a court judgement against the city caused by an error in interpreting a labor contract.

The Council referred a request for $1,550 by the Youth Commission to the Finance Committee.

The money, said Youth Coordinator William J. Connolly, is to be used to pay Quincy's share in the salary of a director for a federally funded work program for pre-delinquent youths.

A request by the purchasing agent for $1,230 to purchase two electric typewriters and two electronic calculators was tabled when the new purchasing agent, Agatha Deschenes, failed to appear in support of the request.

'My Community And People In It' This Week's Young Ideas Theme

By CATHY CONLEY

"My Community And The People In It" is the subject of this week's "Young Ideas" pull-out section for children, starting on Page 13 in today's Quincy Sun.

This issue is sponsored by the Quincy Public Schools through the offices of Project LINC.

Our guest editors are Mrs. Pat Landi's and Mrs. Geraldine Murphy's second graders at Parker School. These children were studying the community and how it works. Mrs. Landi contacted Project LINC and asked the staff to help her. Project LINC is a special program in the Quincy Public Schools which arranges for student visits to businesses for a first-hand learning experience. LINC stands for "learning in the community."

LINC also arranges for community people to visit classrooms. The staff invited several community workers to visit the Parker School second grade. Then the children dressed up as the community workers they would like to be. In this issue of "Young Ideas", several of the second graders tell what they learned about the community and how they hope to contribute to it someday.

Highlight of the issue is a contest to design a symbol for Project LINC. Winner will work with Project LINC and plan a special day for his or her class to visit a place chosen by the winner. Deadline for the symbol contest is March 5.

Because of the many entries received in the "Young Ideas" "I'm Proud to be from Quincy" essay contest, winners will not be announced until next week, Feb. 26. The extra time is needed to read all the entries. This contest was featured in the Jan. 29 "Young Ideas" sponsored by the North Quincy Business and Professional Association. Winner will receive a $25 Savings Bond.

No more entries are being accepted for that contest. Deadline was Friday, Feb. 13.

Neighbors Oppose License

Storage of Flammable Materials On Copeland St. Approved.

By TOM BRADY

The City Licensing Board Tuesday granted a license to the Pure Living Trust to store 1,000 gallons of flammable paints and lacquers in a building at 80 Copeland St., West Quincy, despite opposition by several neighbors.

Although City Councillor James Sheets and Matthew A. Hannel, who owns a funeral home near the site, complained of the possibility of fire and possible traffic problems, the board members, who had visited the building last week saw no problems with the plans if certain requirements were met.

The board approved the license provided that Pure Living Trust keeps all containers in sealed cans, does not mix any paints or lacquers on the site, has only one truck with off street loading and parking, and installs a fire detection system. The Board also placed the owner of Murphy's Beer and Wine Co. of 385 Hancock St., on probation for six months because he was found to have sold liquor to a minor. Thomas Kneeland, the owner, had his license revoked for two weeks, but the revocation suspended for six months.

The Caravan of Salads, a Middle Eastern food store which will open at 16 Beale St., Wollaston, received a common victualers license from the Board. The restaurant will be owned by Artin Kouyoumdjian and Kathy Bellotti, daughter of Atty. Gen. Francis Bellotti.

The Licensing Board also approved a license for the sale of poppies by the Wollaston Legion Auxiliary on May 6 and 7.

The Board continued a request from Joseph L. Piccarini for a used car lot to be located next to Morley's Auto Body on Raymond St. and a request from Vicky Thomas owner of Blazing Salads in Quincy Square to allow live entertainment, such as a piano player, on the premises one night a week.

Miss Thomas had earlier asked that she be allowed to introduce belly dancing as entertainment in her restaurant, but this was entirely unacceptable to the board, especially to Fire Chief Edward Barry who described the idea as "the last thing we need in Quincy Sq. when we are trying to upgrade the image of the square."

Good News:

Flu Wave Subsiding

While the number of cases of the flu in eastern Massachusetts is bordering on epidemic, Health Commissioner Dr. Samuel Solomon says it is beginning to subside and he expects it to be "practically negligible in two weeks."

Dr. Solomon said this year's strain is hitting older people and those with chronic diseases the hardest. Many cases have been reported among nursing home employees and patients, he said.

"It is a new type called 'A-Victoria', which is a variation of last year's type, Port Chalmers.

"We have no vaccine prepared for it."

Three flu victims in Quincy have died. Dr. Solomon said, but their deaths have been attributed to complications.

"They get the flu first, then it's pneumonia," he said.

"Anyone who has a heart condition or asthma or some chronic lung disease should contact his or her doctor."

Dr. Solomon listed the symptoms of the flu as a headache, sore throat, chills, fever, diarrhea, nausea and a generally weak feeling.

The best thing to do for it, he said, is take aspirin, drink a lot of liquids and go to bed for a couple of days.

"A lot of people continue to go to work while they're taking their medicine," he said. "That doesn't work well."

If the symptoms persist for more than two or three days, said Dr. Solomon, you should see your doctor.

It is impossible to tell how many cases of flu there are in Quincy.

Dr. Solomon said that people who were inoculated against the flu previously have been helped somewhat by that vaccine even against this new strain of flu, but he said there is no point in getting an inoculation now to protect against this outbreak since it takes about a month for a vaccine to become effective and the flu is expected to diminish before that time.

Ward 2 Civic Association Opposes Quincy Bay Filling

The Ward 2 Civic Association has unanimously voted to oppose the filling in of 26 acres of water to expand the Nut Island sewage plant.

Association president Theodore DeCristofaro said his group is aware of the adverse affects this project will have on the entire city. It is hoped one of the alternative plans will be more feasible, he said.

Guest speakers at the meeting were Senator Arthur Tobin, Rep. Robert Cerasoli, and Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond. They spoke on various aspects of government.

A question period followed and the traffic situation and parking problems in the Quincy Point area were discussed. The possibility of a towing ordinance was also mentioned.

Santa Fareri Democratic Candidate State Committeewoman

Miss Santa Fareri of 7 Welgate Circle, Wollaston, announces her candidacy for Democratic State Committeewoman in the Norfolk Senatorial District, which includes Quincy, Braintree, Holbrook.

The seat was previously held by Mrs. Clifford Marshall, who is not seeking re-election.

A graduate of North Quincy High School, Miss Fareri attended Curry College, Milton and Quincy Junior College, where she was elected senator of the student body.

Miss Fareri, a lifelong resident of Quincy, was an aide and political secretary to Congressman John J. Moakley [D-9th], and public relations director of the Kidney Foundation of Massachusetts.

She was a state aide to Atty. Francis X. Bellotti during his last fall election and is a free lance public relations and political consultant.

In her announcement, Miss Fareri said, "As state committeewoman, I would use my ability and experience to project the fundamental philosophy of the democratic party."

She is also a member of the Son's of Italy, Stella del Nord Lodge No. 1436, Quincy Citizen Association, and involved on the state level of the Equal Rights Amendment campaign.

Equal Rights Committee Formed

An East Norfolk County Committee to Ratify the Massachusetts Equal Rights Amendment has been formed to explain to the public the positive side of the ERA controversy.

Interested persons, male or female, can contact Terry Rick at 344-7456 days or 828-3439 nights.

Today's Women

EQUALITY SEEKERS -- The Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women sponsored a training session on the Equal Rights Amendment recently. Participants included, from the left, Diane Gallagher, Shirley Dunbar, coordinator of Phase II educational programs between Bunker Hill Community College and Charlestown High School; and Marge Schiller, assistant to the president of the State Senate. 35 Women, 2 Men Attended

Equal Rights Amendment Women's Commission Workshop Topic

The Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women recently sponsored a training session on the Massachusetts Equal Rights Amendment at the Heritage Room in the old Lincoln School.

Thirty-five women and two men listened to representatives of the Committee to Ratify the Massachusetts Equal Rights Amendment tell them how to speak in favor of the amendment which will be on the November ballot.

The morning session began with Diane Gallagher of Scituate reviewing some tools of public speaking which will help in bringing the message of the ERA to the voter. Ms. Gallagher pointed out that 14 states already have such an amendment and that Utah and Wyoming entered the union with an equal rights amendment.

Danielle de Benedictis of Milton, counsel for the Department of Public Utilities, discussed legal impact of the state ERA.

de Benedictis spoke particularly about the effect the amendment would have on family law, labor law, public education and criminal law and corrections.

The afternoon meetings broke up into workshops in which participants role played speechmaking to various types of audiences and practiced giving correct answers to hypothetical questions.

The federal Equal Rights Amendment needs four more states to ratify it.

Massachusetts has already done so.

Even if ratification is accomplished by 1979, the amendment would not take effect until 1981.

The Massachusetts ERA, if passed by the voters this November, would take effect immediately.

Stay Alive!

After the Party Fire

Party-goers are often careless while smoking. They may jar a cigarette off an ashtray, or they may bump into each other knocking ashes and burning coals into sofas and easy chairs. If those incendiaries fall on a rug or carpet, you might smell smoke fairly soon. But if they drop into upholstery, it might take 40 minutes or more to smell danger.

Most fires that cause multiple deaths in the home occur during the sleeping hours - 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. During those hours, you and your family are highly vulnerable because fire gets a foothold before anyone awakens. Then, time for escape is short - sometimes too short.

Precautions: Before a party, provide plenty of large, deep ashtrays. After the party, remove cushions from furniture and feel around for ashes with your hands. Hundreds of fatal fires begin in chairs and sofas. Finally, gather up all ashtrays and place them in the sink. Then go to bed...and sleep a lot safer.

Your Horoscope Guide

For The Week Of Feb. 22-28

ARIES: (March 21 to April 19 — Also Aries Ascendant) — Your desire to travel may be ill-advised at this time. Curb your irritation about the situation. A new romance could threaten an existing one — think it over carefully. It's hard, but you must be patient.

TAURUS: (April 20 to May 20 — Also Taurus Ascendant) — Don't let explosive situations in your personal life jeopardize your career. Be knowledgeable and cooperative, not dictatorial. Guard against indiscreet actions in romance — consider the price you will pay.

GEMINI: (May 21 to June 20 — Also Gemini Ascendant) — Become more active in community affairs — get involved in something new and expansive. Get out and about to make contacts with new people. Listen to opinions of male and others. Encourage discussions.

CANCER: (June 21 to July 22 — Also Cancer Ascendant) — You are becoming aware of career opportunities resulting from your recent successes. Stay in there with the hard work effort though, don't daydream. Stay true to your integrity, resist temptation.

LEO: (July 23 to Aug. 22 — Also Leo Ascendant) — If your temper is righteously aroused, you are better off to state your position honestly now. Financial matters should prosper, but situations with demanding relatives could be bothersome. Try to ignore it.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22 — Also Virgo Ascendant) — Dreams could come true now and may involve a travel adventure. Live up to your own highest expectations of yourself. The pleasure side of life, including romance, is better left to a later time. Concentrate on life objectives.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22 — Also Libra Ascendant) — An attraction to a superficially exotic type of person could endanger a more lasting and valuable romance. Consider carefully before pursuing this course. Others could tend to free load if you let them.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21 — Also Scorpio Ascendant) — You feel like coming out of your shell now. Social life is stimulating. Creative endeavors and activities with children are favored. Not the time to take on a long-term debt or contract. Stick to your budget.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21 — Also Sagittarius Ascendant) — Work load is heavy now and you may have some worries about a romantic partner. Your moods could fluctuate quite dramatically. Devote yourself to doing a good job and be assured it will be appreciated.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19 — Also Capricorn Ascendant) — Personal charisma is high and you can accomplish wonders with groups influential to your success. The accent is on your sincerity, reliability and performance. Your fondest wish could come true.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18 — Also Aquarius Ascendant) — Don't be pressured into impulsive decisions — stay calm. Superiors could bait you into a confrontation if you don't maintain self-control. Meditate and go inside yourself for the answers.

PISCES: (Feb. 19 to March 20 — Also Pisces Ascendant) — You're on the path to dream fulfillment, but don't let down on your work effort. Make decisions carefully, not impulsively. Community projects are favored. Your concepts of life are undergoing changes.

Quincy 8th Graders Achievement Test Scores Highest Ever

Scores from the California Achievement Test administered in the Quincy Public Schools during October of 1975 show that the results achieved by students at the eighth grade level are the highest ever obtained at that level during the 33-years history of standardized testing in the city's schools.

Highest scores were in mathematics and in language with reading being slightly above the average as determined by the California Achievement Test.

Records of the past standardized testing programs of the Quincy Public Schools going back to 1943 show that only once before have scores been at this level and that was in 1966 when an earlier edition of the California Achievement Test was used.

Basic skills in reading, mathematics, and language are emphasized in the elementary and early junior high school years and this test indicates that competencies in these areas have been developed by Quincy students by grade 8.

The CTB/McGraw Hill test results are based on a sampling of students from throughout the United States and on a sampling of subject content and skills. Scores are reported in standard scale scores which permit charting of a student's academic growth from year to year as based on this test. All standardized tests use the normal distribution for development of their norms which means that half the population tested is above the average and half is below.

Grade 4 in the Quincy Public Schools achieved at the average for the California Achievement Test.

Grade 6 achieved at the average for this test in reading, was slightly below in mathematics and slightly above in language skills.

No differences at these levels were statistically significant as reported by the test publisher.

The Quincy Public Schools use a comprehensive sophisticated standardized testing program which provides useful information for students, teachers, parents, and school administrators. The computer reports are used to begin diagnosis of strengths and weaknesses in the skills tested.

QUINCY COOPERATIVE BANK KEPT 1,500 SENIOR CITIZENS FROM GETTING RIPPED OFF.

Street crimes directed against our senior citizens are often the saddest of all. But the residents of 1000 Southern Artery and members of that social center won't have to worry about that any longer.

Because putting muggers and robbers out of business has become part of our business.

Here's how. The federal government now permits banks to accept direct deposit of social security and other checks. That prevents mail box thefts. And we opened a branch within 1000 Southern Artery for the use of those residents and social center members. Now they can do their banking without ever leaving the security of the area.

These are just two of the many services we offer in the spirit of Josiah Quincy, Jr., founder of cooperative banking in Massachusetts and the man for whom our bank was named. Although Josiah lived long before social security and housing for senior citizens, we know for certain . . .

JOSIAH WOULD HAVE LIKED THAT.

MONEY TALKS Mutual Funds?

We Have A Better Idea

By Philip J. Lawrence, President
Colonial Federal Savings
And Loan Association
of Quincy, Holbrook and Wareham
8 - 6 Weekdays 8 - 7:30 Thursdays

A recent issue of Forbes, the magazine which covers the world of finance and investments, makes the valid point that the average person pursuing a successful career cannot devote the time required to make intelligent decisions in the stock market.

"Does it really make sense, for example, for a doctor making $100,000 a year to take valuable time off from his practice to keep track of the market?" Forbes asks.

"It may be fun, but there are very very few, if any, hobbies more expensive than doing your own investing," Forbes says.

The solution it suggests is the selection of a good mutual fund with a consistent track record. And it proceeds to rate the performance of various funds over a period of almost ten years from 1966 to 1975, selecting for its Honor Roll those with consistency of performance throughout all market conditions and a record of 6 per cent or better annual return [counting both dividend income and capital gains].

On this basis, how many mutual funds made the Forbes Honor Roll? Only 12 out of 585!

The magazine points out that the 500 stocks in the Standard & Poor's index wound up the near-decade just about where they had started. And the mutual funds, despite being selected according to investment philosophies by so-called money-market geniuses, did even worse than the market!

What would prompt you to select today a mutual fund that might provide a 6 per cent net annual return over the next ten years? You can do better in a savings program with us.

And why gamble on finding one of those 12-out-of-585 funds that offer the 6 per cent return? That's only a 2 per cent chance—as compared with 100 per cent assurance of substantial earnings and insured principal with us!

Mid-Winter Concert To Be Held Feb. 25

The Quincy Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of Robert E. Brown will perform its' Annual Mid-Winter Concert Wednesday, Feb. 25, at 8:30 p.m. at North Quincy High auditorium.

The program will consist of two well known classics rarely presented in this area.

The first is Moussorgsky's "Tableaux d'une Exposition", more commonly known as "Pictures at an Exhibition". Moussorgsky composed this piece for the piano and after his death, Serge Koussevitsky, late conductor of the Boston Symphony, decided to have this work orchestrated. He called in Maurice Revel, composer of the infamous "Bolero", for this task. This piece was then performed by the Boston Symphony in memory of Moussorgsky.

For the second half of the program the orchestra will perform Beethoven's Symphony No. 7 in A major, op. 92.

Tickets for the performance are $2. for adults and $1. for students, children and senior citizens. Tickets will be available at the door.

Project LINC Links Schools With The Community

Someday I'm going to be a cowboy. I want to live in the country and stay outdoors a lot. I'll ride horses and protect our cows. Today's cowboys also use jeeps and helicopters, and sometimes guns for protection.

Albert Histon, 8

I'm going to be a bank teller. I'll help with new accounts and withdrawals. I'll process savings accounts and cash checks. And I'll get to use a computer and a black light to check for counterfeit bills.

Leah Stackhouse, 7

When I grow up, I'm going to be a customer service representative for the telephone company. I will talk to customers and take new telephone orders. I'll answer customer questions and correct billing errors. I'll be good at this, because I love talking on the phone.

Kelly Christensen, 7

James: I'd like to be a policeman. I would help sick people and children who are lost. I would direct traffic and catch burglars. I would ride in a cruiser to patrol the neighborhood. I'd blow my whistle to stop traffic and I would be friendly.

Noreen: I would like to be a mayor so I could tell the policemen what to do.

James Frechette, 8 and Noreen Connelly, 7

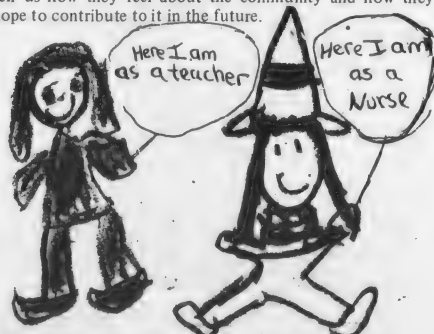

Artwork By Eileen Devin, 7

Project LINC is a special program in the Quincy Public Schools which links our schools with the community. LINC stands for "learning in the community." It allows students to visit different businesses to learn about them first hand. These are not "field trips". They are "work trips".

Suppose a boy in high school is interested in law. The LINC staff would set up a program for him. He would visit a law office. He would watch how it works. He would interview the lawyers. He would visit the courts. He would learn in-depth just what being a lawyer is all about.

Also, Project LINC arranges for community people to come to classrooms for special occasions. Mrs. Landi and Mrs. Murphy are second grade teachers at the Parker School. They had just such a special occasion. Their children were studying the community and how it works. They were exploring all the different professions and seeing how they depend on one another. Mrs. Landi asked the LINC staff to help her. They invited several community workers to visit the second grade and tell the children about their work -- a policeman, fireman, an automobile dealer, an aluminum siding man, a court official, among others. One afternoon, parents visited the classroom and explained their professions. The children met a weatherman, a news broadcaster, a beauty shop operator, a housewife.

As a grand finale, each second grader dressed up as the community worker he would like to be. In this issue of "Young Ideas", we interview several of the children. They tell us how they feel about the community and how they hope to contribute to it in the future.

Erin Brown, 7 Christine Jenkins, 7

What Community Worker

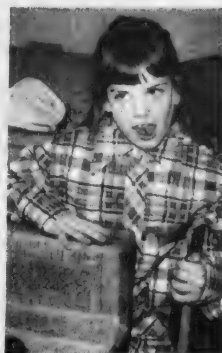

Someday I'd like to be a soldier. I could drive a tank. I could march in a parade. I could go to school and learn a trade. I could salute all the time. And most of all, I would guard our land.

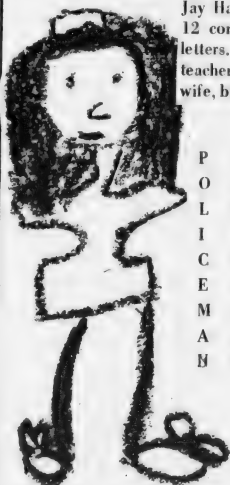

Russell Boudreau, 7

I'd like to be a person who works in the supermarket. I'd put groceries on the shelves. I'd weigh vegetables and fruit. I'd cut up meat and wrap it. I'd check out the customers groceries. And I'd clean the counters and floors.

Kellianne McDonagh, 7

Jay and Jackie's Word Search

Jay Hamaty, 8, and Jackie Kineavy, 8, have hidden 12 community workers and places in this block of letters. See if you can find: policeman, city hall, teacher, fireman, doctor, dentist, nurse, bank, clerks, wife, boss and man.

Watch Out, Marcus Welby!

In their study of community workers, these children were fascinated by the medical profession. Our doctor is Dr. Richard Stanton, 8. Our scrub nurse is Joanne Roach, 7. Our patient is Chris Howley, 8. And our nurse is Donna King, 7. Donna tells us why she would like to be a nurse.

I'd like to help patients get better. I could take temperatures, read charts, take blood pressures, give medicines and give shots. I'd wear a clean white uniform and I'd follow the doctor's order.

What Did You Learn About The Community

I thought it was fun to have all the community workers come in and talk to us. A policeman came in and told us how he arrested people. A man who helps the judge in court told us about what happens to people who break the law. A broadcaster told us how he tells people on the air about people who break the law - and other things. We saw how all different types of people work together in the community and depend on each other.

Jay Lyons, 7

We learned that the community is like a family. Really, the smallest group in the community is the family. A neighborhood is a lot of families. And a community is a lot of neighborhoods. Our class rode around Quincy and saw lots of neighborhoods and lots of places where community people work - like City Hall, the police station and the fire station. Then we drew a map of our neighborhood and each of us put our house on the map.

Pamela McDonald, 7

Who Would You Like To Be?

I'd like to be a policeman. First of all I'll help people. I'll find lost kids. I'll give out tickets. I'll catch robbers and bring them to jail. In my picture, I'm putting handcuffs on a robber.

Jay Hamaty, 8

I want to be a teacher. I'll help children learn. I'll teach them how to spell, read and do math. And I'll write on the blackboard a lot. I'd like to be just like my teacher, Mrs. Landi.

Marybeth Varnado, 8

Michael— The Master Social Worker

When I grow up, I'm going to be a master social worker. I'm going to help people with things, explain things to them, teach people things, and write reports in my office. Here I am, sitting at my desk, happily waiting to help someone. [My second choice is to be a garbageman].

Spirit Of '76

We will remember the minute-men
For they have won the war,
And we will remember Paul Revere for Shouting door to door,
This year is America's birthday
It's the 200th one I'm sure,
It's one great way to remember
With happiness evermore,
Don't forget, I'll make a bet
There's lots of memories in store.

Beth-The Super Manager

While studying people and places in the community, Beth Pacino, 7, decided she'd like to work in a supermarket. Her goal is to be manager. She tells us what she learned about supermarkets.

I used to think everybody did everything in the supermarket. I learned that each person has a special job. The produce man takes care of the fruits and vegetables. He used a scale. The meat man takes care of the meat department. The cashier takes the money for the food and rings it up on the cash register. The carry-out boy packs food in the bags. And the manager takes care of the whole store. It's interesting to see what everybody's job is.

Huntington - Longwood Hospitals Elect 2 Quincy Residents

Two men from Quincy were elected officers of the Huntington General and Longwood Hospitals at the annual meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Huntington General Hospital.

Arthur Ciampa of 409 Adams St., was elected vice-president and Joseph A. Donahue, 82 Crabtree Rd., Squantum was reelected treasurer of both hospitals.

Ciampa, who is executive director of Cerebral Palsy of the South Shore Area, Inc., served as secretary of the board last year and chairman of the hospital's membership committee. He has been active in many civic and community organizations and presently is a member of the John D. Mackay Scholarship Fund Trustees of the Quincy Rotary Club, M.S.P.C.C. South Shore District, Work Inc., and the Regional Council of the Health Planning Council of Greater Boston.

Ciampa is also a member of the South Shore Regional Advisory Council, Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Department of Education; Review Committee of the Massachusetts Developmental Disabilities Council; the Ad Hoc Committee for Occupational Education, Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Department of Education; and the Speakers Bureau of the United Way of Massachusetts Bay. Governor Volpe appointed him to the Massachusetts Vocational Rehabilitation Commission and he was Chairman of the Quincy Council on Aging for six years.

Donahue, who is also chairman of the Funds & Investment Committee, is an architect who developed plans for the renovation of the Cerebral Palsy building at 105 Adams St., Quincy, which now houses a new walk-in Clinic. He is a member of the American Institute of Architects, Boston Society of Architects, and is licensed to practice in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. Donahue is a member of the Quincy Rotary Club and the Wollaston Golf Club. He also is a member and Chairman of the Review Committee of the Health Planning Council of Greater Boston Area 524, and has been associated with the Massachusetts Bay United Fund.

His works locally include the North Quincy Branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library, the Quincy Nursing Home, the City of Quincy Public Works Administration Building, the Civil Defense Emergency Operating Center and the Quincy District Court.

Two other Quincy residents who were elected to serve on the Board of Trustees of both hospitals are former Mayor and State Senator James R. McIntyre, 23 Sturtevant Rd., now Counsel to the State Senate, and William J. Trifone, 24 Mortimer Terrace, who is director of the Quincy Neighborhood Youth Corps and president of Cerebral Palsy of the South Shore Area.

Other members of the Board of Trustees who live in the South Shore area include Jordan S. Prouty, Daniel Russell, both of Marshfield, Lewis P. Hoffman of Milton, and Dr. Charles D. Merrill of Squantum.

John Odomirop Art Exhibit At N.Q. Library

Paintings by John Francis Odomirop are on display at the North Quincy Branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library through Feb. 28.

Odomirop has been a resident of the Boston area most of his life, and currently has a studio in South Boston. He graduated from Milton High School, studied at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts, majoring in painting and taking secondary courses in graphic arts. Before he graduated in 1973 he took a year off and traveled throughout the U.S. In his fifth year he did assistant teaching under the professorship of Jan Cox in the Painting Department, after which he received his Teaching Certificate.

He also went to Tufts University for a year, and a year and a half to Vesper George School in 1963 and 1964. In Providence, R.I., he worked in commercial art for six months doing layouts.

Odomirop has had one man shows at the Griffin Gallery, the Museum of Science, the Off the Square Gallery, the Boston State Hospital, and the Center Club in Boston.

His work could be described as a cross between Pointilism and Cubism with the emphasis on the linear quality of the work. He draws in either ink or pencil, makes most of his frames, and sizes and primes his own canvases.

Picking The Man For The Office

We have been somewhat critical in recent weeks of Mayor Joseph LaRaia's handling of municipal appointments since he took office in January.

For one thing, we thought he lopped off too many heads in too short a period of time to allow for an orderly transition from the Hannon administration to his.

We also thought it looked like he was trying to get rid of just about everyone he could who had been appointed by former Mayor Walter Hannon even if that person was well qualified. It really looked to us like a purge, even though we believe—and have said so publicly—that Mayor LaRaia has the right to pick his own team. It was just the mow 'em down scene that projected from City Hall that bothered us.

Some of Mayor LaRaia's appointments have been good ones. Some time will judge. A couple, at least, look like political debts being paid off.

But then, other mayors have handed out a few plums in the past. Let's face it, there were a few in the immediate past administration that left something to be desired. They are now gone, ousted by Mayor LaRaia, and will hardly be missed.

Anyway, having voiced our opinion quite strongly in recent weeks we would like to stress that Mayor LaRaia has indeed made appointments that look like good ones—appointments based on qualifications.

One of the most recent, for example, is that of Lars N. Lundin as city planning director. Mr. Lundin had been director of the Houghs Neck Community Development Program. He appears to have the proper credentials to ably run the planning department which is so vital to the city's future.

He is an architect who has studied civil and safety engineering and construction and has put his know-how to work on the master plan of Otis Air Force Base and on special assignment at the Pentagon.

Rev. Bedros Baharian, chairman of the city Planning Board, has been around long enough and is astute enough to know a good planning man when he sees one.

His reaction: "I am very pleased with the appointment of a professional person to the post. He has a great deal of experience as an architect. This is a non-political appointment as a planning director should be."

Amen.

In addition to the qualifications, there is another thing we like about this particular appointment. Mr. Lundin was appointed Houghs Neck project director by former Mayor Hannon. So it would seem quite obvious Mayor LaRaia has picked him on ability. And that's the way it should be.

Quincy needs the best talent it can get for what it is able to afford. Some appointees down through the years have been too light on performance and too heavy on politics.

The Lundin appointment looks quite refreshing. We commend Mayor LaRaia for picking the man—not just filling an office.

Brownell Seeks To Protect Consumers

Rep. Thomas F. Brownell has urged Gov. Michael S. Dukakis to support and help pass anti-trust legislation to protect the consumers of Massachusetts.

In a letter to the governor, Brownell said the recent insurance industry crisis emphasizes even more "the dire need" for such legislation.

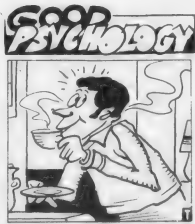

Brownell, who has asked the Justice Department to investigate possible anti-trust violations within the insurance industry, said:

"I am hopeful something will be done because I firmly believe that there are serious anti-trust violations which should be brought before the courts...This entire crisis convinces me even more of the need for a comprehensive state anti-trust law."

Brownell said he has already filed anti-trust legislation this year. Although the bill received a favorable report from the Committee on Judiciary, he said the bill "has languished in the Committee on Ways and Means."

Asking the governor's support in seeking passage of such legislation, Brownell said:

"The current insurance crisis points out the dire need of this kind of protection for the consumers of our state."

Plan E: Quincy's Impossible Dream

By HENRY BOSWORTH

The recent death in Florida of William J. Deegan, Jr., Quincy's first city manager, brings back memories of Plan E—Quincy's Impossible Dream—of a quarter-century ago.

And again raises the question: why did Plan E flop here?

Many have their own answers to that question. And others would just as soon forget Plan E ever happened.

For eight years, Quincy divorced its Plan A charter of government to romance Plan E. It was a short, stormy marriage.

James R. McIntyre, former city councillor, mayor and state senator, who came into office as a young councillor as Plan E was going out, wrote a 25,000-word thesis on the subject for his college master's degree in political science, some years ago.

You may have your own ideas if you were around at the time, but McIntyre's conclusions on the rise and fall of Plan E:

It was oversold to the people as a Utopian non-political government which would provide better services with lower taxes.

You might be interested that two unsuccessful attempts were made as far back as 1938 and 1940 to bring Plan E to Quincy.

In 1940, then Mayor Thomas S. Burgin, running unopposed for his fourth Plan A term, called supporters of Plan E "charter meddlers".

Seven years later, thanks largely to Plan E's success in what McIntyre calls once "politically infested" Cambridge, the Quincy "meddlers" won. Plan E was voted in by an overwhelming majority—17,420 to 7,532 to become effective in 1950.

And, to Quincy from Superior, Wis., on Jan. 10, 1950 came 41-year-old William J. Deegan, Jr. He was the City Council's unanimous choice from a field of 28 applicants.

Quincy residents who had heard and read so much about Plan E, settled back to watch the magic. And to wait for all the promised benefits: a business-like government, better services, higher wages, lower taxes.

Deegan began streamlining the government by consolidating departments. He instituted an in-service training program for department heads and launched the city on various surveys.

First official criticism of Plan E came in May after the new tax rate of $45.20 [get that!] was announced. The $4.20 increase really belonged to the previous Plan A government, Plan E supporters argued.

Councillor Frank N. Orcutt, however, is quoted as wanting to know: "When is the city manager going to make some savings? The people were sold a bill of goods on Plan E. They expected miracles, a bed of roses, but all they got was an increase in taxes."

But up stood another councillor according to McIntyre, with these stirring words: "I don't believe Bill Deegan needs anyone to defend him. He has accomplished almost a miracle in savings. The job he has done is most commendable."

The speaker, believe it or not: Carl W. Anderson. Later, he changed his mind to become Deegan's and Plan E's most bitter foe and probably the man who chased Plan E out of town.

In 1951, city employees got a $300 pay raise and the tax rate went up only $1.36. The then local newspaper, praising Plan E for the slight tax increase, chided Orcutt:

"Yes, it looks as though Quincy was certainly sold a bill of goods when Plan E was foisted upon it. The only catch is that the bill of goods looks like pretty good merchandise."

The "merchandise," however went up in 1952. Another tax rate increase [$7] and with it a demand from Orcutt, Anderson, Councillor David Crowley and former Mayor David McIntosh that Deegan resign. Orcutt, however, bolted the ouster bid because "of new information". Deegan and Plan E weathered that storm.

Deegan however, then got an indictment against Anderson charging him with six counts of interfering with the administrative affairs of the city. A Norfolk County jury deliberated 73 minutes and found Anderson innocent. He wept happily at the verdict.

A $3 tax drop in 1953 heartened Plan E supporters. In 1954 it went up $1.20 to an even $52. Things weren't so bad.

In 1955, however, Deegan surprised everyone by announcing he was resigning to enter private industry. There had been talk he and Anderson were packing guns. Then came Plan E's crushing blow: an $8.60 tax hike.

On the ballot went the question of returning the government to Plan A. Yes, said the people, by a 1,500 vote majority. Plan A would return in 1958.

By then, the old Quincy Civic Association...the "blood and heart of Plan E" couldn't even get a quorum together to fight Plan A.

Despite the tax increases, the big crisis for Plan E was the Anderson case, McIntyre thinks. Deegan, he feels, made a fatal mistake seeking court action. Even if Deegan had won that legal round, he would have lost the political battle, theorizes McIntyre.

There would always have been a strained relationship between the manager and council, he feels. Deegan would forever remain the man who brought a member of the council into a criminal court.

McIntyre thinks Deegan should have immediately resigned in the resulting chaos because he "personified the plan". He should have "assumed the cloak of martyrdom if necessary to insure the success of the plan."

Plan E might have survived thinks McIntyre who went on to become a strong mayor under Plan A.

Ground Broken For Merrymount Ampitheater

By TOM HENSHAW

Ground was broken for an amphitheater seating 10,000 with a modern acoustic shell in lower Merrymount Park on a site known as the "pageant ground".

Work on the project was to be done entirely by jobless men registered with the Quincy Employment Service Bureau, of which there were more than 1,000.

The ESB, located at 67 Saville Row, had raised $14,000 in a $50,000 drive to create jobs for the unemployed in Quincy.

Working people were encouraged to contribute to the ESB on the basis of one per cent on weekly incomes of $25-35, two per cent on $35-50, and three per cent on $50 and up.

The ESB promised:

"The committee will expend all money contributed in creating jobs, believing that anything that savors of the dole to be un-American."

NEW CARS FOR '32 DISPLAYED

Quincy motorists turned out in droves to view the new 1932 model cars on display in salesrooms throughout the city.

The new Hudson and Essex were to be seen at Central Garage, 254-260 Washington St.; Pierce Arrow and Studebaker at Yerxa Motor Sales, 1546 Hancock St.; Willys Knight at Buckley's Garage, Willard St., West Quincy.

If you went to Yule's Garage, 676 Hancock St., Wollaston, you could examine the new Hupmobile, and Merritt O. White, Inc., 615 Hancock St., had the Franklin -- "The only air-cooled car with the airplane type motor."

PARTISAN BILL SEEN DOOMED

A bill sought by Neil A. MacDonald, chairman of the Republican City Committee, that would make Quincy's municipal elections partisan contests appeared headed for defeat in the State Legislature.

Mrs. Beatrice Walker Nichols, a member of the school committee and Republican State committeewoman, said in support of the bill:

"Without party designations an active minority, needed as a check, is not functioning. The non-partisan system is confusing, indefinite and irresponsible."

WORST DEFEAT

The Quincy High School basketball team suffered one of the worst defeats in its history, a 43-5 drubbing at the hands of Brockton in its own gym.

The only Quincy scoring was a basket by Capt. Hartman Sass at the end of the third period, two free throws by Winsor and a free throw by Johnny Kroesser.

Brockton led, 23-1, at halftime.

But the QHS hockey team at least partially redeemed the school's athletic reputation by beating Framingham, 2-1, in Boston Garden on goals by Larry Cahoon and Eddie Norton.

It was Bob King's goaltending that had hockey fans in Boston talking in glowing terms.

CHANGE IN NAME ONLY

The Merchant Theater on Hancock St., Quincy Center, the city's oldest playhouse once known as the Quincy Music Hall, changed its name again, this time to the State Theater.

But no change was promised in prices, which were 10 cents for all seats during matinee performances and 15 cents for orchestra seats at evening shows.

Featured films at the time were "Dangerous Affair", with Jack Holt; "Headin' for Trouble", starring Bob Custer; "Don't Divorce Him", a comedy; and Chapter 8 of the serial "Danger Island".

QUINCY-ISMS

The bicentennial program of the Women's Union of the Atlantic Methodist Church featured Miss Muriel Curtis of the Wollaston School of the Spoken Word in a three-act play set in Revolutionary, Civil War and World War times... Flint Brothers, 618 Hancock St., Wollaston, offered a six-room house, with fireplace and piazza, on "a nice corner location in Wollaston," for $3,300... A general alarm fire, starting in the basement of Winer's Hardware Store, did $50,000 damage to the north wing of the Adams Building in Quincy Square... Amber Cottage, 62 Gould St., Wollaston, had a special Sunday dinner for $1 consisting of soup or fruit cup, roast chicken, dressing, mashed potato, baked onion, string beans, salad, olives, celery, Parker House rolls, plus choice of desserts, tea, coffee or ginger ale... Veli Saarinen, the Finnish Olympic 50 kilometer ski champ, was tendered a reception at Finnish Temperance Hall while visiting his brother-in-law George H. Peterson, a Quincy plumber... State Rep. Joseph B. Grossman, treasurer of L. Grossman Sons, Inc., of Quincy, was re-elected director of the New England Building Material Dealers Association... The Colony Food Store, 7 Copeland St., Brewers Corner, sold Florida oranges, two dozen for 25 cents; fresh ground hamburger, 10 cents a pound; and offered free cabbage with all corned beef at 17 cents a pound... Leroy C. [Curly] Rogers, coach of the undefeated North Quincy High School basketball team, was recovering from four broken ribs suffered in a faculty game at Needham... Miss Ida Kunelius, 18, of 55 Suomi Rd., West Quincy, won the title of Miss South Shore at the Quincy Armory Dance... Former City Councillor Welcome G. Young, whose great interest was in the city's playgrounds, died at his home in Atlantic... Granite City Ice Co., 550 Adams St., promised: "There will be no shortage of ice in Quincy and the price will remain unchanged"... But there might be a shortage of booze... Quincy Police destroyed 3,000 gallons of liquor, valued at $12,000, that had been confiscated in prohibition raids in the city since last spring.

Economy, Cost Of Living, Leadership, Top Issues Says Shriver

upon any one of his rival candidates as the man to beat at the Democratic convention this summer.

"I think the real challenge is not someone to beat but to reach the American people," he says. "Whoever can give them some sense of inspiration and dedication and a new sense of faith I believe will be the successful nominee."

"If you read the papers, Jimmy Carter is supposed to be doing the best job of reaching."

"I saw a poll today that showed 55 per cent of the conservatives say he's a conservative; 55 per cent of the liberals say he's a liberal and 55 per cent of the independents say he's an independent."

"So he has managed the hat trick in being all things to all people. But, of course, it may turn out to mean that he's nothing to nobody."

Two Democrats whom Shriver believes have proven that they can reach the American people are Ted Kennedy and Hubert Humphrey, who, he feels, is an unannounced candidate for the presidential nomination.

"Sure, Hubert's a candidate," he says. "He's a candidate whose apparent strategy is that the best way to get the nomination is not to become involved in the early primaries."

"Let everybody knock each other off and then he goes in and picks up the pieces."

Shriver says he would, if necessary, take another vice presidential nomination "but not with the same enthusiasm with which I'd take the presidential spot.

"It depends on the nominee and the circumstance at the time," he says. "I said once and I'll say it again, I would not run on the same ticket with George Wallace. I'm not ruling out any of the others right now."

But talk about candidates and elections makes Shriver restless. He'd rather talk about the issues of the campaign. And they are?

"The big issues are exactly the things you would expect to be the big issues," he says.

"The rising cost of living is an issue that affects people at all levels."

"The person who is earning his living, whose wife is working to help ends meet, who can't pay medical bills or educational bills, who can't carry mortgage payments any longer, these people are very angry."

"Over and above those issues there is a sense of impending crisis in our internal and external affairs."

"Many people have a sense that nobody is able any longer to grapple with the problems I've just described, that something is the matter with the system itself, that nobody can take charge of it, command it, direct it, adequately."

"This is coupled with the feeling our foreign policy is in a shambles. The latest thing in Angola is just an example of that."

"I think that there is an increasing sense that nobody's really in charge of foreign policy."

"People sense there is no one in charge in Washington and they're right. We have a president who is a fine man, honest and worthy but with no experience in executive department work."

"They like him but they don't think he's qualified for the job and they're right."

Nevertheless, Shriver says he feels Gerry Ford would be a tougher Republican candidate to beat than Ronald Reagan.

"It would be more fun to run against Reagan," he says. "The issues would be more clearly delineated. The press would like it much more because they'd get a much more colorful campaign."

"I guess in terms of winning -- and that's the crux of it, isn't it -- I'd have to say it would be easier to beat Reagan."

"But former Gov. Pat Brown of California once told me one of the biggest mistakes of his entire political life was underestimating Ronald Reagan as a political candidate so I don't want to do that."

But, regardless of who are the candidates, Shriver feels that the next President will be a Democrat.

"Go through those mills up in New Hampshire and around Massachusetts," he says. "Talk to those people."

"A husband and wife are working and they're getting $2.50 an hour. Oh, brother, their situation is really murder and they're not even in the ranks of the unemployed."

"I tell you, take anyone who's making under $3 an hour, and that's a hell of a lot of people, and add to them the number of people who are unemployed and there's a fantastically big vote there that is really mad."

SPEAKING OUT

Dreier Takes Exception To Colonial Village Mall Article

Stephen Dreier, president of Mall Merchants, Inc. has taken exception to last week's coverage in The Quincy Sun of a City Licensing Board meeting regarding the Colonial Village Mall.

Mall Merchants, Inc. is the management company for Grossman's Industrial Properties, the mall's new owners. Dreier's statement follows:

"The Quincy Sun, in last week's coverage of the Licensing Board meeting, went beyond certain statements that were made at the meeting, and gave credence to some disparaging remarks that were never actually stated or even implied.

"The management of Colonial Village was taken over by Mall Merchants, Inc., because previous management was not able to provide the financial strength or the depth of management experience available to Mall Merchants, a company related to the Grossman real estate interests."

"The concept of small stores with personal service is a sound concept but needs a more complete rounding out of merchandise and tenants to supplement the ones who are presently operating in the mall. A few larger stores run by professional, more substantial operators, would be the answer to this need. There are many good, small tenants currently operating in the mall with either unique products, lower prices, specialized services, or combinations of all three that makes shopping at these small stores more desirable than shopping at some of the larger, less personalized stores."

"A proper mix of these small stores with some of the higher traffic merchandise items that are found in some of the larger stores will make Colonial Village the kind of shopping attraction it was intended to be."

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

Can Independent Vote In Presidential Primary?

"I'm registered to vote, but I'm not a member of a political party. Can I vote in the March 2 presidential primary?" a caller from Worcester recently asked the Voter Information Phone.

"Yes, you can," the ViPhone volunteer staff member responded. "unenrolled" or "independent" voters may request the party ballot of their choice when they go to the polls next month. Requesting a party ballot is considered as a declaration of party preference, and the unenrolled voter will then be carried on the voting list in the future as a member of the party whose ballot he or she chose in the primary.

Unenrolled voters who wish to participate in the party primary and retain their independent status should request the special form available at the polls for the purpose at the time they hand in their ballots.

This question is one of many now being received by the Voter Information Phone, a statewide free public service sponsored by the League of Women Voters Lotte E. Scharfman Memorial Fund. Quincy Icemen Qualify For State Tourney Quincy's hockey team completed an uphill fight Saturday when it nipped North Quincy, 3-2, to qualify for the state tournament.

Faced with the task of winning or tying six of their last seven games to qualify, the Presidents won six in a row, including successive wins over the Suburban League's 1-2 teams.

Actually, Bob Sylvia's team would have made it even if it hadn't topped North Quincy because, with Brockton losing and being eliminated from post-season play, Quincy clinched second place.

Quincy was to wind up its regular season Wednesday at Waltham and was hoping to make it seven wins in a row and improve its tournament draw. Following the win over hard-luck North, Quincy's record was 3-4-2.

It was the second heartbreaking loss in a row for Ron Erikson's bedeviled North team. Hero was sophomore Brian Bertoni, whose hat trick in the second period overcame North's 2-0 first period lead.

Jim Moore and Mike Marks scored for the Raiders with assists for Paul Hurley, Bob Weddleton and Kevin Murphy.

Assisting on Brian Bertoni's three second period goals were brother Dennis, Bob Barry, Paul Lynch and Bill Hamill.

Brian tied older brother Dennis in scoring with 31 points each. Quincy's Frank Guest had the scoring tie just about wrapped up with 50 points.

Earlier in the week Quincy kept rolling, topping Newton North, 5-2, but Sylvia was disappointed in the Presidents' performance. The Presidents saluted it away with two goals in the final period.

Guest had two goals and an assist, Brian Bertoni a goal and an assist, Hamill a goal, Mark Giordani a goal, Dennis Bertoni, Lynch, Barry and Mike Gulizia an assist each.

North turned in one of its finest performances of the season and came within eight seconds of shocking Brockton and knocking the Boxers out of the tournament. The Brockton goalie was pulled and Jim Tuite, number two scorer in the league, scored with eight seconds left to give Brockton a 2-2 tie and keep it in the tournament running.

"It was a shame the kids didn't win, they played exceptionally well," said Coach Ron Erikson. "It was one of the best games of the year for us, and we are really disappointed not to win. I'm pleased with the effort of every player."

The Raiders had a 2-0 lead after goals by Hurley and Steve Cronin (assists for Moore, John Cooney and Bob Carmody), but Brockton scored late in the second period.

Raiders Lose Tourney Bid, Qualifier Quincy Bows

The North Quincy basketball team's gallant fight to make the Eastern Mass. tourney ended last Friday when it lost to Weymouth South, 71-61.

Bob Nolan's Raiders were faced with the unenviable task of winning their final six games to qualify after losing to Quincy. They won four of them but their last hope went out the window Friday.

Meanwhile, Quincy, which was an early tournament qualifier, suffered its third straight loss, 67-61, to Newton North and Coach Joe Amoroso was hoping the Presidents would end their losing ways with the tournament coming up next week.

North fell behind, 34-24, at the half and couldn't make up the difference.

Rich Mahoney had a big night with 20 points, Jay Nelson scored 16 and John White had 10.

Quincy had an 18-10 lead after a period but faded in the second half.

Jack Uhlar scored 18 points, John Riggs had 15 and Bob Dacey 12.

North Quincy pulled out a 41-39 win over Weymouth North earlier in the week with another outstanding defensive effort.

After, trailing, 18-10, at the end of a period, North had an outstanding second period to pull ahead, 30-28, at halftime. Both teams played a deliberate game in the second half, each scoring only 11 points.

With the score tied, 39-41, Scott Roberts hit on two foul shots, his fifth and sixth straight, to give North the win.

Paul Kelliher was the only Raider in double figures with 10 points, while Nelson had nine. Nolan also had praise for Mahoney. Despite Weymouth's height advantage, the Raiders out-rebounded the losers, 32-21, and had only nine turnovers as compared with 18 for Weymouth.

Quincy suffered its second loss in a row, bowing to Brockton, 65-59. The Presidents led, 20-18, at the end of one period but trailed, 32-27, at the half and 48-38 after three.

Amoroso praised Brockton for its performance, especially for its outstanding work off the boards.

For Quincy Uhlar had 11 points and Chuck McDermott 10, and Amoroso praised the work of McDermott and Ed Daley.

Quincy, North Matmen In Sectional Tourney

The Quincy and North Quincy wrestling teams, enjoying fine seasons in only their second year of competition, will compete in the Division One South sectional tournament Friday and Saturday at Marshfield High School.

They will be competing for the team title with 11 other schools and to qualify for the Division One state tournament at Chelmsford Feb. 27 and 28. The preliminary round of the sectionals will begin at 3 p.m. Friday and the quarterfinals will go on at 6:30. Saturday the first and second round consolation rounds and the semifinals will be held from noon to 4:30 with the final consolations and the championship finals from 6 to 10.

Carmen Mariano's Quincy grapplers last week defeated Medford, 33-13, to make their record 11-7.

Gary Oriola and Len Picot won by pins and Dan Madden, Tom Bamberry, Tim Cahill, Brian Kelly, Wayne Gardiner and Sam Gravina took decisions.

Art Fallon's North Quincy team romped over Kinde Tech, 47-18, to end its Suburban League season with a 4-4 record. The win gave the Raiders an overall mark of 8-9.

Ed Beck and Karl Knudsen remained undefeated in 17 matches with pins. It was Knudsen's 16th pin in the 17 matches. Rich Schiarizzi, Butch Montoya, Steve Ketches, Ed Evanson and Mike Nee also won by pins and Brian Donaghue decided his opponent.

Quincy earlier had defeated Stoneham, 36-27, with Lou Venturelli, Cahill, Gardiner, Mike Doherty and Gravina winning by pins while Madden won by forfeit.

North topped Foxboro, 38-25, with Beck, Knudsen, John Minukas, Evanson and Nee winning by pins and Schiarizzi and Rick Smith by decisions.

The Raiders lost to Duxbury, 33-22, with Knudsen, Evanson, Schiarizzi and Montoya winning and Beck going to a draw with Duxbury's Dan Kates.

First Ladies In Winning Season, Raiderettes Finish With 6-10 Slate

Although Barbara Webster's Quincy girls' basketball team missed out on a state tournament berth after starting the season well, it was assured of a winning record when it played undefeated Suburban League champion Cambridge Latin Tuesday.

The First Ladies, who once had a 5-1 record, dropped to 9-7 last week when they dropped a 50-48 squeaker to powerful Brockton, the league's second place team, despite one of the season's top comebacks. Quincy scored 30 points in the second half to just fall short.

Lois Malvesti had 22 points and Kelly Sparks had 14. The First Ladies played a fine defensive game.

In its previous game Quincy had defeated Brookline, 34-28, despite the absence of Miss Malvesti, their top scorer. Sparks scored 17 points and pulled down 22 rebounds, and Cindy Tozzi scored nine. Tozzi and Tricia Kussman were praised for their ball handling against Brookline's tough press.

The First Ladies had previously defeated Weymouth South, 47-36.

"I honestly feel we could have made the tournament if it wasn't for a series of injuries to key players," Miss Webster said.

"I was especially pleased with the efforts of our reserves, Fran Giovanucci, Terry Greenleaf, Rosie Maloney and Enid Bravemen, who filled in well when called upon. I'm proud of every player, they did an excellent job all year."

Sandra Colletti's North Quincy girls, who came along well after a bad start, ended their season last week with a 6-10 record after winning their finale over Weymouth South, 48-30.

The Raiderettes, who were 0-4 at one time and then won five of their next six games, were paced by Marjorie Dow with 10 points. Elaine Shea and Maryellen Meehan combined for 16 points.

Highlight of the year was a 38-34 overtime win over Quincy, avenging an earlier setback, after North had trailed at the half, 20-9.

Dow and Jean McCarthy scored the overtime points for the win. Nancy Willard had 12 points and Shea 12, while Sparks sparked the First Ladies with 14.

North Swimmers Defeat Quincy

North Quincy High laid full claim to the city swimming championship last week when the school's first boys' team defeated Quincy, 82-74, at the Lincoln-Hancock Community pool.

Last fall North's first girls' team defeated the First Ladies.

Bill Walker is coach of both North teams, while Elaine Murphy coaches both Quincy squads.

For the Raiders teams of Dave Palma, John Flate, Kevin Greene and John Lydon, and Richard Forest, John Strazzula, Arthur Bertoni and Frank Strazzula finished 1-2 in the 200-yard medley relay.

North's Tom Nee won the 200 freestyle, Dan Fowkes the 50 freestyle and Neil Quinn was second. Greene took second in the one meter dive, Mike Frank won the 100 butterfly, Frank Strazzula won the 100 freestyle and Greene took second in the 500 freestyle.

For the Presidents Alan Kenney won the 200 individual medley and the 500 freestyle. Dave Ray won the one meter dive, Scott Aved was second in the 100 butterfly and Steve Harvey was second in the 100 freestyle.

The International Red Cross is providing rescue and transportation services for the injured, established first aid and feeding stations and rushed medical and other relief supplies by air and land to remote

City Union Commends LaRaia On Appointments

The Quincy City Employees Union has commended Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia for his use of the "career merit system" in three recent appointments to high posts in the city government.

Union Chairman Felice Daru praised the mayor in a letter for his appointments of Sarah Saccone as budget director, Agatha Deschenes as purchasing agent, and John Vignoni as assistant director of City Hospital.

Miss Saccone worked in the auditor's office as an accountant since 1966, Miss Deschenes in the Purchasing Department since 1961 and Vignoni has been unit manager and central service manager at the hospital since 1971.

Said Daru:

"Each of these employees brings a wealth of experience, gained from years of service to the city, to their new positions.

"Our organization has always believed that a career merit system is preferable to appointments made on strictly political considerations.

"More of this approach is needed at all levels of government. In the Bicentennial year, it is nice to see more of government by the people."

NEWSPAPERMEN

On a busy day, thousands of stories arrive at The Globe. They come from our own reporters, writers and correspondents. They come from foreign and domestic news services and from syndicated columnists.

Unfortunately, every story can't be printed. And hard choices have to be made. Peter Stilla, Roy Prophet, Bill Meek and Patti Doten are four of the editors who have to make these choices. They're part of a team of forty-eight people who form the Morning and Evening "Copy Desk."

It's their job to evaluate news stories for newsworthiness and interest and to update everything as it's chosen. It's their job to decide whether a late breaking story is important enough to warrant resetting the front page even if the paper has gone to press.

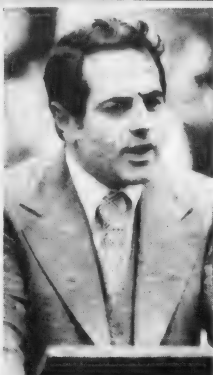

Obviously, they have an immense responsibility. One that requires an uncanny feel for news, people and issues. But when this responsibility is handled well, as it is at The Globe, the results are seen in every issue that goes to press.

Peace After Showdown?

Council, Mayor Clash Over Appointments

By TOM HENSHAW

The City Council and the LaRaia administration clashed head-on over appointments Monday night and when it was over, both sides declared peace--for the time being.

The confrontation came [unexpectedly, some councilors said] in the City Council chamber when a large number of LaRaia appointees showed up eager to spread their credentials on the table for Council inspection.

Even Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia himself appeared to defend his people.

At issue was a request by Councilor James A. Sheets, chairman of the Council's Oversight Committee, for "all resumes and information on file pertaining to all appointments made to date" to be evaluated by a subcommittee.

Sheets expressed concern about "recurring ugly rumors and new allegations concerning certain individual appointments by the Mayor."

Said John Salenius, the Mayor's administrative aide, acting as spokesman for the assembled appointees:

"For the past few days each and every one of us, as a result of the City Council's actions, has been put under public scrutiny for incompetence or wrongdoing."

"We ask members of the City Council to hear our qualifications, not because they were requested, but voluntarily."

"If there are charges made by the City Council or by an individual citizen, I want to be confronted with him tonight."

"I want the public to know that Jack Salenius is qualified and has not participated in any wrongdoing."

When it was over, after the last angry word and impassioned plea had been exchanged, both Council and appointees appeared to agree that the Council was concerned with only one appointment and that Jim Sheets was a pretty nice guy after all.

The whole thing started Feb. 2 with the receipt by the Council of a letter from former School Committeeman Paul C. Kelly condemning at least one of LaRaia's appointments and asking a Council investigation of all of them.

The appointee in question had already been released as lacking in qualifications.

The Council dropped the matter in the lap of Sheets as chairman of the oversight committee and Sheets, after a two-week study, decided "that at this time there is no justification for convening a meeting of the Oversight Committee."

A few days later, however, Sheets notified Council President Arthur Tobin that he had decided to appoint a subcommittee "to begin reviewing all certificates of appointment filed by the Mayor."

A couple of days later Sheets reversed himself again, postponing the subcommittee investigation indefinitely, explaining:

"I was informed by the Mayor's office that they had previously received some of the same information and that a police inquiry was under way. In my judgement, the Mayor's office acted quickly and properly."

"I have been informed by the Chief of Police [Francis Finn] that he does not believe the Oversight Committee should be involved in an inquiry while a police investigation is ongoing."

The identity of the appointee under investigation has never been made public and, unfortunately, not much attention was given to another Sheets statement which said:

"This action [the investigation] is necessary not only to provide the Council with information it should have but also to protect the many good appointments made by the mayor."

33% Turnout Seen Here For Presidential Primary

Four years ago, voters of Quincy helped to start Sen. George McGovern [D-SD] off to the Democratic presidential nomination with a rousing margin over a dozen other candidates in the Massachusetts primary.

And the city's Republican voters gave President Richard M. Nixon a big boost toward a second term in the White House when they went for him by a 6-1 margin over challenger Rep. Paul McCloskey [R-Calif.].

Next Tuesday they'll have another chance to give their blessings to a pair of presidential hopefuls when more than 16,000 of them are expected to go to the polls in another primary.

City Clerk John Gillis estimates that about 33 per cent of Quincy's 49,872 registered voters will cast ballots, a relatively high ratio for a primary largely because there are 12 candidates on the Democratic ballot.

Democrats, in order of appearance on the preferential list, are:

Robert L. Kelleher, George C. Wallace, Ellen McCormack, Terry Sanford, Lloyd Bentsen, Fred R. Harris, Milton J. Shapp, Birch Bayh, Jimmy Carter, R. Sargent Shriver, Henry M. Jackson and Morris K. Udall.

Sanford, former governor of North Carolina, and Bentsen, senator from Texas, have announced their withdrawals from the contest but too late to have their names removed from the ballot.

On the Republican ballot, the contest is between President Gerald R. Ford and former California Gov. Ronald W. Reagan.

A third ballot will be available for the first time to American Party voters but no names are listed in the presidential preference column.

There are 48,872 registered voters eligible to vote in the primary, 28,983 Democrats, 8,015 Republicans and 27 American Party members; 12,867 have listed themselves as Independents.

Wallace's Top Wish:

'To Instill Confidence In The People'

By HENRY BOSWORTH and TOM HENSHAW

It was late in the afternoon in a quiet corner of The Quincy Sun office and George Corley Wallace, pausing for a moment between speaking stops on the campaign trail, was in a reflective mood.

"If you had the power to change one thing in this country," he was asked, "what would it be?"

Wallace, the old warhorse from Alabama, sat in his wheelchair and closed his eyes and thought for a long moment.

"I would like to have power to instill confidence in the people of this country," he said at last. "Some of them have just about lost it, you know."

"If I could help to motivate a spiritual revival in this country...bring back some of the old fashioned morality, the values...your word is your bond,

Survival Lists Services

Survival, Inc., the multi-faceted drug and youth program based in Quincy and serving the South Shore, announced its service figures for 1975.

Robert Hassey, executive director, reports:

Eighty-eight persons were involved in long-term residential treatment at the Joseph H. Whiteman House and 139 received out-patient counseling at the agency's Counseling Center.

The agency sponsored Host Homes program, a short-term foster care project operating with the aid of trained volunteer families for troubled adolescents, services 63 persons during the year.

Survival's Crisis Line [471-7100], the only 24-hour service in the area received more than 6,300 calls on many different problems.

The agency provided speakers to 125 different groups of more than 5,000 persons.

"Despite budget cuts at the state level and temporary service curtailments caused by these cuts during the year, roughly the same number of persons used our services this year as last," Hassey said. In addition, Host Homes serviced clients for the first time. To get through this year financially and maintain services has been very difficult, but we continue to offer a variety of alternative services to area youth and their families at absolutely no cost."

"It is a commitment that the appointments" who stormed the Council Chamber Monday night where the Council was meeting, not as the City Council, but as the Ordinance and Public Works Committees. Both meetings were brief.

Members of the Council were plainly irritated, mostly by the timing of the whole thing.

Notification of the meeting was sent out by Mayor LaRaia during the day Monday and Councillor Warren A. Powers said: "The first indication I had of it was when a motor policeman handed me the letter this afternoon."

Aware of what was coming, Sheets sought to meet it head on, absorbing some of the blow with placating words.

"You are sensitive," he said, "to the mission of responsibility to the citizenship of the city. You are sensitive because you are human beings and you have been hurt. You are here to protect your integrity."

"Well, Jim Sheets also has integrity. Tuesday night I put my integrity on the line."

"I said to all of you [councillors] that I didn't believe there was any justification to call a meeting of the Oversight Committee. I said that because I believed in my heart that it was right."

"Four or five days later I decided it was necessary to hold an oversight committee meeting because I learned information to the contrary, information I was not aware of before."

"Do you know how I found out about it? Someone called me on the phone and said: 'Sheets, dammit, you do nothing but cover up!' Then he told me what some people in this room have known for days."

"To protect my integrity I had the responsibility to call a meeting of the Oversight subcommittee."

"If I had it to do over, I would have done the same thing."

"I did not say we were interested in reviewing all the appointments. I asked all the information on all the appointments because if I asked for it on only one person then everyone would know who it was."

"I had a responsibility to that individual. I have no right to make his name public. I was obliged to protect that individual. If it was you or anyone else I'd do the same thing."

"It may not have been the politically wise or expedient thing to do. I see people looking with anger and hatred and it hurts. But I'd do it again and again and again."

Said Salenius in an opening statement:

"As Mr. Sheets pointed out last Tuesday, it is not for the Oversight Committee to review appointments."

"The Oversight Committee is not the proper vehicle for charges made by letter or otherwise. There are proper channels for this."

"There was a complaint made last week that went to the proper authority, not the City Council. We hope this will be handled properly. Any other complaints we receive will be handled in the same way."

"There are no coverups in the LaRaia administration. We campaigned on an open administration. We will not go back on that pledge."

"I know of no previous administration whose appointees have been called on to bare their souls to the City Council or the public. But we are here tonight, not only because Mayor LaRaia feels we should but because we feel that way."

Said Councillor Leo J. Kelly: "The problem is one of communication. If communication was open between the administration and the City Council then Mr. Sheets would not have been placed in position to have to make his statement on Saturday."

Said Councillor Powers:

"Councillor Sheets' did not make a snap judgement on this. He got all the information together and decided we were not going to have a meeting. This decision was not made casually disregarding other people."

"You object to an oversight committee meeting and yet you create a meeting tonight. The proper authorities have it now, why are we having this meeting?"

"It appears that we have set up an adversary relationship. We've got to get together and run the city. We can't be haggling and hassling all the time."

Throughout the debate, Mayor LaRaia stood in the door between the Mayor's office and the Council Chamber with his arms folded, listening. Salenius called him to center stage. Said Mayor LaRaia:

"In my inaugural speech I brought out the openness of government. I intend to pursue

No Weight Watchers Then

It Was Quite Fashionable To Be Plump In Martha's, Abigail's Day

"It was fashionable to be plump in Martha Washington's day," according to Elaine Robin, director of Weight Watchers in Eastern Massachusetts and Rhode Island, whose Bicentennial research has uncovered many weighty facts on the subject.

What we consider "overweight" today was perfectly proper in Revolutionary days. Plumpness may have been desirable as a status symbol of the good life.

Although Martha Washington's excess weight did not become apparent until her later years, she was in fact food-conscious for most of her life. She was always concerned that General George Washington and his staff had enough to eat. Completely aware of the food shortage at Valley Forge, Martha would appear from time to time in a coach laden with meats, poultry, puddings, cakes, and the good spirits to go with them.

Later, during the presidency, her state dinners left nothing to be desired. She was called "Lady" Washington in recognition of her gracious and somewhat sumptuous way of life.

Abigail Adams, wife of second President John Adams, was our first "no-nonsense" First Lady, even going so far as to hang the family wash in the huge East Room of the brand new White House. She liked good New England food and was disappointed on moving into the White House when she found that the kitchen was not equipped to prepare a full turkey dinner on Thanksgiving.

But if you were to ask a young lady of fashion in the early 1800's who she would like to be, or whom she admired most, she would undoubtedly say Dolley [not Dolly] Madison, or "Queen Dolley," as she was known to the Washington society over which she ruled for many years.

"She was," wrote Washington Irving, "a fine, portly, buxom dame who had a smile and a pleasant word for everyone."

Just out of her teens she was pursued by Aaron Burr. She was official White House hostess for Thomas Jefferson for two terms until she came to rule the White House on her own as wife of President James Madison.

One historian wrote: "In the entire history of First Ladyhood until the time of Jacqueline Kennedy, nobody, but nobody has done the job with such flair and such success as Dolley."

When Dolley gave a party, few if any of the lady guests stinted in filling their plates. Why should they? Each wanted to look as portly and buxom as her hostess.

Many of our early male patriots carried well-rounded figures. Benjamin Franklin was outstanding in this respect. The fact that a certain type of pot-bellied stove is called a "Franklin" is a tribute to his role as inventor. It has no bearing on the fact that Ben, as ambassador to the Royal Court of France, cultivated his love of haute cuisine, thrived on it...and reflected it.

Over the years a change in figure fashions evolved. The status attached to the overfed look disappear completely. Our First Ladies today think twice before they overindulge in certain foods, particularly those containing carbohydrates and fats...and their slim figures show it.

"In our Bicentennial research," Mrs. Robin said, "we find that over the last 200 years our eating habits have changed. Our modern First Ladies are Weight Watchers in spirit. They are models for women everywhere."

Women's Commission Discusses Planned Events With Mayor LaRaia

The Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women met recently at the home of Adrienne Clark, 1421 Quincy Shore Drive, Merry Mount to discuss upcoming events with Mayor Joseph LaRaia and to explain the structure of the commission.

Chairwoman Alicia Coletti presented the various task forces into which the commission is divided. The Education Task Force, led by Chris Morrison and Carol Mahoney, is planning a Career Opportunities Evening for junior high students. Kathy Roberts, Patricia Toland and Jane Ford are also working on this event. Jeanne Evans is soon to publish a booklet on Human Services for Preschoolers.

The Employment Task Force, chaired by Mary Weaver, is surveying employment opportunities for women in Quincy. Rhonda Merrill, Carol Leman, and Deborah Merrill are working on this force and planning an employment workshop to be held in the Spring.

Adrienne Clark is leading the Community Services for Women. Trudy Buckley, Rose Toye, Mary Vallier, Marilyn LeBlanc, Eleanor Tanofsky and Eunice Allman are working on this force to publish a directory of services for women in Quincy.

Workshops for Women is the fourth task force and this is headed by Ann Aronson. Workshops on employment, alcoholism and other subjects are being planned by Kathy O'Donnell, Shirley Dunbar, and Joan Sullivan.

Mayor LaRaia presented his two women appointments to the Commission at this meeting. The Commission congratulated him on appointing Agnes Deschesnes as purchasing agent and Sarah Saccone as budget director.

Since the purpose of the Commission is to "address itself to the needs of women and encourage them to participate in the activities of the city and to further women's roles in shaping the life of the city," the Commission members said they "are very pleased to see two such qualified women in important city positions."

SKELETAL REMAINS are all that are left of the Squantum Yacht Club following Sunday's $250,000 blaze.

After '200,000 Blaze

Squantum Yacht Club Members Launch Rebuilding Plans

Members of the Squantum Yacht Club were confronted this week with the problem of replacing a $200,000 clubhouse destroyed by fire out of $44,000 in insurance money and a $22,000 building fund.

The building, which stuck out into Quincy Bay on pilings from Wollaston Beach, was leveled by a fire that raged through it early Sunday morning.

At first the blaze was ruled suspicious because, said Fire Chief Edward Barry, "it was at such an advanced stage when it was discovered at 5:30 a.m." He said his department and state fire marshals would investigate.

Later, however, it was ruled that faulty wiring was the cause of the fire and firefighters who fought the blaze reported that the gate on the walkway to the club was locked, ruling out vandalism.

Commodore Jack White said members plan to rebuild and he called a meeting of members for Sunday at 2 p.m. in the Quincy Yacht Club in Houghs Neck to lay preliminary plans.

He said the Wollaston Yacht Club, a few hundred feet down the beach, has offered to let Squantum members use its docks this summer.

LaRaia Hopes To Expand Civil Defense

Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia announces he intends to increase the utilization of the city's volunteers in the city because "of the tremendous work these people have done in the past."

Without outlining specific plans, Mayor LaRaia said he has been impressed with the work of the several volunteer groups under Civil Defense. Because of their work in the past, he said he would like to see the duties and responsibilities of Civil Defense expanded.

"It is reassuring to me to see so many people living in the city who want to volunteer their services," LaRaia said. "I believe if they want to help, they should be allowed to help."

Under Civil Defense Director

Kenneth Walsh, volunteer services include the Underwater Recovery Team, the Auxiliary Police Department, the Communications Division and the Auxiliary Fire Department.

The Mayor said he plans to schedule a meeting with Walsh, Police Chief Francis Finn and Fire Chief Edward Barry to discuss possibilities of expanding the existing programs.

Trailer Park A 'Foot In The Door'

If the Navy has its way, a trailer park will be established at Squantum Gardens whether Quincy likes it or not.

Quincy doesn't like it and is trying to fight the invasion of mobile homes. Frankly, this is one battle in which we would like to see the Navy torpedoed.

Although Navy officials note that the proposed trailer park would have perhaps only 12 and no more than 24 mobile homes in it, a trailer park is still a trailer park like a thorn is still a thorn.

Plans are to demolish a reported 66 units of Navy housing on land that was once part of the Squantum Naval Air Station.

These units, according to the Navy, were built on marine clay and are settling. They are going to be torn down regardless of whether the trailer park becomes a reality.

There are 126 units in the area all together. The remaining 56 stand on firm ground and will be refurbished according to the Navy.

The area is now zoned Residence B which forbids a trailer park under Quincy's city ordinances.

But the Navy is looking for a legal loophole to steam through. It is scrutinizing the wording of the land deed to the federal government in hopes of zig-zagging around the city ordinance.

The mobile homes, according to the Navy, are those belonging to Navy families. And officials stress that there would be only 12 to 24 homes placed there.

But we have a question: if they are going to knock down 66 units, isn't it possible this could eventually bring more trailers?

City Council President Arthur Tobin and Ward 6 Councillor Dennis Harrington launched the opposition and have been joined by Mayor Joseph LaRaia.

Mayor LaRaia has written to Congressman James Burke seeking his aid in scuttling the proposed trailer park. He has also suggested that it be located at the South Weymouth Naval Air Station instead.

Mayor LaRaia wants to buy the land from the Navy but that seems unlikely. Mayor Walter Hannon tried to get it before him but could not.

We have nothing against the Navy but a trailer park will do nothing for Quincy. People who live in mobile homes are not interested in the community where they park.

But one of our main objections is that if the plan materializes, this is "a foot in the door", for trailer parks.

If the Navy should establish and later abandon this one, private owners might take over.

It would also be used as an argument for other trailer parks in the city.

The last thing Quincy needs now is a trailer park. And it opens the door to too many future problems.

Quincy should fight this one all the way.

THUMBNAIL THOUGHTS—

By K.A. Smith

Whether to raise your child as an athlete or thespian may be indicated when New Hampshire Republicans pick between an ex-grinder and an ex-actor.

The glut of pretenders in the Massachusetts presidential primary reminds us of a few years back when similar numbers fought for top state office at Democratic primary conventions.

An American secretary of war once derided spying by saying gentlemen don't read other people's mail. Then came Pearl Harbor.

An irony is that Abraham Lincoln's birthday is still observed but it gets less notice than the holiday for Dr. Martin Luther King.

A fracture incurred by slipping on your kid's rollerskates is just as bad as an expensive ski fracture, but not as glamorous.

'84,325 To Help Create Jobs

Congressman James A. Burke announces the Economic Development Administration has awarded a $84,325 grant to the City of Quincy.

The funds will be used for staffing to conduct a program of planning for diversified growth and to create jobs for workers who have become unemployed by the closing of the Boston

Naval Shipyard, and by cutbacks in industrial production.

The City of Quincy will contribute $87,000 toward that goal, bringing the total amount to $171,325.

Burke expressed optimism this would return workers to productive, private-sector jobs at a more rapid pace than could otherwise have been expected.

Wallace: 'I'm SUNBEAMS

No Racist'

honesty, integrity....people long for some of that.

"I think this modern world is missing those old fashioned values on the part of many of those in charge.

"It happened in the last 20 years. It's one reason why you find so many young people today who want to watch old films, listen to old music. It's one reason why religious crusades have bigger attendance than ever before."

And if he were president?

"No president could bring that back but he could try to live the kind of life that would exemplify it...."

The mood was lost and it was back to the daily business of selling the governor of Alabama as a candidate for the presidency.

Is he a racist?

"No, Although that is the viewpoint taken by a great portion of the media. The things we did [in Alabama in the 1950's and 60's] were not aimed at black people. They were aimed at big government."

"We were against big government taking over matters that should be handled at a local level. We acted vigorously against federal encroachment against the rights of domestic institutions. You have that problem in Massachusetts."

"If I had been a racist I would never have gotten a black vote in my career and I can show you the statistics that I've got them."

How well does he expect to do in Tuesday's primary in Massachusetts?

"I expect to do better than I did in '72 when I got 7 per cent of the vote. It would be hard to estimate but I believe I'll get an appreciable vote. A good vote for George Wallace would set the tone for the rest of the campaign."

Would he accept a vice presidential nomination?

"No, I talk a lot about getting government out of our lives. I'm not hunting for a government job on any ticket."

Would he encourage American Party voters to write his name in on their ballot?

"I wouldn't encourage anything like that."

"I'm running as a Democrat in the primaries. I'm more interested in making the Democratic party the party of the people again instead of the party of that group that had it in 1972."

"I feel we are going to have a party platform acceptable to myself and to the great middle class. You'll notice other candidates have come around to what I was saying a long time ago."

Is he a liberal or a conservative?

"I think of myself as a middle of the roader."

"I don't like to pin labels on people. The very people who are cheering me in Massachusetts now have been called liberals in the past. Either I'm liberal in their context now or they're conservatives. I don't think I'm either one."

"I'm a true liberal maybe in the sense that I want less government in my life. A liberal now is one who wants more government regimentation and control in life but I don't think that's being very liberal."

Is his health up to being president?

"I've had rough campaigns. I've been to Europe. I've been examined a lot of times. I'm stronger physically in the upper

We're In The Truman Library

By HENRY BOSWORTH

In recent weeks a few anonymous callers have told me where I could put my column.

So, it should come as a surprise to them [it was to me] that one of them is on display in the Harry Truman Library in Independence, Mo.

It was written quite a while ago, though, when I was with The Boston Traveler. You might remember "Inside South Shore".

I wrote it in 1964 after Richard Sullivan of Braintree attended the dedication of a set of $10,000 electronic carillons donated to the library by the AMVETS.

Sullivan was then National PR officer for the AMVETS. He now has his own PR firm and handles, among others, the state American Legion and Paragon Park. Sullivan also has emceed shows for Bob Hope. He came by the other day to tell me the column was in the Truman Library.

The column told of the many historic documents in the Truman Library and Sullivan's meeting with the former President who was then going on 80.

Sullivan also discovered that Quincy-born President John Adams is prominently remembered in the Truman Library.

Adams inaugural address is there. And so is a fire place mantel removed from the State Dining Room during Truman's renovation of the White House. It has the now famed inscription written by the second President:

"I Pray Heaven to Bestow the Best of Blessings on This House and All that shall hereafter Inhabit it. May none but Honest and Wise Men ever rule under This Roof."

The mantel was in Missouri long before Nixon was in the White House.

SPEAKING OF ADAMS, if you haven't been watching The Adams Chronicles on Chs. 2 and 44, you really are missing a television treat.

It traces four generations of the famed Adams family. And watching the episodes so far, you come to the conclusion that John Adams' contributions in shaping the nation's destiny have been sorely overlooked until now. The series is fascinating.

Unfortunately, for Quincy at least, Braintree through the episodes thus far, has been getting all the free plugs. Quincy, of course, was then Braintree. But in upcoming episodes, Quincy should be getting its share as Braintree's north precinct separated to become Quincy.

I don't think any of the actual filming was done in Quincy. This led to one slight boo-boo. The series showed the Adams farmhouse with shingles on it, instead of clapboards.

The series should be a prize winner.

NORTH QUINCY'S Ken Coleman, former TV voice of the Red Sox, will again handle the world champion Cincinnati Reds this season. His TV telecast partner will be all-time Dodger great, Pee Wee Reese. Ken, who got his break at Quincy's WJDA, is also expected to do the radio broadcasts of the Ohio State football games next fall.

INCIDENTALLY, Ken's son, Casey, who looks and sounds like his dad, is following in his footsteps. He has filled in on several occasions for host Steve Fredericks on the WMEX sports talk show.

INSIDERS now think Hugo Fabrizio will not get the Quincy Housing Authority board appointment he has been reported in line for. Mayor LaRaia reportedly now has someone else in mind.

REPORTS CONTINUE To circulate that Quincy District Court Clerk Dennis Ryan will run for Norfolk County district attorney against incumbent William Delahunt. But those close to Ryan are betting he won't toss his hat in.

Ryan, who is quite popular around the county, would be a formidable challenger. But close sources doubt that: he really wants to get involved in the wear and tear of county-wide campaign at this stage of his life. Ryan, incidentally, at this writing is a patient at Quincy City Hospital. He has bronchial pneumonia brought on by the flu.

JULIE COSTE has a proud possession: Henry Kissinger's autograph. The seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Coste of 58 River St., Quincy Point, got it during the recent Boston Bruins hockey game attended by Kissinger.

Julie, who was at the game with members of her family, merely walked up to Kissinger [although the Secret Service kept close watch] and got him to autograph her hockey program. And showed it off the next day at "show and tell" at the Pollard School where she is a first grader.

HERE'S ONE: Patrick McCarthy of Randolph, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the 11th district, was a little non-plussed during the EPA hearing on the Nut Island sewage plant at Faneuil Hall, Boston.

When he got up to speak, about 200 people got up and walked out. It wasn't until later he learned the 200 were Houghs Neck residents who had gone to the hearing by bus. The charter on their buses was about to go into overtime, so they left.

New X-Ray Building
For Quincy Hospital

By TOM HENSHAW

The City Council's Finance Committee approved a $500,000 loan order for a proposed new X-ray building at Quincy City Hospital.

It was the third of four major projects contained in Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa's $2.9 million capital outlay program.

Already approved by the Council were plans for a $1,486,000 city incinerator and a $300,000 gym for North Quincy High School. The fourth project, a $150,000 branch library in North Quincy, was still before the Finance Committee.

Meanwhile, the Quincy Taxpayers Association attacked the Mayor's entire capital outlay program in its Newsletter but Della Chiesa brushed off the criticism.

Said the Mayor of QTA Executive Director George Yarrington: "During the seven years I have been Mayor he has been absolutely no help to me in keeping the tax rate down."

RINK FOR ST. MORITZ

MDC Commissioner Robert Murphy toured the St. Moritz area of West Quincy and said he thought it would be a great place for an artificial ice rink.

"Such a facility is utterly justified," he said. "There are tremendous possibilities here. It certainly has magnificent natural accoutrements."

Showing him around were Mayor Della Chiesa, State Reps. James R. McIntyre, Charles L. Shea and Joseph E. Brett, and City Councillor George B. McDonald.

$25 Savings Bond Prize

Julie McGowan Wins 'Proud To Be Quincy Citizen' Contest

By CATHY CONLEY

"I'm proud to be a citizen of Quincy. It's a city with strong ties to the past and a bright future."

With these lines, Julie McGowan, 12, closed her prize-winning essay for the "Young Ideas" section of The Quincy Sun. She received a $25 savings bond from North Quincy Business and Professional Association who sponsored the contest. The presentation was made by John Horrigan of Doran and Horrigan, association president.

Julie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald McGowan of 31 Wollaston Ave., and a sixth grade student at Beechwood Knoll School. Her pride in Quincy dates back three generations. Her grandmother came here as a bride, and she and her mother have been lifelong residents. Here is her prize-winning essay:

I'M PROUD TO BE FROM QUINCY

I am proud to have been born here in Quincy, Mass., knowing that many important people who helped to form our country were also born here. The first person that comes to my mind is John Adams. John Adams was born in Braintree, now known as Quincy. He was a patriot that helped to form the Declaration of Independence, while a member of the continental congress. John Hancock, another Quincy native, also was a member of the congress. Several years later John Adams, our second president's son, became our sixth president.

The need of Quincy's granite soon led to the building of the first railroad of the United States.

Quincy residents answered the call to duty in war one and two. Many Quincy men and women served their country in the Armed Forces of the United States. Some gave their lives in order that we could remain a free people. Those that did not fight with guns fought the enemy by building battleships and destroyers at the Fore River Shipyard located in Quincy.

Quincy today has many recreational areas, businesses, hospitals, nursing homes and schools which continue to serve the people in many ways.

I am proud to be a citizen of Quincy. It's a city with strong ties to the past and a bright future. I hope to serve my city Quincy in many ways and also try to be a useful citizen.

400 Youngsters In Bowlathon To Strike Out Muscular Dystrophy

Some 400 young Quincy bowlers will be rolling strikes and spares in the first annual bowlathon to "strike out muscular dystrophy" March 13 at Wollaston Boulevard Bowladrome and Wonderbowl in Quincy.

Right now the youngsters are signing up sponsors who will donate one penny to neuromuscular research and patient services in southern Massachusetts for each pin knocked down in three strings during the bowlathon.

The Wollaston Boulevard Bowladrome, managed by Joel Southworth, has been raising funds for muscular dystrophy for the past three years through its involvement with the TV promotion "Match the Stars".

Wollaston also hosts the Muscular Dystrophy Association's bowling league for cripple children and adults who bowl Sunday mornings during the winter through the use of special chutes attached to wheel chairs.

The following leagues at Wollaston will be involved in the Bowlathon: Wollaston Boulevard Youth League, Joel Southworth; Koch Club Termites and Seniors, Mrs. Marilyn Nestor; Quincy Little Loop, Joe Gildea; and St. Brendan's Youth League, John Biagiotti.

Helen Meade, a veteran MD fund-raiser, is organizing the youngsters at Quincy Wonderbowl, which had contributed to the MDA drives in the past through adult participation in "Match the Stars".

Inquest Resumes Friday Election Worker Testifies To Noise Distraction

As the inquest into the controversial Quincy city election of last Nov. 4, droned on toward a recess late Monday afternoon, Judge Albert L. Kramer asked the question again:

"Why did five errors [involving blocks of 50 votes] all read the same way?"

After two afternoons [Thursday and Monday] of testimony from City Clerk John Gillis and three election workers, Judge Kramer's inquest appeared to be no closer to an answer to the question.

The switch of the blocks of 50 votes in five separate precincts turned an apparent victory by Mayor Walter J. Hannon into a defeat at the hands of Joseph J. LaRaia by a margin of 483 votes.

About the only hard news to come out of the opening sessions of the inquest was that the mistake in Ward 1, Precinct 1 occurred when Mrs. Nancy M. Burke was reading figures to Mrs. Marilyn Flynn.

All evidence indicated that it was an honest error.

Mrs. Burke said the error might have occurred because she was distracted by outsiders seeking vote totals while she and Mrs. Flynn were at work in the Merrymount School.

"Some outsiders came right up to the table," she testified. "They were courteous but anxious. I told some of them to keep quiet. It was terribly distracting."

She said that she had been working at the polling place since about 8 a.m. and "by 10 o'clock at night things were beginning to run together. I was tired. My eyes were tired."

Mrs. Burke said she had worked as an inspector at polling places for about 12 years and was acting as a clerk for the first time in last November's election when the regular clerk called in sick.

"I didn't want to," she said. "I threatened to go home. But I figured it was my civic duty."

She said she was nervous in the new job -- "I wanted everything to tally" -- but she didn't see anything suspicious.

"There seemed to be a lot of extra confusion," she added, "but it was probably normal. I may have thought there was because I was a novice."

Mrs. Burke suggested that future mistakes might be avoided if the person who wrote down the figures were to call them back to the reader, a practice that was not followed last Nov. 4.

She also said the city "ought to bring in a fresh crew at 8 o'clock at night. It would make a big difference."

Mrs. Flynn too complained about interruptions.

"Sometimes people would interrupt the count," she said. "That could have caused an entry to be made under the wrong name."

She was shown a total vote sheet from Ward 1 Precinct 1 and asked who entered the figure 50 beside the name of Walter J. Hannon.

"I think I did," she said.

She added that the only person who read figures to her from the tally sheet was Mrs. Burke. The tally sheet credited the 50 votes to LaRaia.

Raymond W. Morse, who testified that he had been a warden in Quincy elections for at least 25 years, said he had no information on how the mistake occurred.

"I don't know who made the entry," he said. "I didn't have anything to do with entering the figures. I never saw the tally sheet or the total vote sheet that night."

The inquest will continue Friday with two more workers from Ward 1 Precinct 1 at the Merrymount School scheduled to testify.

Wallace Says Health Good

part of my body than I've ever been before. Remember Roosevelt was elected four times in a wheel chair.

"We're not trying to elect an acrobat, anyway. If we were electing acrobats I wouldn't qualify."

"I don't dwell on my disability. I don't want anyone to vote for me because I paid a high price for my involvement in the political system. But no one should vote against me because I got shot."

"I'm in good health. If I was not or if it affected my health to run, I wouldn't run. It would be unfair to the public, to my family, to myself. I think it's good for me frankly. I spend more time on statecraft than ceremonial matters and I get more done."

Is he satisfied that we know all we should about the attempt to kill him in 1972?

"I think there's more to it than is known. But that's just a feeling. I have no proof. And I've been attacked by innuendo and implication so much that I certainly am not going to do that in this case."

"I feel the same way about the Kennedy- and King shootings. I feel it just wasn't a loner involved. There's not necessarily a link between them but there was not just one man involved."

One more question, governor. "Yes?"

When was the last time you were asked a new question?

"One of your questions was new."

Which one? "That one."

And with that, Wallace collected his Quincy coordinator, Atty. Maurice Horrigan, and they were off to a Wallace rally at the Strand Theater.

Wallace Tells Quincy Lions:

'Ahead Of Others On The Issues'

By TOM BRADY

Gov. Wallace attended the Quincy Lions Club luncheon meeting at Dutton's Restaurant on Sea St., Tuesday and told club members and guests he isn't as radical as many people make him out to be.

He ticked off a list of issues on which, he said, he was ahead of all the other candidates.

Ten years ago, Wallace said, he was complaining that the wealthy get away without paying their fair share of taxes.

"Why should the Ford Foundation, with billions of dollars, or the Rockefeller Foundation with several hundred millions, get tax breaks because they gave a little to charity?" Wallace asked.

He said he was warning America about crime in the streets long before any of the other candidates.

"I said 10 years ago, if you don't get a handle on this you won't be able to walk the street or to send your wife on the rapid transit. They [criminals] used to be afraid of the constabulary, now they spit at them. Well, that's got to go in this country."

Gov. Wallace didn't discuss forced school integration, the issue that brought him into the national spotlight until the end of his speech. When he did, he was clear and definite.

"I believe in freedom of choice. Let the people go where they want to go and don't force them to go where they don't want to go. It's polarizing people and I'm the only one who has opposed that and every one of them [the other candidates] supported it in congress."

Wallace referred to Sen. Henry Jackson's statements that busing has been a mistake and said "he ought to know, he helped to start it down there."

Wallace attacked big government and the federal bureaucracy that he has railed so long against, complaining about useless and repetitive jobs and the bureaucrats, "many of whom have never worked a day in their lives."

"If you go to Washington, you can't even do business without the assistant to the assistant's assistant. The first thing they want to do is write guidelines."

His opponents in the Democratic nomination quest, were credited with "taxing the middle class to death."

"They were talking about social matters. That's all they had on their minds, social experimentation. They've tried to solve every kind of problem in this country by taxing the middle class to death."

For a moment during his speech, Wallace compared himself to Paul Revere spreading the message that the British were coming and mixed it with a remembrance of a Wallace slogan of by-gone campaign, "Let's send a message to Washington."

"I think a vote for George Wallace will give them a message," Wallace said, "Why not give them a good message: 'the people are coming.'"

'It Is Time For You To Say One Appointment Was Bad'

this policy. I asked for scrutiny of the appointments I made. I welcome it.

"But this has overextended itself in such a way that all these people have come under a cloud of suspicion.

"If you are going to scrutinize the people here, why leave it here? Why not all the people who work for the city. I feel there are political overtones to what has been going on in the past two weeks.

"There is some legitimate concern but I feel that there are people behind the scene creating a witch hunt. I feel they are using the City Council.

"The antagonism hasn't come from these people here. They have not gone to the press. As mayor I want to get on to the problems of the city. I have no time to get into a dialogue in the newspapers.

"I hope the exchange this evening will resolve the questions that the City Council and these people have."

Councillor John J. Lydon Jr. agreed that there were political overtones to the controversy but "you will not accomplish anything by coming up here and giving your qualifications. We're not saying you're not qualified.

"Please don't be used, and don't let us be used."

Said Councillor Dennis E. Harrington to Mayor LaRaia:

"It is time for you as Mayor to say, 'One of my appointments was bad and he is under investigation. I don't think this should be used to cover up one bad appointment.

"That should solve the problem for everyone here. None of them are going to be investigated. There are no charges against any one of them.

"It is your mistake. Once it is recognized that you made one bad appointment and he is gone, that should be the end of it."

LA RAIA: "The fellow referred to resigned because he did not have the qualifications for the office. Anything beyond that I had no knowledge."

HARRINGTON: "The

appointment was a gross mistake."

LA RAIA: "It's okay to be a Monday morning quarterback and see gross mistakes. You can do that easily."

Salenius began calling the appointees forward one by one to list their qualifications. City Solicitor Thomas Williams had gotten through listing his when Councillor John J. Quinn interrupted.

"It's not necessary to continue," he said. "You don't have to be approved by the City Council. You'll be measured by your actions, not your qualifications. I know Tom well. He's a fine appointment. He doesn't have to go through the litany.

"We're all employed by the city of Quincy. If we can't walk down the street and smile at each other and say, 'Hi, Pat.' My goodness, what are we coming to?" The parade of qualifications continued through Pasquale DiStefano, director of Veterans Services; James P. Papile, city assessor; Arthur Casey, administrative assistant; and Robert Tweedy, interim director of the Council on Aging, who said:

"As the oldest member of the group I'd like to see this thing put to bed tonight."

For the first time, there was general agreement between the City Council and the appointees.

"It was not our purpose to embarrass or intimidate the Council," said Salenius, by way of smoothing any remaining ruffled feathers.

"I see people smiling out there," said Councillor Quinn, looking across the rail that separates the Council from the appointees in the spectator section of the Chamber.

Presidents In E-Mass Tourney First Time In 11 Years

By TOM SULLIVAN

Quincy's basketball team played its first Eastern Mass. Tournament game in 11 years Tuesday against Braintree and, if they won, the Presidents will meet one of the top-seeded teams, Duxbury [19-1] Friday at 7 p.m. at Taunton High School.

Coach Joe Amoroso, who took the Presidents to the tournament in his third year as head coach, credited balance and the performances of the reserves for the Presidents' success.

Quincy finished up last week with a 16-5 record [13-5 and second place in the Suburban League and snapped a three-game losing streak to win its final two games with ease as the Presidents prepped for the tournament.]

"Balance was the key as all 12 of our players fit into our program nicely," Amoroso said. "During the first half of the season the bench people came through consistently and gave us a big lift as we got off to a fine start. All worked the pressure defense perfectly and the teamwork was outstanding."

Quincy's top scorers were 6-4 forward John Riggs, who averaged more than 17 points a game, and 6-6 junior center Jack Uhlar, who averaged better than 15 points.

Bob Dacey, the other starting forward, was also a good scorer and Amoroso had two of the league's best guards in Ed Daley and Steve Connolly.

Mike Lamie, Kevin Donovan and Bob Silva came in on many occasions to help the cause and Donovan started several games. Other reserves who did their part were Chuck McDermott, Mike Kennedy, Mike Connell and Lyle Morrison.

Amoroso promoted three of the top junior varsity players, Roger Kvam, John Connolly and Brian Burke, for the last few games and they are on the tournament squad.

Burke averaged 15 points a game for the jayvees and Kvam was another fine scorer who sank the winning basket in overtime last week to give Mike Saniak's junior varsity a 63-61 win over Cambridge Latin to finish up with a 13-8 record.

Quincy handed Latin its 62nd straight defeat, 78-43, in its final game as Amoroso was able to give his entire squad plenty of service. All 15 players saw action and everyone scored.

Uhlar had 15 points, Steve Connolly 12 and Lamie 10.

The previous night Quincy had bombed Xavier, 87-41, in a non-league game as Amoroso again used everyone and 14 of 15 scored.

Uhlar scored 17 points, Riggs 15 and Dacey 11.

Uhlar and Riggs were named to the Suburban League first all-star team and Dacey made the third team. All played Saturday for the all-star squad against league champion Rindge Tech.

Amoroso was selected to coach the all-stars, who lost, 84-66. Uhlar scored 10 points and each of the others played well.

Raiders Final Victory Farewell Gift To Nolan

The North Quincy basketball team was unable to give retiring coach Bob Nolan another Eastern Mass. tournament team but the Raiders gave him a cherished farewell gift last week with an 88-78 win over Rindge Tech's Suburban League champions in the season's final game.

Nolan, known to most of his friends and colleagues as "Knobby," had thought about retiring early in the season but didn't make it official until the final game.

One of the reasons for Nolan's decision was the fact the North gym will be torn down when the high school is renovated. The Raiders are due to play at the Quincy Vo-Tech gym next year.

Bob steps down after 11 seasons as North's head coach, leaving a coaching career that goes back to 1955. "I think 21 years are enough, I want to spend more time with my family (wife Rosemary and five children). Kids grow up awfully fast and I want to enjoy it with them," Nolan said.

Although Nolan was understandably happy when his team handed Rindge only its second league loss of the season, it was a shame North had to lose its previous game to Weymouth South to end its tournament hopes.

There's no doubt the Raiders were sky high for Rindge, knowing it was their coach's final game. A big 29-12 second period saluted it away for North.

Jay Nelson had 23 points, Scott Roberts 17, Joe Devin 13 and Paul Kelliher 11.

The players, each of whom shook Nolan's hand and wished him well, presented him with a cake and gave him the traditional shower with his clothes on after the game.

Two of Nolan's players, Co-Captain Rich Mahoney and Jay Nelson, were named to the league all-star team and last Saturday faced Rindge in the annual all-star game at Cambridge.

Both players did well but the all-stars bowed to the league champs, 84-66.

Nolan compiled a fine record of 148 wins and 62 losses in his 11 years at North and he never had a losing season. However, he was most proud of the fact that every one of his players except one went on to higher education. "That one went to work for his father, so he turned out all right, too," Bob said.

A graduate of Winthrop High in 1944, Bob will continue in his post as a work-study counselor at Quincy High, which he has held for the last three years.

His coaching career started in 1955 when he taught and was a football assistant at Hudson High. He taught and coached various sports at Millis and New Bedford before arriving at North in 1961. He was assistant to North Coach Ken Rickson for three years and also was an aide to then football coach Carl Leone.

Two of his daughters, Rosemary (Rory), a North sophomore, and Siobhan, a North junior, are excellent athletes. The other children are Sheila, a freshman at UMass-Boston; Erin, a seventh grader at Central Junior High, and the only boy, Robert Francis Jr., a ninth grader at Catholic Memorial.

-TOM SULLIVAN

North Jayvees Champions

North Quincy High's junior varsity basketball team, coached by Eddie Miller, last week clinched the Suburban League championship with a 61-33 romp over Rindge Tech in the final game.

The Raider jayvees finished 17-2 overall and 16-2 in the league and last Saturday played second place Waltham at Cambridge's War Memorial Auditorium in a preliminary to the annual league all-star game.

In a fitting climax of an outstanding season, North topped Waltham, 59-53.

Junior Mike Gill led the Raiders with 22 points in the season's finale which saw North outclass Rindge, 20-2, in the opening period and waltz from then on.

BASKETBALL MOST DANGEROUS

You may be surprised to learn that, statistically, basketball is America's most dangerous team sport, causing more injuries than any other.

The game, with its constant twisting and turning, poses a particular threat to knees and ankles. Youngsters going out for basketball should make a special effort to put themselves in prime condition. Safety experts advise a program of leg-strengthening exercise. The stronger the muscles and tendons around those critical joints, the less likely a sudden wrench that results in a sprain or dislocation. Too-daily return to play after an injury is frequently an accident factor, too. Stay out of play completely until you have medical word that the injury is fully healed. And make reconditioning a prerequisite for resuming the game.

Another major risk is borne by eyeglass wearers. Reduce the possibility of shattering by wearing only impact-resistant lenses and by securing glasses with a band around the head.

Quincy Bantam A's Capture Championship

The fifth annual International Kiwanis Youth Hockey Tournament last Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the Quincy Youth Arena and Pilgrim Arena in Hingham attracted 64 teams including more than 1,200 boys.

Large crowds attended the games to watch the Bantams, Pee Wees, Squirrels and Mites play and they witnessed many close and interesting games. The tournament was co-sponsored by the Quincy and Weymouth Kiwanis Clubs and attracted teams from as far away as Canada, Philadelphia and New York State.

Quincy's Bantam A team, sponsored by Quincy Sons of Italy Lodge 1295 and coached by Bob Hayes and Jim Deitsch, captured the tournament championship with a 7-4 win over Philadelphia in the finals. The Bantams had a 4-0 record in the "winners division".

In the championship game Sunday afternoon Quincy jumped away to a quick 3-0 lead over the Philadelphia Junior Flyers, made up of boys from Philadelphia, Delaware and Maryland and subsidized by the Flyers of the NHL.

Bobby Hayes, Eddie Kane and Paul McGrath had the early goals with two assists for Hayes and Tom Brennan and one for Kane. Philly, however, rebounded with a second period goal and three in the third period to take a 4-3 lead with five minutes remaining.

Quincy regained its composure and Kane slammed home a Hayes rebound to tie the score and one minute later Scott Richardson scored the winner which was his first goal in the tournament. Kevin McGrath assisted. Hayes and Paul McGrath scored insurance goals with two assists for Brennan and one each for Kane and Hayes.

In the semifinals Sunday morning Quincy defeated Falmouth, 5-1, with Hayes having the hat trick and Billy Deitsch and Mark Messina one goal apiece. Bryan MacGilvray had three assists, Brennan and Richardson two each and Deitsch, Messina and Kane one apiece. Leo Doyle stood out on defense.

In the quarterfinals Quincy edged Hingham, 2-0, on goals by Kane and Hayes and assists for Hayes and Brennan. Danny Gorman, who had been outstanding throughout the season, was lost for several weeks when he suffered an arm fracture in the final seconds of the game.

Quincy was outshot by its toughest foe, Cheshire, Conn., in the second round game but came out on top, 4-2, as Jim Scanlan and Jim Campbell continued their superb work in goal.

Kane had two goals, Mike Furey and Kevin McGrath one each. Brennan and Paul had two assists apiece and MacGilvray and Hayes one each. Paul McDermott suffered a broken hand and will be out of action for at least three or four weeks.

Quincy had opened the tournament with a 7-0 breeze over South Boston as Scanlan and Campbell were standouts in goal. Furey had two goals and Brennan, McDermott, Hayes, Messina and Kevin McGrath one each. Kane, John Jackson and Kevin McGrath had two assists each and Deitsch, Rob Molloy, Furey and Brennan one apiece.

The Bantam A team has compiled a league-leading 18-0-2 record in the South Shore Conference and has an overall 34-6-3 record with four of the losses by one goal. The team has nine shutouts, outscoring its opponents, 194-76. Bob Hayes founder of the Quincy Youth Hockey Association, is coach assisted by Jim Deitsch and Dick Storella. Dan MacGilvray and Jack Scanlan are the team treasurers.

Presidents Meet Columbus

Quincy High hockey coach Bob Sylvia has taken his sixth team in 10 years into the state tournament and he credits "pride and dedication" for the Presidents making the tournament after an uphill fight.

The Presidents will play their first tournament game tonight [Thursday] at Ridge Arena, Braintree, in an 8 o'clock game against Christopher Columbus and if they win, they will face one of the top-seeded teams, Dedham [16-1] at Ridge Friday at 8.

When they lost to Weymouth South back on Jan. 24, the Presidents were faced with the prospect of winning or tying six of their final seven games to qualify for the tournament.

They went one better by winning or tying all seven for a final record of 13-4-3 and second place in the Suburban League only two points behind champion Brookline.

"It was pride and dedication that carried us through and these boys just wouldn't give up," Sylvia said. "They got off to a fast start but when they lost to North Quincy [the Raiders' first win over the Presidents in 14 years], it seemed to take a lot out of them and it took several games for them to snap out of it.

"Finally, when they lost to Weymouth South, they seemed to realize they had to do something if they wanted to make the tournament. They really came through in those last seven games and the back-to-back wins over Brookline and Brockton, which at the time was in second place, seemed to be the turning point and really gave them confidence."

In the seasons finale against Waltham Quincy fell behind, 3-0, but the Presidents wouldn't quit and wound up with a 4-4 tie.

Frank Guest, voted the outstanding player in the freshman league three years ago and the top sophomore in the Greater Boston League two years ago, led the Suburban League in scoring this year with 53 points.

Guest had been criticized in the past for being a "gunner" and not passing off, but this season he answered those critics by having 28 assists to go along with his 25 goals.

"Frank led the league in scoring even though the opposition keyed on him in every game," Sylvia said. "By keying on him, they gave others a chance to score and Brian Bertoni, an outstanding sophomore, had 32 points. His older brother, Dennis, a great defenseman, scored 31 points.

Another good scorer was Bill Hamill and several of his goals were game winners. "He was really an unsung hero," Sylvia said.

At midseason Sylvia made several changes in his lineup and Brian Bertoni was switched from defense to offense and centered a line with Mark Giordani and Paul Lynch. Guest played with Hamill and Bob Barry on an all-star line, and Tom Cahill played between Dan Previte and Brian Aristide or Paul Vlassakis. Tom Van Tassel also saw a lot of action as a forward.

"We knew when the season started we could score but I was worried about the defense and the goalies," Sylvia admitted. "I knew I had a real pro in Dennis Bertoni on defense but wasn't sure about the others. We had some problems early in the year but Mike Gulizia, Bill Dalton, Mike Bamberg, Nick Cyr and Walt Fimental all came along and did a fine job for us.

"Our goalies were also question marks at the start but Bill Buchan and his backup man, Pete Hajjar, improved steadily and gave us some fine games.

"We had a devastating power play this year and Lynch and Barry did an outstanding job killing penalties. When we were shorthanded and they were on the ice, not a goal was scored against us."

Many of Sylvia's underclassmen saw a lot of action with Jack Crowley's junior varsity team which was unbeaten [10-0-1] and got in a lot of game experience.

"Jack is a real pro and could be a head coach at many schools," Sylvia said. "He and our freshman coach, John Perkins, played for me, so it is all in the family. Both have done a tremendous job."

Guest and Brookline's Frank Nelson were named the league's Most Valuable Players and joining Guest on the all-star squad were the Bertoni brothers.

Ron Erikson's North Quincy team finished with an 8-8-4 mark, a marked improvement over last year, and the Raiders' outstanding goalie, Dick Wilson, Paul Hurley and Steve Giglio made the all-star squad. Sylvia and Weymouth South's John Walker coached the all-stars, who played Brookline Saturday and tied, 5-5. —TOM SULLIVAN

'Sound Of Music'

Makes TV Debut Sunday

The most popular musical in motion picture history makes its television debut this Sunday when ABC presents Julie Andrews in "The Sound of Music," winner of the Best Picture Academy Award in 1965.

"The Sound of Music" was inspired by the history of the famous Trapp Family Singers, who began singing as a hobby and were soon appearing in concert halls.

Julie Andrews stars as Maria, a postulant in an Austrian abbey of 1938. Christopher Plummer co-stars as the widowed Captain Von Trapp, who is in search of a governess for his seven children.

Maria, with doubts about her religious life, is assigned to the Von Trapps by the Abbey. She soon teaches the children to sing, and while they form a chorus to the delight of Salzburg, their musical talents eventually save them from the horrors of the Nazi takeover of Austria.

The Rodgers and Hammerstein musical, which promises something for everyone, captures the charming Austrian setting with such songs as "My Favorite Things," "Do Re Mi," "Edelweis" and "Climb Every Mountain."

"The Sound of Music" which opens with spectacular footage of the Austrian mountains and countryside, is expected to attract a record television audience as the film has earned box office receipts of more than $78 million in theaters throughout the world.

North Trackmen Win Class B Crown

North Quincy High won the state Class B cross country championship last fall and Saturday Lou Tozzi's Raiders added the Class B winter track crown when they edged Bishop Doherty of Worcester, 34-31, at Reading.

North trailed Doherty by seven points and favored Reading by 7 2/3 points going into the final event, the relay. Doherty had no relay team and Reading, favored to win the event, could do no better than sixth place.

Paul McGuigan gave North the lead on the first leg, Ken O'Brien ran a good second leg but fell to second place and Bart Petracca made up ground on the third leg, trailing by five yards as Jerry MacKenzie picked up the needed ground as anchor man.

Petracca broke three records in winning the mile. His 4:21.7 set a new Class B mark, a new North Quincy record and a new Reading field house figure.

MacKenzie won the 600 by about an inch in 1:18.1, Brian Doherty was fourth in the 50-yard dash and Bob Levenson, despite a fine effort, failed to place in the mile.

"Now all we have to do is win the state championship in spring track," said a pleased Tozzi.

Keohane's, Dunkin' Winners

Only two games were played during the past week in the St. Ann's Hockey League.

In Pee Wee action league-leading Keohane's widened its margin over Art Tailors to four points with an easy 7-1 win over Dairy Queen. Steve Kelly exploded for four goals and Greg McMillen, Kevin McNulty, and Paul Picarello had one each. Dave Casey, McMillen, Mike Kearns, Mike Walsh and Kevin Kelley had assists. Steve Nazzaro scored for DQ with Mike Nazzaro assisting.

Dunkin' Donuts edged Razer's Edge, 2-0, on goals by Paul Gagnon and Glenn Houlihan. Kyle Morjon had an assist.

GERALD FORD

President Gerald R. Ford and Sen. Henry M. [Scoop] Jackson [D-Wash] topped their respective ballots in Quincy in Tuesday's presidential preference primary.

Jackson barely prevailed over a strong showing by Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace in the Democratic balloting.

The final count was Jackson 3,934 to Wallace 3,446.

Ford, the appointed vice president who succeeded Richard M. Nixon when he resigned, nearly doubled the vote total of his challenger, former Gov. Ronald W. Reagan of California on the Republican ballot.

Ford's total was 1,883 to Reagan's 994.

Ford and Jackson also topped their tickets statewide.

A total of 19,100 Quincy voters turned out, 38.3 per cent of the registered vote.

It was a high percentage, considerably more than the 30 per cent who voted in the 1972 primary.

Although Jackson finished first, Wallace supporters could claim a moral victory in the city since the Alabama governor sought only to increase his 8 per cent of the vote received in 1972.

Trailing the front-runners in order were:

Rep. Morris K. Udall of Arizona, 1,994.

Former Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia, 1,784.

Former Sen. Fred R. Harris of Oklahoma, 1,120.

R. Sargent Shriver of Maryland, the vice presidential candidate four years ago, 985.

Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana,

838.

Anti-Abortionist Ellen McCormack of New York, 602.

Gov. Milton J. Shapp of Pennsylvania, 392.

Parliamentarian Robert L. Kelleher of Montana, 49.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, 24.

Former Gov. Terry Sanford of North Carolina, 7.

Both Bentsen and Sanford withdrew from the contest but their names remained on the ballot.

Returns from two Quincy precincts were late, delaying the final count until after 8 a.m.

City Council Session Labeled 'A Zoo' By Harrington

By TOM HENSHAW

"This is a zoo," snapped City Councillor Dennis E. Harrington. "I'm not going to sit here and listen to any more of this."

"I think what the councillors want me to say," said a quietly fuming Council President Arthur H. Tobin, "is that it won't work."

"Jamming the Council Chamber to put pressure on the City Council, we'll no longer put up with it."

The comments came at 11:05 p.m. Monday night after a stormy and frustrating City Council meeting that ended almost in mid-sentence when Harrington refused to permit a suspension of the rules in order to continue after 11 p.m.

The adjournment of the unfinished meeting itself irritated Councillor Warren A. Powers.

"I object to the adjournment," he said angrily. "We've never done this before. We've always suspended the rules and continued."

"I had some items on the Mayor's office that I was going to move out of committee, tonight...."

The mood of the meeting was one of rising anger, directed at members of Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia's administration, climaxing at 11 p.m. when Tobin sought to suspend the rules and continue the meeting.

"I don't want to take any responsibility for this Council remaining beyond 11 o'clock," exploded Harrington.

"There were matters discussed here tonight that should have been discussed in committee. They had no business before the Council."

"Department heads came here tonight with no background information on their requests."

"Some of them had reports dated Feb. 18 that could have been delivered long before tonight."

"I have never objected before to staying beyond 11 but I do tonight."

"I want to make sure that everyone knows I am not responsible."

"It is my responsibility to vote on financial orders and I don't want to take that vote without due consideration."

"I can't tonight."

"This is a zoo."

The evening's contention began early when Public Works Commissioner Vincent LoCicero appeared in support of a request for $13,000 for repairs to a Caterpillar D8 tractor dozer at the city dump.

During the course of the discussion, the request for $13,000 seemed to escalate into a bid for $142,000 for a new Caterpillar 983 shovel dozer to replace an Allis Chalmers machine which, said LoCicero, "is going to drop dead in three weeks."

"It is up to the mayor to make an appropriation order," Tobin pointed out. "We are talking about $13,000. I'd like to see some facts and figures before I talk about appropriating $142,000."

"I'll be back in two weeks for another $13,000 to repair the

Denies 'Jamming' Tactic

LaRaia Sees 'Bitter Feeling' On Part Of Some Councillors

Are Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia and the City Council on a collision course?

Is the Mayor, a former councillor himself, trying to intimidate councillors as Council President Arthur H. Tobin implied when he charged the Mayor with "jamming the Chamber with people to bring pressure on the Council."

Mayor LaRaia himself says no.

"I can't think of any way in which I've tried to antagonize the Council," he told The Quincy Sun. "I don't recall opposing the City Council on any matter since I've been in office."

On Tobin's "jamming" remark, he said:

"When there is a legitimate need for people to turn out in a mass they have a right to attend a hearing or a meeting of the City Council. I don't think he can object to that. I hope not.

"I think there is still a bitter feeling with some of the Council members over the fact that I am Mayor and I wasn't supposed to be. I'm sincerely interested in working out a solution."

"I've always had the door open so they can sit down and discuss with me any problems of city issues. I'm sure that any problems existing now with some of the Councillors and this office can be resolved."

"Matters before the City Council can get bogged down in issues of detail rather than important matters of city government. This is where the problem arises in relations the Mayor's office has with the Council leadership and vice versa."

"It's primarily the Mayor and the Council president, a combination of the two."

Paul Nigro, an honor student at Quincy High School and our friend, passed away Feb. 26 after a brief illness.

His passing was a great shock to all of us at Quincy High School for everyone of us here was touched in some way by Paul's life. Even if a teacher did not have him in class, or if a student did not know him personally, they were all aware that he was a leader and someone to admire.

In today's world when people tend not to get involved with fellow human beings, Paul was the exception. He was enthusiastic about his school and concerned with his fellow students. He was President of the National Honor Society and the Student Union, A member of the Literary Magazine, American Field Service, Choir, Latin Club, and Math Team. His concerns were not limited to his school, for the community in which he lived also felt it. He

Hayward Creek Flood

Control Project Moves Ahead

The U.S. Corps of Engineers has finally decided that flooding is a problem along Hayward Creek, something that residents of the area on the Quincy-Braintree line have known all along.

The Corps has completed the planning stages of a $1.3 million flood control project, says Cong. James A. Burke [D-Milton], and expects to receive contract bids in the late spring.

Burke said the 1½ year project will pump nearly $1 million into the local economy.

"Not only will this money put some of our many unemployed construction people back to work," said Burke, "but it will help cure a chronic flooding problem and give Quincy and Braintree almost 33 acres of park land."

The Hayward Creek project is one phase of a three-pronged attack on flooding in the Quincy Coastal Stream Area. The other two phases, involving Town Brook and Furnace Brook, are in the final planning stages.

Brownell Sees Up To 25% Hike In MBTA Assessments

Rep. Thomas F. Brownell [D-Quincy] predicts an increase of as much as 25 per cent in the MBTA assessments on the 79 cities and towns, including Quincy, that make up the deficit-ridden authority's annual deficit.

The 1975 deficit, he said, is approaching $190 million.

Brownell filed a bill in the State Legislature that would require the Commonwealth, which now picks up about 50 per cent of the tab, to pay 65 per cent and thus give some relief to local property tax payers.

"If the state wants to persuade the cities and towns of the value of rapid transportation it should be willing to pay a greater percentage of its costs," said Brownell.

"Currently the state is contributing about half the cost of the deficit.

"In 1975 a total of about $70 million was collected from the cities and towns in the MBTA district to help cover the cost of the 1974 deficit of approximately $134 million.

"Unless the state steps in with increased financial assistance there will be a marked increase in property taxes in each of the 79 cities and towns that belong to the MBTA district, including Quincy."

His scholastic achievements and his community awareness did not go un-noticed. He was selected this past year to appear in the Who's Who Among American High School Students and was a delegate to the 1975 Massachusetts Boy's State. Paul was respected and loved by faculty and students alike, as the following statements attest:

Paul Nigro Scholarship Fund Nears $1,000

It's less than a week old but already the Paul T. Nigro Scholarship Fund is growing rapidly.

The scholarship was established by students at Quincy High School in memory of their classmate, Paul T. Nigro, president of the school's National Honor Society, who died of a kidney ailment Thursday (Feb. 26) at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital.

Contributions to the fund may be sent to Stephen Moynihan in care of the Quincy Public Schools Business Office, Room 303, 1200 Hancock St., Quincy, 02169.

By the weekend, the fund had neared the $1,000 mark, largely through contributions from Quincy High students themselves.

In addition, friends and classmates of young Nigro, including a contingent of 17 students from Archbishop Williams High School, donated nearly 200 pints of blood to replace that given him during his heroic two week fight for life.

Paul was a boy of distinction at Quincy High School.

"I'm going to miss him terribly, he was a brilliant boy and he was always there if you needed him. I just loved him."

Mrs. Katherine Myatt
Latin Teacher QHS

"At Quincy High and Vocational Technical School, Paul Nigro was a very special young man. In a school community of more than 2,700, he affected so many of his schoolmates and teachers with the joy of his laughter, the vitality of his youth, the beauty of his hopes, and the honesty of his character. He was busy and lived every minute to its fullest potential, but he always had time to give attention with help or laughter to those in his company. He taught a teacher to try to remember how unique every human being is and how important every moment is when spent with another. That's a beautiful legacy for a seventeen year old boy to give."

Mr. John Harrington
Social Studies Dept. Head
Quincy High School

The students at Quincy High School have established a scholarship in memory of Paul. Contributions to the Paul T. Nigro Scholarship Fund may be sent to Steve Moynihan, Quincy Public Schools Business Office, 1200 Hancock St., Quincy, Mass. 02169.

the National Honor Society, he was president of the Student Union, vice president of the Latin Club, treasurer of the Student Council in his junior year, and a member of the Literary Club, the Math Club, American Field Service and the Stage Band.

He was listed in Who's Who Among American High School Seniors; he was a Boys State representative, a winner of a 1973 American Legion award and one of the top ten in the senior class.

Outside of school he was pianist and organist at St. John's Church, an orderly at Robin House Convalescent Home, a member of the YMCA and St. John's Church religious education.

Paul had applied for entrance to Dartmouth's pre-medical program and to the following colleges: Bates, John Hopkins, Cornell, Carnegie-Mellon. He had already been accepted at UMass-Amherst and Ripon in Wisconsin.

He leaves his parents, Salvatore and Angeline (Monti) Nigro; a brother, Michael; and two sisters, Mrs. Paula Envoy and Janet Tyler, both of Weymouth. He was buried Saturday in Pine Hill Cemetery.

MORTGAGE MONEY--

This is The Quincy Cooperative Bank's plan to:

- Help home owners remodel and update their homes. We have earmarked $1,000,000.00 for this program alone.
- Stimulate the purchase of new or pre-owned homes. We have cut our mortgage interest rates to help you.
- Provide a lift for the economy generally by generating employment for the badly depressed building trades.

The great American dream of home ownership is in trouble. The high cost of new homes has not only slackened the building business tremendously but many a young family now finds new home ownership beyond its means.

The Quincy Cooperative Bank believes something can be done about this situation. Our board of directors has authorized several bold steps not only to help people to own a home but to help others remodel their present dwellings. And hopefully, our program should breathe a new breath of life into the building trades; providing jobs for carpenters, painters, plumbers and other tradesmen.

Here is what we are doing--

1. We are making a million dollars available for home modernization programs. There are several ways we can help. We can write a home modernization loan and if the statutory limit on this is not enough to help you, you might consider a mortgage rewrite. It all depends on what you need for a new room or kitchen or bathroom updating. And don't let the idea of a mortgage rewrite frighten you off; we have set up ways to cut your costs for a rewrite.

2. We have plenty of dollars available for mortgages on new or previously owned homes. Go ahead and buy a new or pre-owned home if you can afford it. We have cut our mortgage rates to help this campaign of ours to get things rolling again in the housing business.

The Quincy Cooperative Bank has always believed in putting our depositors money to work in the areas we serve. This is the basic reason for the development of cooperative banking. In today's critical housing situation, development of investment in home ownership is an important part of our community and family life.

So if you want to buy, build or remodel, come see us or give us a call about the details. Our office for lending services is at our main bank, 1259 Hancock Street, Quincy--phone 479-6600. Ask for any of our friendly and helpful people there: Bob Keddy, vice president for lending services; Bob Norton, assistant vice president for lending services; or Beverly Zawacki, their assistant. Even if you are not quite sure what you should do, come on in and talk it over with our people. We have the friendliest, most helpful group of experts ready to answer your questions about our lending programs for home owners.

John R. Herbert
President and Chairman of the Board.

[And ask for me if our folks in the lending department are busy on the phone with other home owners--or prospective home owners.]

Telly Savalas On Greek Cookery

Born Aristotle Savalas, Kojak star Telly Savalas has an ethnic background which qualifies him as an "expert" on authentic Greek cooking. Attempting to describe the special combination of subtle flavors and seasonings that gives dishes "their wonderful Greek-ness" Telly listed ingredients from some of his favorite dishes.

"There's honey for sweetness, along with lemon, mint, oregano and cinnamon as seasonings. All, of course, are carefully balanced."

Taking a break between rehearsals for a Greek dance segment to be featured on his television special airing February 18 on CBS-TV, Telly expressed a fondness for the following lamb recipe.

"Just serve it with some celery egg-lemon, potatoes a la Greque and chilled retsina," says Telly. "And I'll be right over."

Telly's Lamb Pallakari

1 4-5 lb. leg of lamb	2 garlic cloves, minced
Salt	2 tablespoons chopped
Pepper	parsley
1 tablespoon oregano	1/2 cup olive oil
leaves	1/2 cup lemon juice
2 teaspoons mint flakes	2 lbs. baby onions

Rub meat with salt and pepper; pierce on all sides with fork. Combine oregano, mint, garlic, parsley, oil and lemon juice; pour over meat. Cover; marinate in refrigerator overnight, turning occasionally. Simmer onions in enough water to cover, 5 minutes, drain. Place lamb and onions in roasting pan; brush with marinade. Roast at 350°; brushing occasionally with marinade, 2 1/2 to 3 hours or until meat thermometer registers 165° to 170°. Garnish with watercress and olives, if desired. 8 to 10 servings.

Easy To Follow Pointers

Here Is A Parent's Guide To The Babysitting Dilemma

As we all well know, the babysitting dilemma is twofold: incompetent sitters or no sitters at all. Either situation is cause enough to rattle nerves and reduce parents, especially mothers, to something less than sanity.

Here are some easy to follow pointers to get you out of the house quickly and confidently:

THE SEARCH: It has been said that some parents hire a babysitter when what they really need is a lion tamer. If that's the problem in your house, why not try male sitters. Many neighborhood boys would be more than willing to earn some extra money. Boys tend to have an easier time keeping your brood in line. In fact, having a boy sitter can be such a pleasant change, your children will probably give him no trouble at all.

If male sitters are not the solution for you, and you have tried all the sitters you can think of, ask your friends, your pediatrician, college placement centers if there are any near you, high school counselors and people at various community organizations if they can give you reliable sitter leads. Also, check your local hospital; many have sifter services.

POOLING YOUR RESOURCES: You might consider forming a sitter pool with your friends and neighbors. A simple typed list with the names of their sitters and yours can be circulated. When your favorite sitter is unavailable, try one on the list. A sitter pool will save last minute calls and worry about leaving your children with someone you don't trust. If a name is on the list, you know one of your friends has found that sitter satisfactory. You might suggest sitters on the list be rated.

TRAINING IN BRIEF: When your sitter arrives, be specific about her duties. Her main responsibility is child care. Explain what your baby and children like and don't like, their habits, fears, sleeping and eating requirements. The more specific your instructions and explanations of what you expect from your sitter, the more responsible and effective your sitter will be. If she has to guess about meals and bedtimes, your house may be in turmoil when you get home.

If you have an infant, it is wise to have the sitter stop by for an hour or so one afternoon to watch you handle the baby. Let her change the baby's diaper and feed the baby. This brief visit will help you evaluate a sitter's ability better than any telephone conversation or series of questions about her experience with infants.

SITTER'S BAG: You can avoid last minute scrambling for things your sitter will need if you keep a packed tote on hand. Allowing for age difference, it should contain disposable diapers, flashlight, first aid kit, Enfamil ready-to-use formula which can be stored at room temperature and requires no mixing, a notebook with special instructions, $5.00 for emergency taxi and any toys you feel might make the sitter's job easier.

SAFETY FIRST: Stress accident prevention. Tell sitter what your baby or child is likely to do: climb stairs, furniture, or window sills; go near the stove; touch electrical outlets; run away when called; bite; throw tantrums, etc.

Post the doctor's phone number, the number where you may be reached, and a neighbor's phone number on or near the phone, or on a bulletin board where the sitter can get them fast, in case of any problem.

Tell her that if anything serious happens, to call your doctor and then you. The child's well-being comes first. Of course, simple bumps and scratches can be handled by the sitter with antiseptics and bandages for minor wounds.

Suggest she never answer the phone or doorbell unless the child is in a safe place, or with her. And tell her not to let any unauthorized person enter the house.

MEALS: Keep them simple; in fact, the open-pour-heat-and-eat meals are best. For example, a meal the sitter can just slip into the oven for older children can be combined with Enfamil ready-to-use infant formula for baby, which can be poured into a bottle, or training cup for an older baby.

FEARFUL TEARS: Babies, under six months, love new faces. After that age, they usually develop stranger anxiety. Let sitter and child become acquainted for a few minutes before you leave.

Older children should be told where you are going, that the sitter will take care of them, and that you will be back later. If the child fusses about the sitter, don't worry, if you are confident about her ability as a substitute parent. The fearful storm is usually over before you are out of the driveway.

SITTER COURTESY: Treat the sitter as you ask her to treat your children, fairly and with care. If you are delayed, call her, estimating your new arrival time. Encourage her to tell you what happened while you were away - nightmares, minor accidents, etc. Pay her fairly, at the going neighborhood wage. Don't expect a sitter to have change. Finally, make sure she gets home safely. Remember, he or she is someone else's baby.

Stay Alive!

By Jack Silverstein

WHEN CHILD HOLDS BREATH

Children sometime threaten to hold their breath, and proceed to do so. It's possible for a determined child to hold his breath long enough to become unconscious. Nevertheless, he cannot kill himself, or even create a really critical problem. There are two things you can do: the choice is yours.

First, you can ignore the child. The moment he becomes groggy, the body's involuntary controls will automatically take over; the heightened carbon dioxide level in the child's blood will instantly trigger deep, rapid breathing, and the normal oxygen balance will be restored. We do not advise you to let things get to this stage unless the child is sitting or standing on something safe. Otherwise, he could fall to the floor or ground and in so doing, strike his head on something and really suffer serious injury.

Second, you can put a fast stop to the performance by calmly and suddenly slapping the child's face. He will be startled; there will be an involuntary intake of breath, and that will be that.

STELLIUM not a STALLION

Q. I have for a long while been confused as to the position of my Moon and Ascendant. I was told I was a "stallion" or a double Pisces. From what I have read I feel that I must have strong positions in Aries somewhere in my chart.

Have been a hairdresser for nine years and recently retired as it drained me of everything. What if anything, is a good line of work for me? I enjoy more than I can state the art of homemaking. Am I too lazy to find suitable employment? I was born on March 2, 1938 at 6:22 P.M. in Boston, Mass.

M.F.L.

A. A "stellium" in Astrology is a group of several planets in one Sign of the Zodiac. Your chart shows the Sun, Moon, Mercury and Venus all in Pisces and this is called a "stellium". A "stallion" is not an astrological term. It refers to a particular kind of horse that is usually used as a stud.

Your Ascendant, the Sign of the Zodiac on the eastern horizon at the place and moment of your birth, was Virgo and the planet Neptune was in that Sign close to the degree of Virgo on that Ascendant. This indicates you are capable of combining a sixth sense, call it intuition if you will, with a quick mentality.

You can be painstaking and accurate with details. Undoubtedly you were an excellent hairdresser. The aspect from the planet Pluto to your Ascendant and the planet Neptune there shows your tendency to put so much of yourself into all that you do and accounts for your "being drained".

Both planets Mars and Saturn were in Aries confirming your feeling that you had "strong positions" in Aries in your chart. Your best bet for work is one offering an opportunity to render some selfless service of one kind or another. It is important for you to depersonalize your approach to people, places, things and conditions. Try to be objective.

For questions to be answered through this column, mail the year, month, day of the month, city of birth, time of day if known and question to Ask Oscar, Box 114, Canton, Mass. 02021. Please sign your name which will not be published. Selected questions can only be answered in this column.

7th Annual Heart Theater Party March 9

Richard J. Koch, Special Events Chairman of the Quincy Heart Fund Drive, announces the seventh annual Heart Fund Theatre Party will be held Tuesday, March 9, at 7:30 p.m., at the Strand Theatre, Quincy Sq.

The movie feature is "Man For All Seasons" starring Paul Scofield, Orson Welles and Susanah York.

Koch said this year's theatre program would again be named the "John J. Daniels Memorial Night" in memory of the late Mr. Daniels who, as ticket chairman, was personally responsible for over half of the total tickets sold for the first five years and solicited and provided all the door prizes for this annual event.

Mr. Daniels participated in the committee for five years and shortly after the event in April 1974 died of a heart attack.

Since 1970, when the Heart Fund Theatre Party was initiated, $7,185 has been realized for this cause, with last years program the most successful with $1,750 raised. Koch is setting a goal of $2,000 for 1976, with the hopes the total will exceed this amount.

Anyone dnable to attend the affair but wishing to donate may make checks payable to the "Heart Fund" c/ "John J. Daniels Memorial Night" and deposit them with John J. McGue, manager of the North Quincy Branch of the Hancock Bank, who is treasurer of the Quincy Special Events Program of the Heart Fund for the seventh year.

Any person wishing to assist in the sale of tickets or any part of the program may contact Koch at 241 Newbury Ave.,

North Quincy.

Quincy volunteers conducted a house to house campaign Sunday. Robert Denis, Professor at Quincy Junior College was chairman and John Felci and John Vignoni, co-chairmen. Charles Bullock of the Quincy City Hospital is community chairman of the 1976 Heart Fund Drive in Quincy and Mrs. Dorothy Jewett is Quincy chairwoman of the "Heart Beat Bounce Program".

QUINCY COOPERATIVE BANK INTRODUCES SOME OF THEIR STODGY BANKERS.

We may be old in years, but solemn-looking banks and overbearing bankers are two things you won't find with us. We're very "today" in terms of our people, services and ideas.

When you come in to QCB to do your banking, you'll always find a warm, friendly atmosphere. Because that's the way our people are. From the tellers to the manager, the attitude is to offer helpful service. And we do indeed offer a full range of banking services. A cooperative bank does a lot more than arrange mortgages.

And no bank knows more about cooperative banking than we do. Because we started way, way back in Josiah Quincy, Jr.'s time. Josiah was the founder of cooperative banking in Massachusetts, and he's the man for whom our bank was named. His concern for the common man and his belief that a bank should serve the people . . . all the people . . . is something we've never varied from. If he could see our employees today, we know for certain . . .

JOSIAH WOULD HAVE LIKED THAT.

Firefighters, Police In Medical Training

Members of the Quincy Fire and Police Departments, and two employees of a local ambulance firm, are enrolled in the Emergency Medical Technician [EMT] program at Faulkner Hospital, Jamaica Plain.

The program, being offered through the Office of Emergency Medical Services, was developed in accordance with the Massachusetts Ambulance Law enacted in 1973. The law requires that, among other things, by July of 1977 all ambulances be staffed by at least two Emergency Medical Technicians.

Quincy fire fighters in the program are John Davies and Harold Goodwin. Police officers are Edward Blinn, Paul Leman, Robert Morales and Charles O'Donnell. Employees from Quincy-Adams Ambulance are David Kane and Norman Sears.

The basic training program taken by the EMT involves a minimum of 81 hours of classroom and field instruction by physicians, nurses and other medical specialists.

At least 10 hours of learning are spent in the hospital emergency department observing the treatment of emergency patients by physicians and nurses.

Upon successful completion of the training program, the EMT must pass a comprehensive written and practical skill examination to be recognized by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts as an Emergency Medical Technician and is also eligible to take the National Registry Exam.

The Liberation of Boston.

When George Washington rode into Cambridge on July 2, 1775, to take command of the ragtag American forces, he was already the most famous soldier in America and at 6 foot 2, he literally towered over everyone of his day.

But the tasks he faced in molding an effective force from the rabble he found waiting for him in Cambridge would require every ounce of his strength and ingenuity. His troops lacked everything from cannon to blankets. Half of his force were without muskets and powder was practically non-existent.

Yet within 10 months, he had sent Knox on his famous March to Ticonderoga to procure cannon for the American Army, sent Arnold on his March to Quebec, created the first effective American Naval force, and by April 1776, outmaneuvered and outflanked the British Army in Boston and driven it from the city.

This weekend, The Boston Sunday Globe is proud to present its readers with a special Bicentennial History of those fateful 10 months. It's called "Washington's First Victory" and in 80 pages of maps, pictures, letters and eyewitness accounts it recreates the whole incredible story. Written by John Harris, "Washington's First Victory," is the fourth in a special Bicentennial series which includes the "Boston Tea Party," "Lexington-Concord Alarm," and "The Battle of Bunker Hill."

"Washington's First Victory" ... this Sunday with The Boston Sunday Globe.

EDITORIAL

Paul Nigro

If those who knew him were asked to pick a young man who appeared destined for success and happiness in life, Paul Nigro would surely be their choice.

And if they were asked to select a real nice boy, Paul would be their choice again.

He had everything going for him: intelligence, good looks, character, interest in school, his church and community, vigorous enthusiasm, sincere respect for and from adults, his young peers and, of course, his family.

But last week—Feb. 26—it all came to a sudden, sad end. Paul died from a kidney ailment. He was 17.

Why something like that happens, only God himself knows.

For Paul's family and friends, his death is a tragedy. And now, an entire community shares their grief.

Paul's future was so full of promise. He ranked among the 10 top students in his senior class at Quincy High School. He was president of the National Honor Society and president of the Student Union.

He was named to "Who's Who Among American High School Students."

He was vice president of the Latin Club, a member of the American Field Service, a member of the high school stage band. And he was active in St. John's Church.

Paul had hoped to go to Dartmouth or to Johns-Hopkins, Bates, Cornell, Carnegie-Mellon, Ripon University or the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. He had already been accepted at Ripon and U-Mass.

Paul was the type of a boy mothers and fathers like to have as a son or a son-in-law, and other boys would like to have as a brother.

The bright future that seemed so surely ahead, however, is now suddenly gone.

But Paul's memory will live on. His classmates, teachers and friends are seeing to that.

Students and teachers at Quincy High School, Quincy Vocational Technical School and Sterling Junior High School and other friends donated nearly 200 pints of blood in his name last week to more than replace blood given to Paul in a vain effort to save his life.

And classmates have established a memorial scholarship fund in his name. Nearly $1,000 has been contributed so far.

The fund is being handled by Stephen Moynihan, Quincy public schools business manager.

Anyone wishing to donate may send contributions to: Paul T. Nigro Scholarship Fund, Quincy Public Schools Business Office, 1200 Hancock St., Room 303, Quincy, Mass. 02169 c/o Stephen Moynihan

Paul's death is a tremendous loss to us all.

He was the type of young man this nation needs as tomorrow's leaders. There just aren't enough Paul Nigros. To lose one, is a tragedy.

His name will live on through this memorial scholarship fund.

May it be an inspiration to students who follow. May those who receive scholarship aid in his name try to emulate him.

Human Error Rises Again In Inquest

Judge Albert Kramer's inquest into the 1975 Quincy city election went through more witnesses last week and came up with the answer it has been getting through all previous sessions.

"Human error" was apparently responsible for the shift of 500 votes in blocks of 50 that enabled Joseph J. LaRaia to upset Mayor Walter J. Hannon by 483 votes in a recount.

The final witnesses in Friday's session [Monday's was called off] were Mrs. June Marden, warden at polls in Ward 6, Precinct 6, and her clerk, Mrs. Mary Goudreau, whose testimony was given by a state police investigator.

The state trooper, James O'Connor, said Mrs. Goudreau was not called because she was in poor health. He said that he had interviewed her during his investigation and repeated her testimony for the court.

Mrs. Goudreau, was back on the job as clerk at Ward 6, Precinct 6, during the Tuesday primary election, confirmed Thomas Burke, assistant city clerk.

Mrs. Marden testified that in last fall's election Mrs. Goudreau read the voting figures from a tally sheet while Mrs. Marden wrote them down on a total vote sheet. In the process, 50 LaRaia votes were mistakenly given to Hannon.

"As the figures were read to me I repeated them to Mrs. Goudreau," said Mrs. Marden. "I presumed by looking at her that she heard me."

Trooper O'Connor testified that Mrs. Goudreau told him she was 78 years old. "She seemed to get confused very frequently," he said.

He said she was very upset about the mistake in her precinct.

"She thought she had done something wrong and we had to calm her down," he said.

O'Connor said investigators had her read votes to them from the tally sheet.

"She said 50 votes were for Hannon instead of for LaRaia," he said. "We asked her again and she studied it for 10 or 15 seconds. Then she said she made a mistake and they should have gone to LaRaia. She couldn't explain the error."

'Bitter Feeling'

[Cont'd from Page 1]

"From my experience, some members of the City Council go out of their way to create problems that could be resolved by better dialogue with the Mayor's office."

"If they feel my office is not offering dialogue I will give them the opportunity in the next few weeks to show their cooperation and my own."

"If there is any personal vendetta, and I know some has been shown in the last two months by some Council members, I hope it will pass and we can concern ourselves with the issues of governing Quincy."

Sons Of Italy

To Honor LaRaia

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Mayor Joseph LaRaia gets the VIP treatment Friday night at the Sons of Italy Social Hall.

Quincy Lodge 1295 will honor His Honor and the city's pretty new First Lady, Louise, at a reception and dinner starting at 7:30 p.m.

LaRaia, is only Quincy's second mayor of Italian descent since Quincy became a city in 1888. The first, of course, was the late Amelio Della Chiesa who served 12 years as mayor—longest in the city's history.

Past Venerable Jack Brown is chairman of the Friday salute. Co-chairmen are John Tomasco and Joseph Sacco.

The committee includes Venerable John Fantucchio, Assistant Venerable A. Mario Salvatore and Sebastian Papagno.

YOU COULDN'T BLAME Quincy Atty. Maurice Horrigan for feeling quite pleased about Gov. George Wallace's visit to Quincy last week.

Eight years ago, Horrigan was almost a Lone Ranger in this area as a Wallace backer. "There were only a handful of workers here then," he recalls.

But last week, Wallace attracted good crowds at the Quincy Lions Club luncheon and outside and inside at The Quincy Sun, And then packed in a SRO crowd at the Strand Theater. Several hundred were turned away because there just wasn't any more room to squeeze them in.

Horrigan, who is Wallace's local coordinator, arranged the Quincy visit. Wallace was quite pleased with the reception here.

"The rally at the Strand Theatre was the best in the state," says Horrigan. "The people are finally recognizing that his philosophy of government which he advocated eight years ago is their philosophy today."

A reported assassination threat delayed the start of the Wallace rally at the Strand a half-hour. Anyone carrying bags or handbags had to have them searched before they were allowed in.

Even Horrigan who carried in Wallace campaign straw hats in two paper bags was stopped and had them checked out by Secret Service men.

PROUD PARENTS DEPT: Garrett Quinn, son of City Councillor and Mrs. John Quinn, has received a full scholarship to play football at the University of Michigan. [But it has one drawback: Michigan has to play Ohio State in the final game each season.]

MILESTONE [S]: Retired City Engineer Henry Nilsen and his wife, Louise, last week celebrated their "100th anniversary." Well, Henry explains it like this: He and Louise were married Feb. 26, 1926 and on their wedding day moved into their then new home at 25 Agawam Rd. Merry-mourne where they still live. "And 50 and 50 make 100," he muses.

COUNCILLOR WARREN POWERS has stored away the crutches he was sporting after spraining his ankle playing for the "LaRaia Lancers" in the recent Quincy Youth Commission benefit basketball game.

INCIDENTALLY, following the game, Rep. Thomas Brownell kidding had this assessment of the playing of teammates, Councillors Daniel Raymond and John Quinn: Raymond plays basketball as if it were football and Quinn plays it like his hockey.

THIS IS THE year for nostalgia and mementos of the past. William Chiaramonte of 18 Glenwood Way, Quincy, found a 1926 dog tag No. 1143 the other day near the Adams Mansion on Adams St. He thought the owner might like it but cannot find the name in the city records. So, if you're out there, you can call Chiaramonte at 479-7329.

STEPHEN T. KEEFE, Quincy attorney and Air Force Reserve brigadier general, now has a third title: "Gramps." First grandson, Matthew David, born to Steve's son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. David Keefe now of Williamstown, Mass.

SMILE DEPT: Good friends Agnes and Henry Costello, in Key West, Fla. for awhile, sent back a post card from "Sloppy Joe's Bar" there with this item on it:

Having taken a few too many at a dance, a pretty young thing in Key West ran outdoors, fainted and fell over a trash barrel.

A young man saw her, picked her up and carried her to his room. The next morning he sent the following wire to his partner in New York:

"Close office. Sell everything. Come to Key West. They throw away better stuff here in Key West than you can buy in New York."

THUMBNAIL THOUGHTS—

By K.A. Smith

New Hampshire's primary was a triumph for printed and electronic journalism. No candidate came away charging the news media ignored him.

The old New Englander knows that a few warm days in February a springtime does not make.

The Chinese treatment of Mr. Nixon proves that the language barrier obviously is greater than most of us thought.

Consumers still puzzle about the public utility already paying 10 percent dividends which gets a rate hike.

What makes politics so fascinating is that everybody interprets the same raw data so differently.

According to tests, a mouse's favorite food is chocolate.

QUINCY'S YESTERDAYS

March 4-10, 1918 - 58 Years Ago This Week

City Mourns War Death Of Cyril Morrisette

By TOM HENSHAW

The city was still in mourning for Cyril P. Morrisette, the first Quincy boy to lose his life in action in France.

Rev. Thomas R. McCoy spoke feelingly about him during Masses at St. Mary's Church, West Quincy.

The War Department in Washington told Mayor Joseph L. Whiton that it would not be possible to bring his body back to Quincy for burial right now since policy prohibited return of bodies while the war was still on.

WAR WORKERS IN NEW DEMANDS

Several hundred machinists and their helpers from the Fore River Shipyard and the Victory Plant in Squantum met in Alpha Hall to organize and present their demands to the U.S. Shipping Board.

Organizer Daniel R. Donovan of Springfield told them:

"If the workers are to stand back of the President in this crisis they must organize.

"Any employer or other person who at this time interferes with our efforts to give our country that full and undivided support essential to the success of the war... will in our judgement be equivalent to giving aid and comfort to the enemy."

Journeyman machinists were seeking a wage of $6 a day, helpers $4.50 a day, with eight hours work a day for five days a week and four hours on Saturday.

CITY BUDGET DOWN

The City Council was wrestling with Mayor Whiton's $846,046.28 budget, down $69,821.59 from the previous year.

One item that was drawing fire from councilors was a 10 per cent war bonus for city officials and clerks at City Hall.

QUINCY GIRL STARS

McKay's Scotch Revue, a vaudeville program, was packing them into the Kincaide Theatre, partly because it brought a Quincy girl back to the home stage. Said publicity for the show:

"A full stage size act with seven of the jolliest Scotch lads and lassies that ever came to entertain the Quincy public. See Miss Jessie MacDonald, formerly of this city, in this act, also May McKay, dainty Scotch comedienne, who is known as the 'female Harry Lauder'."

On the Kincaide screen was "The Other Woman", starring Peggy Hyland, and another episode of the mystery serial, "The Hidden Hand", with Doris Kenyon, plus a Hearst-Pathe Newsreel which "Sees all, Knows all - Here twice a week."

PRESBYTERIAN HOOPSTERS WIN

The First Presbyterian Church basketball team, billed as "the fastest team in the city", took the measure of Company M, 302nd Infantry of Camp Devens, 36-23, at the Quincy YMCA.

Kemp had 13 points and Copeland 10 for the winners but the soldiers complained it was difficult to adjust to the YMCA rules after playing under those current in the armed forces.

SCHOOL BIDS HIGH

DPW Commissioner Brown opened bids for a new eight-room school building in Squantum and found that all of them were well over the $40,000 appropriated for construction.

The low bid was $46,191 by C. H. Cunningham & Sons Co. and that didn't include the heating and ventilation systems, the plumbing or the electrical work. Lowest bids for everything came to $66,317.

QUINCY-ISMS

Manager Covey of the Hancock Square Garage announced that the Overland Sedan was becoming the most popular automobile in the city since Eben W. Sheppard and Dr. John T. Reynolds bought them... Fred A. Loud purchased a 1918 Reo six-cylinder roadster from C. W. Hodgkinson, the local Reo and Maxwell dealer... Weldon G. Pratt of 25 Royal St., Norfolk Downs, was commissioned a lieutenant at the Advanced School of Aeronautics in San Antonio, Texas... F. E. Gray Co., 1512 Hancock St., "U.S. Food Administration License No. G-07862", had rolled oats at 36 cents for five pounds, rice at 12 cents a pound and peas at 14 cents a can... Parishioners held a reception for their pastor, the Rev. John Bancroft Bisbee, in the vestry of the First Universalist Church... Workers at William Hall & Co. in Wollaston voted to donate one per cent of their weekly pay checks to the Red Cross... Edward J. Lennon, a sanitary inspector for the Board of Health, celebrated his 77th birthday by buying thrift stamps at the City Clerk's office to help the war effort... "TO LET - 837 Hancock St., Wollaston, five rooms, first floor, furnace heat, fruit trees, large garden, cars pass door. Rent $16 a month"... Dora Newman won the door prize for the best costume at the annual party of the Junior Young Women's Hebrew Association at the home of Celia and Sarah Grossman... It was rumored that the U.S. government was about to seize land in Squantum to build houses for workers at the Victory Plant but former City Councillor John R. Nelson, the area's biggest landowner, said no one had told him about it... The Victory Plant employed some 12,000 workers... Barings at 10 Cottage St., was going out of business, selling men's suits for $5 to $10, work shirts for 25 to 75 cents, and union suits for as low as 65 cents... Andrew S. Johnson of Wollaston was appointed grand sentinel of the International Order of Odd Fellows at their encampment in Boston... Henry L. Kincaide Co., 1495 Hancock St., had solid oak dining tables for $17 and tea wagons ("a very necessary convenience in any home") for $10.75... Everyone knew Kincaide's as "the home of the famous 'Aeolian Vocalion' phonographs and records in Quincy."

A REGIONAL ECONOMY

High School Students: Learn A Marketable Skill

By ERIC SWIDER

Within the next couple of months high school students from throughout the South Shore will have an opportunity to indicate which courses they would like to be taking in the Fall semester.

I would like to put a plug in right now to encourage them to sign up for at least one course that will provide them with a marketable skill.

While some extraordinary percentage of the student population here believes it is going to go on to college and end up with that enviable soft cushy position that all college graduates supposedly acquire, statistics suggest otherwise. Many students, several years from now, will wish they had some practical training under their belt which could help them find a job.

Without exception, all high schools on the South Shore have Business Education Departments where basic communications skills can be acquired. Courses taught in those departments are not only valuable to the college student who won't finish, but are increasingly more necessary to the college graduate who is going to make it.

If I had my choice of hiring an executive trainee [all other things being equal] who could type or not type, I would much more readily hire the typist. Most of the products that we crank out of here have to be edited, and an author who can do his own typing eliminates a step in the editing process which saves precious time and dollars.

Just like executives no longer have secretaries standing around to place telephone calls on their behalf, neither do they have them around to add up columns of figures or take minutes for them at meetings. In the do-it-yourself world of getting to the top, the simple skills of calculator operation and shorthand are worthwhile assets to acquire. Being able to outline those skills on a resume also suggests to a prospective employer that the individual has initiative and will apply that same type of practical skill in their business dealings. The applicant becomes a much more attractive prospective employee.

On a short term basis, shorthand and typing are valuable tools in college, both for scholastic achievement and in earning money. The bookkeeping and accounting courses taught by most Business Education departments are practical math courses that help individuals balance their budgets at home and maintain at least an approximate understanding of why only the federal government can get away with spending more than it brings in. Office machines are not only fun to operate, but it is also useful for the potential business executive to know just how simple or difficult they are to work so that they can evaluate in future years the capacity for output from their employees.

Many college-bounds, especially those entering into the technical, scientific and teaching fields would be well-served if exposed to a semester of programs that reviewed Business Economics and the meaning of profits, productivity, money and business' ecological involvement in our society.

In the last years, we have heard that the practical education is crucial; that the school systems should become more relevant to the needs of the community and to students by providing an education that can be translated into jobs.

The evidence of mistreated individuals is all around us despite the fact that the practical opportunities for education exist now. Students have to assert themselves by signing up for programs that suggest they are as serious about getting a practical education as their future employers will demand they have had when they come job hunting.

Good jobs go to those who can handle them; and with competition getting tougher for each good job, students who have choices to make about their courses would be well-advised to think about their marketability.

[Eric Swider is Executive Vice-President of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.]

THE READER SPEAKS OUT

'Must The Barbs Continue?'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I have enjoyed our little "SUN". It was a lovely little paper with interesting items, and a regular home paper.

What has happened to it? Politics seem to have entered into it and corrupted it.

We knew the Patriot Ledger was a City Hall "yes" paper during Walter Hannon's term of office as Mayor. But, why did the Sun follow suit and become a mini-copy of the Ledger? There was an editorial of Hannon the Mayor and Hannon the Man, and now it has become a critic of the new mayor's action.

Now that the dust of battle of the election has settled must the barbs still continue. Let's all cooperate and go forward.

Every administration makes changes - for their term of office. It's a known fact that these changes [appointments] endure only for the reign of the elected. Consequently, changes will be made at each and every election. Some may be good and some may be bad.

The least we all could do is to try to give a few bouquets instead of continually tossing bricksbats. It's always so easy to criticize but wonder what we could do in a like position.

Common Cause Seeks Election Commission Support

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On Jan. 30 the Supreme Court ruled on the constitutionality of the Federal Election Campaign Act. Upheld were fundamental reforms in campaign finance disclosure, contribution limits and public financing of political campaigns.

On the other hand the Court ruled that it is unconstitutional for Congress to appoint members of the Federal Election Commission -- but it gave Congress 30 days in which to write new legislation for the Commission.

The Common Cause organization in this Congressional District [which includes Quincy] believes that it is very important that Congress act immediately to reconstitute the Federal Election Commission.

We urge citizens to send a wire or letter to Congressman James Burke today asking him to support the Mikva-Frenzel bill to reconstitute a Presidential-appointed Federal Election Commission with its powers intact. This is vital to assuring effective enforcement of the campaign finance laws for Congressional election and to demonstrating that Congress recognizes the importance of independent enforcement of the campaign laws.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

Can State Deficit Be Levied On Cities?

A suburban woman, concerned about the impact of the state's current fiscal problems asked the VPhone recently, "Can the state deficit be levied on the cities and towns?"

The VPhone volunteer answered, "Yes, but only if the Legislature passes a special act," which can be as simple as a clause in an appropriations act.

Established under Chapter 59, section 20 of the General Laws, the option was last used in 1947. It was suggested last spring when the state faced a $450 million deficit for fiscal 1975.

If that action had been taken, each town's share of the total assessment would have appeared as a debit item, owed to the state on its cherry sheet. However, the state could achieve the same results by reducing the amount of disbursements to cities and towns.

This question is one of many now being received by the League of Women Voters' Information Phone, a statewide free public service of the Lotte E. Scharfman Memorial Fund. Individuals with any questions on government; local, state, or national may call the VPhone Monday through Friday, between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. The number in the Boston area is 357-5880. Outside the Boston area, callers should dial: 1-800-882-1649 toll free.

Goulet & Company Have Musical Stardom Their Goal

By POLLY DREDGE

Goulet & Company, a musical trio established nearly two years ago, has received favorable reviews from several central Massachusetts newspaper critics and have hopes of hitting the big time.

The trio played in Quincy's Sons of Italy Hall recently attracting a capacity audience.

Allan Goulet of Taunton, is lead singer, saxophonist, clarinetist, and flutist. Joseph Contrino, alias "Joe Conti" of Braintree, formerly of South Quincy, is a vocalist and cordonvox player. Scotty Record of Middleboro is drummer, flutist, impressionist, and comedian.

The trio's four-hour act is dominated by the three-hour stint providing music for all ages. Their musical repertoire includes everything from big band favorites to nostalgia tunes of the 1950's, and contemporary music. A one-hour floor show highlights the act, featuring drummer Scotty Record. Record supplies a constant stream of comedy throughout the act, but specializes in impressions of such notables as Johnny Mathis, Robert Goulet, and Anthony Newley.

The group last November released their first album, "You Ain't Heard Nothing Yet," featuring an original ballad, "Did She Ask?", written by Patrick DiGiso of Braintree and sung by Conti. The album was released through Metcalf Recording Studios of New Bedford.

The group has played at the Americana Hotel, Albany, N.Y.; the Sheraton-Lincoln, Worcester; and at the grand opening of a Sheraton Hotel in Sturbridge. They were the feature of the sixth annual Chief Petty Officers' Ball in the spring of 1974, and appeared on Worcester's Ch. 27 in a benefit performance for the bloodline.

Future engagements include Miami Beach, Albany, and a week in Costa del Sol, Spain. The trio is striving for an engagement at the popular Las Vegas hotel-casino-night club, Stardust.

Conti, former Quincy resident, attended Quincy schools, and is a graduate of Quincy High School. During his employment as manager of Charles Bean Music Company, Quincy Square, Conti met Record and Goulet. The meeting launched him on his full-time career as a performer.

Conti, actually Joseph Contrino, is married to the former Jean Purpora. They have two sons, Adam, 5, and Jay, 3. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard S. Purpora of 27 Ferrier St., West Quincy. Her husband is the son of James V. Contrino of 20 Pearl St., South Quincy, and the late Angelina Contrino.

The Massachusetts Society Of Optometrists Presents

Guest Editors--
Miss Galante's First Grade
At Gridley Bryant School

Editor, Cathy Conley

A NEWSPAPER FOR AND BY THE CHILDREN OF QUINCY

Seymour Safely Visits Quincy

March is "Save Your Vision" month. The Massachusetts Society of Optometrists, along with its Boston Chapter and its Auxiliary, has sponsored this issue of "Young Ideas" to bring the message of good vision and eye safety to the children of Quincy.

Who do you suppose came to Quincy to help us deliver our eye safety message? Seymour Safely! Seymour Safely is a lovable cartoon character created by the American Optometric Association as a spokesman for good, healthy eyes.

A happy chap, Seymour Safely emphasizes all the wonderful things we can do with our eyes - reading, drawing, learning, observing nature. "It's a joy to see" is his favorite expression.

Seymour Safely visited Miss Galante's first grade at Gridley Bryant School in the form of a puppet show. The show was put on by Mrs. Florence Blanchard, president of the Auxiliary of the Massachusetts Society of Optometrists. Three of the first graders operated the puppets along with Mrs. Blanchard.

In the show, Seymour Safely has an important message for all of us: "Protect your eyes. Take care of your vision. Our world is full of things you will want to see."

This issue of "Young Ideas" explores Seymour's message in many ways. Miss Galante's first graders are our assistant editors. They interviewed Dr. Donald Magee, an optometrist, and asked him how to protect our eyes. Several assistant editors told us what their favorite sights are. One first grader even blindfolded himself to tell us what it is like not to be able to see.

Read Dr. Magee's interview carefully as he tells us how to take care of our eyes.

Little noises scare me because I don't know what they are. I think I'm listening to things much more closely. I'm going to take good care of my eyes. I sure wouldn't want not to be able to see."

That wonderful special day for your special love...

Bicentennial love story... the American wedding day

Every year is a special one for brides, but this year has a significance all its own — it's America's Bicentennial. A look back into our history to see what brides and weddings were like in Revolutionary times provides some fascinating information.

The American colonists brought most of their social customs with them from England, of course, and generally what was fashionable in England was here too.

The Puritan tradition (beginning with Cromwell in the mid-1600's) had frowned on big wedding celebrations, and on merriment of any kind — as a result, a small, quiet marriage at home was the rule.

In fact, in America, home weddings remained the fashion until 1850 or so. However, they were not necessarily small and quiet. In any but the strictest homes there was dancing after a wedding, sometimes far into the night, just as there is today. In rural areas, a wedding was an occasion for several days' worth of partying.

The typical wedding ceremony was fairly simple, in the Protestant tradition (most Americans being Protestant) — there were prayers, a short sermon, the marriage vows, and some hymns. The guests would then drink the "posset," a kind of hot punch — as a signal that the wedding was over and the party could begin.

In early New England the couple's attendants would scramble not for the bride's bouquet, but for her garter — the winner, like the modern bridesmaid who catches the bouquet, was supposed to be the next to marry.

Sometimes the wedding guests would put the bride and groom to bed on their wedding night, drinking toasts and offering prayers in the bridal chamber. Then the new couple would be left alone — if they were lucky!

City brides and grooms kept open house the day after the wedding, receiving visits from friends. Rural couples made visits to neighboring towns or plantations. But the honeymoon as we know it didn't develop until well into the 19th century.

A particularly colorful custom in Revolutionary times was known as "Coming Out Bride" — when bride, groom, and guests would put on all their bridal finery and parade into church on the Sunday, or sometimes for four Sundays, after the wedding.

Early churches were segregated, with men seated on one side and women on the other — but wedding groups would all sit together, "like a pride of peacocks," as one historian put it. At a certain point in the services the newlyweds would rise and turn slowly around, displaying their fine clothes for the congregation!

And of course, men's fashions in the 1700's were as splendid as women's — men, too, wore silks, satins, damasks and velvets.

Though times have changed since America was born, the wedding day remains the same in spirit — a very special celebration, shared in by bride and groom and those who love them. So whether your wedding will be old-fashioned or newfangled, you're part of a long and wonderful tradition.

Some special touches for that wonderful day

See professional early for portfolio of wedding photos to suit any budget

Some are grand and extraordinarily expensive. Others are simple and modestly priced.

Whatever type of wedding you are planning, it deserves to be preserved in professional photographs. A bride must decide to economize on some things, but not on photographic coverage of this all-important occasion. For it is the photographs that will keep the day's events alive in years to come.

Kodak experts advise prospective brides to book a professional photographer as soon as the date is set, especially if she is getting married on a weekend during one of the more popular bridal months — June, August, or December.

Several weeks before the occasion the bride and groom-to-be should sit down with the photographer and plan the type of photos they'll want. Most ask for a formal bridal couple portrait, one of the bride alone, one of the bride and groom, and immediate families, and several informal photographs of the wedding ceremony and reception.

Look at your photographer's portfolio of other wedding photos he's made and consider different styles you'd like. Wedding portraits can be formal, dramatic and romantic with special photographic effects and props; or they can be informal, casual, even candid, if you prefer.

If you are planning a budget wedding, check the MOMENTS TO REMEMBER in professional wedding photographs. Even for a budget wedding, plan to have a photographer on hand all day. You may buy additional prints over a period of time, building your wedding album and collection.

photographer's package prices. It is always best to have him photograph from start to finish for you'll never be able to recreate the event at a later date.

For a more complete set of wedding photographs, perhaps your relatives may wish to give you additional prints as wedding gifts. Your photographer has gift certificates for this purpose. And, you might wish to order additional prints later for your six-month's anniversary.

Wedding photographs make ideal gifts from the newlywed couple to their close friends and relatives. You may wish to have the photographer frame large color prints of the bridal party for holiday gifting.

And consider the photographer's collection of Kodak Special Moments cards — a portrait and card all in one for you to express thanks for the wedding gifts you received.

Economical or extravagant, your wedding should be recorded in professional photographs.

ORANGE BLOSSOMS

The orange blossom has been a bridal flower since ancient times. The goddess Juno gave Jupiter a "golden apple" on their wedding day — some say the golden apple was an orange; thus its blossom became associated with happiness in marriage.

LET THEM EAT CAKE

Whether a wedding be large or small, traditional or in a country garden, the wedding cake adds beauty and excitement to the day.

An added modern day custom is to put the top layer of the cherished cake in the freezer, to be savoured on their first anniversary.

Formal dress rules are relaxed as today's groom comes into his own day... and rightly so. The groom and his men traditionally dressed alike. But this spring the groom at last comes into his own. After Six, Inc., a major influence in formal wear fashions for the man, reports a new fashion development as a direct response to brides who've been seeking to give their mates equal prominence and fashion awareness on their "together-at-last" day.

The formal wear company is introducing for the spring-summer season a distinctive new outfit for the groom, the Charleston. It's a dashing new fashion inspired by the courtly antebellum era.

The Charleston is inspired by the traditional tailcoat with squared-off tails and coat front trimmed in contrasting velvet. It's available in soft shades of candlelight, mist grey, cloud blue, and sparkling white. The company has striven for a total look of elegance and coordination with deeply ruffled shirts and a special groom's sash and butterfly tie to match the jacket trim. Trousers, of course, are perfectly matched.

The groom's men wear the same color, but the formal styling is different. The Newport II jacket features traditional one-button model styling enhanced by a deep U-shaped vest, trimmed with velvet braid. Their shirts and ties match the groom's exactly.

Robert C. Rudofker, President of After Six Formal, reports an overwhelming acceptance for this new look created by his company and available at formal wear rental specialists all over the country.

"Today's young couples," he stated, "want all the glamour and beauty they can pack into the most momentous day of their life. There is no longer any reason for underplaying the fashion role of the men in the wedding party."

Packing tips keep clothes fresher on honeymoon trip

After the excitement of your wedding day, you'll be off for your honeymoon. Whether it's a big trip or a small one, you'll save a lot of bother if you plan your packing carefully. Here are some hints:

- Pack shoes, hair dryers, clocks, and other heavy things at the hinge side of your suitcase — they'll be on the bottom when you carry it, so they won't crush your clothes.

- Pack firmly. Loosely-packed clothes will shift around in transit and wrinkle more easily.

- Pack in sections and not in layers — sportswear together, evening wear together, lingerie together. It's easier to get at things that way, and easier to re-pack firmly.

- Distribute weight evenly on both sides of your suitcase (pack one heavy article at either end of the hinge), and it will be easier to carry.

- Fasten all buttons and zippers, then fold everything in thirds lengthwise — a lengthwise fold will come out naturally as you wear the garment.

- Pack all liquids (shampoo, cosmetics) and aerosols in a separate carry-on case.

- Take clothes that don't wrinkle easily.

- Because you'll be trying to save as much space as possible, take clothes and accessories that you can mix and match.

LOTS OF SEA, SUN and sarongs sum up life on the French Caribbean Island of Guadeloupe. The international blend of cultures makes the island a perfect spot for newlyweds who want a different kind of honeymoon.

Elegant wedding gifts they'll treasure

Don't just wish your favorite bride and groom "live happily ever after." Help them along with a wedding gift that brings beauty, elegance and graciousness to their first home, the Jewelry Industry Council suggests.

A treasured gift
A gift of silver, china or crystal for the table is sure to be treasured by the latest generation of wedding marchers with their well-developed tastes for fine things of quality. And you'll be treasured for helping them get started on the kind of lifestyle they want to share in the years ahead.

Today's bride really values silver and the "something special" glow it brings to her table. A piece of flatware that helps complete a place setting makes an important silver gift. Serving pieces and extras, especially teaspoons, are always appreciated by a new bride.

Silver and china

Consider a gift of multipurpose silver holloware that lets the new bride give her table, or her first home, an imaginative touch. Because today's bride won't reserve her silver just for guests. She'll put its beauty and practical usefulness to work every day.

There are luxury and elegance apparent in the richly decorated china and crystal finding favor with today's bride and groom. But young marrieds demand practicality and modern convenience in china as well. This means oven, freezer and dishwasher properties.

Wedding costs: who pays what, where and when

So many details go into your wedding — and each one is important. Deciding who pays for each of them can be confusing. The following list of expenses should help. In general, unless the groom's family offers to help with the reception costs, the whole wedding ceremony is the responsibility of the bride's family.

Optional expenses include:

Bachelor dinner — may be given by the groom himself or his attendants or friends.

Rehearsal dinner — el-

Bridal registry

And don't forget to consult the Bridal Registry of the bride's jeweler, the Council further advises. It's a gold mine of gift ideas with its up-to-date record of the bride's pat-ther the groom's family or the bride's family and friends give it.

Bridesmaids' luncheon — given either by the bride or by her family or friends.

Attendants' dresses — usually bought by the attendants themselves, but the bride may buy them.

Bride's bouquet — usually a gift from the groom, but the bride's family may buy it.

Corsages for mothers and grandmothers — usually provided by the groom, but the bride may want to buy them herself.

tern choices in silver, china and crystal, the bride's preferences, and the items she has already received.

You can't go wrong with a gift the bride herself has chosen!

Bridal showers forecast

Looking for an unusual theme for a bridal shower? Think about a garden shower, whether or not the future bride will really have a garden out of doors. Clusters of potted plants in an apartment need lots of TLC and will bring many hours of delight.

Guests can bring seeds, flowering bulbs, unusual plants, handsome pots, plant stands, planting tools, books on growing greens and flower arranging. Another unusual idea would be a wine shower with an assortment of wines, wine glasses, graceful carafes, pitchers and even cheese boards.

Imagine the delight of the novice cook, being fetted with a recipe shower. Each guest brings her favorite recipe or two and a suitable dish in which to prepare it. The possibilities are endless.

Liberated nuptial legends

Years ago in old Germany, when the hands of the bride and groom were solemnly joined by the priest, a struggle traditionally ensued for who "would have the upper hand!" The hand that ended up on top would rule the roost.

In the 1800's a similar wedding ceremony tradition was the custom in France. As the groom attempted to put the ring on her finger, the bride struggled to keep the ring from going past her knuckle. If she succeeded, it meant that she would be boss.

From the north of France came the custom involving a 30 foot leap by the bride, from a cliff, into the arms of her waiting groom! Should the bride suffer the least injury on landing, the honeymoon was over.

These are traditions that were the roots of our emancipated brides of today... customs Grandma forgot to confide in us.

THE UNVEILING

Wedding veils were unheard-of in the 1700's. Instead, hats, trimmings or flowers were used. It's said that Maria Monroe

(the daughter of President James Monroe) along with her sister and mother wore ostrich plumes in their hair!

Each tradition... the exciting colour... the warmth and sentiment of your Wedding day... captured with the skill and care it deserves... CIRO'S... a name in Wedding Photography to trust and remember for that most important day of your lives.

Flowers add note of romance

By KAREN WILBERT

Flowers have been a part of weddings for centuries. They are treasured for the beauty, color, and wealth of tradition which they bring to marriage ceremonies of every size and description.

Worn or carried by every member of the wedding party, flowers provide a decorative background for religious rites and reception festivities alike. A few well-placed flowers make the most austere church or chapel look festive and pretty and add an aura of romance to the most modest house or restaurant.

A bouquet of flowers is traditionally carried by the bride and each of her attendants at all but the most informal weddings. It may be anything from a large armload of flowers to a small nosegay, but it should be scaled to the bride's size and complement her dress.

For example, a loose cascade of feathered chrysanthemums might be stunning for a tall bride in a long flowing dress, but overpowering to a short girl with a simpler look.

The bride's bouquet may be made of many flowers in many colors, though it is best to choose the natural hues of the flowers (that is, violets instead of purple-dyed carnations). Or one may choose all white, traditionally mixed with ivy and other greens.

According to florists, white roses are the year-round favorite of most brides. Orchids, carnations, lilies of the valley and gardenias are also popular bridal flowers. Be sure to give the florist a complete description of the bridal dress including the silhouette, length, neckline and sleeves so he can recommend an appropriate style for your bouquet.

Simplicity seems to be the key for this year's bridal attendants, who are choosing fewer parasols, baskets of flowers and colonial bouquets. Rather, single-stem roses and orchids which match a color in the bridesmaid's dress are popular.

Most of the cost of wedding flowers is in the labor. Each flower must be individually wired and wrapped for use in a bouquet or cascade. If a bride decides to carry an arm bouquet the cost will be cut considerably because the flowers will be loose with the stems showing. Cascades are slightly more expensive than nosegays or bouquets. Flowers for holiday weddings, such as Christmas, Valentine's Day, and Easter can be almost twice as expensive as other times of the year. Those holidays are traditionally big flower days, so labor is at a premium.

Floral decorations for the church and reception hall are not as extensive as they once were. One florist commented that by the time a bride gets to the florist, she has spent so much money already that she is trying to cut a few corners. The average bride usually spends about $150 on wedding flowers.

Most florists can handle only a certain number of weddings a day, so they recommend booking a wedding date at least a month in advance of the wedding, and more if the event is near a holiday or during the summer.

Family meeting initiated by the groom's family

The first contact between the bride's and groom's families should be initiated by the groom's parents. This can be done by a simple telephone call or letter extending an invitation to dinner at home or in a restaurant.

The bride and groom may wish to attend, if only to perform the necessary introductions.

Should the groom's family not make the initial overture, it is perfectly proper for the bride's parents to do so.

In those cases where the parents live at too great a distance from each other for a convenient get-together, a congenial letter from the mother of the groom is acceptable.

Miss Galante's First Graders

A Classroom Interview

Take care of your eyes.
You'll never get another pair. --Dr. Magee

The children in Miss Galante's first grade decided to ask an expert how to keep their eyes safe and healthy. They interviewed Dr. Donald Magee, an optometrist from Quincy.

Dr. Magee, what does an optometrist do?

An optometrist is a doctor who takes care of your eyes. All children should have their eyes examined by an optometrist before they start school, and every year after that.

What causes the most eye injuries?

Small, sharp objects which get beyond our natural defenses around the eye and hit the eye itself. Keep away from the targets of BB guns, darts, bows-and-arrows, pea shooters, sling shots and similar toys. Never run with any pointed or sharp objects in your hands like scissors or pencils. And be careful of your pet's claws. Pick up your cat or dog with the claws away from your face.

Dr. Magee, what if you get something in your eye?

Try to blink. This should make your eye water and wash it out. If it hurts to blink, tell your mother if you are home. Or go to the school nurse if you are at school. Never rub your eye. This would just make it worse.

How close should you sit to the TV?

Television is not harmful to the eyes as long as it is properly installed and viewed. Do not sit too close. Six feet away is good. Ten feet is ideal. Make sure you have a soft light on in the room. It is better to adjust the brightness and contrast of the TV. AFTER the room lights have been turned on. A normally lit room is best for TV-watching.

Why do we blink?

Blinking keeps the eyes moist. If we didn't blink, the eye would dry up. Blinking sends tears across your eyes. If you notice, there is a tiny hole in the inside corner of your lower lid. This is where the tears drain off. These tears are made up of oil, water and mucus. We blink every 5 or 6 seconds and it is absolutely necessary to our eye health.

Is it alright to look at the sun?

Never look directly at the sun. It is an extremely powerful light and can hurt your eyes. Especially during an eclipse, you must be very careful because the light does not look very bright. But can do severe harm to your eyes if you look directly at it.

Why do we see spots after looking at a flash camera?

The eye is made up of many different cells which are always jiggling. A flash causes a chemical reaction in some of these cells. It "bleaches" them out for a short time. Then it takes a little while for the cells to go back to their original form.

How important is rest to the health of our eyes?

Rest is extremely important. Our eyes were originally made to see things far away. Our ancestors were hunters and farmers. Now our eyes are asked to do a great deal of close work. This is against their nature. Resting helps them to adjust.

Quincy YMCA Receives National Award

The Quincy YMCA was awarded a National Certificate of Achievement at a recent board of directors meeting, for excellence of its Health and Physical Education Program—a program which presently involves over 6,000 members from the South Shore Community.

The certificate will enable the Quincy YMCA to enter its registered amateur athletes in official regional and national sports competition with YMCAs around the country and to participate in National Physical Education Programs.

Peter G. Ruscito, president of the YMCA Board of Directors, praised the Physical Department for its leadership in providing recreation and physical fitness programs for the entire South Shore area.

The certificate, presented to Nelford J. Platner, co-chairman of the Physical Education Committee, is awarded every three years by the National Council of YMCAs to member associations to meet the standards set by the YMCA National Health and Physical Education Committee.

To meet these standards, YMCA's must conduct a balanced program of physical education, have a physical education committee, and volunteer leaders to give guidance in policy and program development, and use the National YMCA Aquatic Program in its building and camps. It must also maintain qualified professional leaders and operate with an up-to-date written policy.

Wollaston MBTA Bus Driver Honored For Safe Driving

A Wollaston man was among five MBTA bus drivers recently presented safety awards for compiling a total of more than 37 years of safe driving.

MBTA Chairman Robert B. Kiley in presenting a special 11-year Safe Driver pin to Coleman J. Walsh, 54, of Wollaston, congratulated him and said,

"I think this record is truly remarkable because it means not only have you avoided causing any accidents since Aug. 26, 1964, but you have avoided all the people who have caused accidents to happen to others. And in this state, that's no mean trick!

"You really have to be a defensive driver to avoid getting hit when you're driving eight hours a day for 11 years."

Walsh begins his day at 7 a.m. and makes two trips from Riverside to Chauncy Street on the No. 300 express bus route in the morning. In the afternoon, he drives students from Boston Technical High in Roxbury to Ashmont Station. He then drives the No. 6 route, the Army Base in South Boston to Haymarket and winds up with a rush-hour trip on the Chauncy Street-Brighton Center No. 301 express bus route. His day ends about 6 p.m.

Walsh works out of the Cabot Transportation Center in South Boston. Last year, he was presented the Richard D. Buck "Safe Driver Award" after completing 10 years without an accident.

An MBTA employee since September, 1948, Walsh lives at 42 Chester St., with his wife Kathleen.

In addition to the Safe Driver pin, Walsh received a $100 savings bond and a special commendation in recognition of his achievement.

A graduate of South Boston High School, he attended Boston University where he studied business administration. He attended several other colleges in completing a course sponsored by the Mechanical Contractors Association of America. Some of the courses included legal aspects of the construction industry, legal rules of bids and contracts, evaluation of real property and practical procedures of purchasing.

Sgt. Daniel Lyons of Quincy and Officer Jack McDonald of Milton, who are in charge of their respective juvenile divisions.

Scouts Visit Quincy Sun

Cub Scouts of Den 3, Pack 14, visited The Quincy Sun recently to view firsthand the workings of a newspaper.

The scouts, all of Wollaston, were Charles Abbott, John Donovan, Richard LaFlamme, Mark O'Brien, Jonathan Tweedy and Richard Wallace. Diane Abbott and Tara O'Brien, mascots, accompanied the scouts on their tour.

Gloria Abbott and Janice O'Brien, co-den leaders, accompanied the scouts on their tour.

The boys first visited the editorial and advertising departments on the street-floor of the office. They then toured the lower level of the office where they saw news headlines being set by a Compugraphic 7200 photo typesetting machine.

They also saw a new story telling of their visit to The Quincy Sun being set by our IBM computer system. The finished story was then transferred to the production department where a paste-up artist fixed the story into proper position on paste-up boards.

The scouts are planning bi-weekly visits to all the historical sites in Quincy as a special bicentennial project.

Before leaving the office, each scout received a complimentary copy of The Quincy Sun.

MONEY TALKS

The High Cost Of

'Sophisticated' Investment

By Philip J. Lawrence, President

Colonial Federal Savings
And Loan Association

of Quincy, Holbrook and Waltham
8 - 6 Weekdays 8 - 7:30 Thursdays

A friend reported to us recently an experience that still baffles him. As trustee of an independent college-prep school, Frank was asked to serve on a committee to plan the investment of a $500,000 gift the school had received.

The instruction given to the committee was maximum return commensurate with safety of principal. Various investment possibilities were considered, and the committee voted to hear the proposal of the trust and management group of a national bank. It had a top rating among seventy-five of the largest pooled fixed income accounts in the country.

After the usual presentation of credentials, the bank representatives called attention to various charts of performance. For the year 1974, they proudly reported their total fund enjoyed a 9.96 per cent annual investment income rate of return.

Committee members were impressed until our friend Frank inquired if the figure represented income from principal alone or income plus capital gain. "This was income on investment only," the banker replied.

Frank then asked for the net return as a combination of income and capital gain or loss.

"The cumulative annual rate of return for 1974 was 2.55 per cent," the banker replied.

Our friend commented that the return of only 2.55 per cent and the obvious capital loss failed to accomplish the investment goals presented to the committee.

"Why shouldn't we take the $500,000 and put it into a savings and loan association and get three times as much return?" he asked the banker.

"We expect to do better this year," was the reply.

Frank is still baffled why the committee ultimately placed the $500,000 into the bank fund. The only reason, he figures, is that it seemed more sophisticated for an investment committee to deal with "skilled trust and investment professionals" than with assured-income and principal-secure savings and loans.

Guest speaker will be Miss Jean Ann MacLean whose topic

'Can Democracy Run An Empire?'

United Nations Council Topic

"Can Democracy Run an Empire?" will be the question Professor Dion James Archon will discuss Thursday, March 11 at 8 p.m. in the Frieda and Joseph Drapkin Student Center at Curry College, Milton. This will be the fifth meeting this season of a series co-sponsored by the United Nations Council of the South Shore and the Leagues of Women Voters of Braintree, Canton, Milton, Quincy and Scituate. Formerly Murphy's Restaurant

The Colonial 1600 Quincy's Newest Restaurant In Familiar Spot

It's called The Colonial 1600 and if the homey atmosphere seems familiar there is a reason. The Colonial 1600, located at 1600 Hancock St., Quincy Center, across from Kincaides, is the successor to Murphy's Restaurant, one of Quincy's favorite family dining spots since 1942.

The owner, Coste Kechris, changed the name to fit the bicentennial mood along with the change in decor, the new and expanded menu and the recently acquired license to sell beer and wine.

The hours are now too - 5:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m., Monday through Friday; 5:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday; closed Sunday. Breakfast, served from 5:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m., features a varied menu from eggs and home fries to pancakes to 99 cent specials to homemade muffins and rolls.

There is a corner for children, for weight watchers, for gourmets and for just plain folks who have no special dietary needs or desires.

There are soft drinks and soda fountain specialties for the kids, a variety of beers and wines, served with meals, for the older folks and coffee with real cream at all hours.

Costa Kechris, who is the chef as well as the owner of The Colonial 1600, was born and raised in Quincy, studied restaurant and hotel management in college and served an apprenticeship in hotels in Boston and England.

He learned his art from internationally known chefs, who helped him to perfect some of the recipes that are served in his restaurant.

Mrs. Kechris, mother of their two children, works by her husband's side in the evenings to help maintain for the Colonial 1600 the same reputation as a family dining spot that was enjoyed by Murphy's Restaurant.

Kensco Opens Larger Store

Kensco Communications opens a new, larger store today [Thursday] at 29 Independence Ave., South Quincy near the Adams Birthplaces.

Kensco first opened its doors in July of 1972 and went "full-time" in March of 1973. In the past three years Kensco has become the largest retailer of two-way radio equipment, police/fire monitors and crystals in the area south of Boston.

Ronald A. Walsh, owner, noted the company was forced to move to larger quarters due to the amount of business. With the new store, the company will be increasing its available space over four times.

The success of the company, he said, can be attributed to its insistence on specializing solely in communications equipment.

"We don't sell stereos for the home, appliances or televisions," he said. "Our business is only communications. That's why we do a better job for our customers."

Kensco's most popular items have been fire/police monitors whereby the listener actually hears radio transmissions from these departments as they actually happen. The store boasts an inventory of 20,000 crystals which are used to "tune in" the various police or fire departments selected for listening. According to Walsh, a crystal is available for any community desired. Crystals are also available at Kensco Communications for other radio frequencies such as marine and radio-telephones.

More and more families are equipping their automobiles with two-way radios from Kensco Communications. These people generally use combination transmitter/receivers operating on the Citizens Band. Licenses are necessary for citizen band operation. However, no code or exams are necessary. Kensco Communications provides the forms to be used, when applying, as a service.

The citizens band is a radio system whereby transceivers are located in cars [mobile] or Home [base and each unit can talk to any other unit easily. The price for one system is less than $200, at Kensco Communications.

In the future Walsh plans to limit Kensco's product line to communications to continue to provide the highest expertise and service available.

Quincy Basketball, Hockey Teams Bow Out Of Tourney

The Quincy basketball and hockey teams wound up successful seasons last week despite being ousted from the state tournaments.

Both coaches vowed to be back in the post-season events next season.

Joe Amoroso's basketball team, in the tournament for the first time in 11 years, displayed a tenacious defense and exploded in the final period to defeat Braintree, 68-53, in its opening game, but was eliminated by Duxbury, one of the top-seeded teams with a 20-1 record, 76-67, Friday night at Taunton.

The Presidents fell behind, 59-42, after three periods but fought back to cut the margin to even points and they had nothing to be ashamed of.

"These kids did a tremendous job this year and never quit once all year long," Amoroso said. "We've got a fine nucleus coming back next year (led by 6-6 Jack Uhlar, the number two scorer) and I think we can make the tournament again. We fulfilled a lot of goals that we had set early in the year."

A quick collapsing zone took the inside game away from Uhlar and John Riggs, the number one scorer, had one of his few cold nights. Each scored only nine points, a big reason for the loss. Mike Lamie picked up the scoring slack with 16 points, Steve Connelly had 12, Bob Dacey 11 and Ed Daley 10.

Braintree gave Quincy a game for three periods, trailing by only 50-45, after three periods, but the Presidents' defense came to the fore and they outscored the Wamps, 18-8, in the final period.

Uhlar had 24 points and Riggs 21 to pace the attack.

Bob Sylvia's hockey team, which had gone unbeaten in its last seven games to qualify for the tournament, was eliminated in the opening round by Christopher Columbus, 7-2, but the loss didn't take anything away from an outstanding season.

"No one will forget our great comeback during the second half of the season when, with seven games left, we could lose only one and qualify," Sylvia said.

"It was a fine season and the way the boys continually fought back to win or tie games was a source of great satisfaction. We've got a lot of youngsters on this club and they will be back to try for another tournament berth next year." The Presidents' returnees will be led by sensational sophomore Brian Bertoni, one of the top scorers in the Suburban League after being moved from defense to forward.

In the finale, all-scholastic Frankie Guest, the league's top scorer, had two assists, giving him 55 points for the season. The goals were scored by Bill Hamill and Bob Barry with Hamill also having an assist.

Kiwanis Hockey Tourney A Real Team Effort

The response from the participants and spectators told it all: this year's Kiwanis International Tournament was a tremendous success.

And a lot of credit should be given to the people that made it possible.

Four days of hockey games running continually from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. at two rinks; 64 teams - 1200 boys from Canada, New York, Philadelphia and the New England states, getting together for good tournament play. It took a lot of work.

Planning for the tournament started last August. Tournament Director Frank Mills of the Quincy Kiwanis Club organized the entire tournament format, including selection of the Tournament Committee, arranging game schedules and officials, and supervising all tournament play. He was present at every game to handle any problems and make sure everything ran smoothly.

Tournament Coordinator Linda Champagne, assistant manager of Quincy Youth

Arena, was in constant communication with everyone involved in the tournament, arranging invitations and game times with the coaches, housing for all the out-of-state boys, and keeping everyone informed of all arrangements being made.

The Tournament Committee included:

Ed Hold, board member and coach of Quincy Youth Hockey; Harry Messina, past president and coach; Bill Mahar, president and coach of Weymouth Youth Hockey; and Jack Frazier, past all-star director and coach of Weymouth Youth Hockey.

Their job was to select the most competitive state teams, set up game rules and schedules, and handle any questions from coaches during the tournament.

For those four days, they were at each rink from 6 a.m. to 11 p.m. to oversee each game.

It took a lot of time and effort, but everyone agreed it was worth it to make this year's tournament one of the finest held in the East Coast.

Cranberry League O'Brien Club, Hotshots In Tourney Showdown

The Cranberry Basketball League will begin its playoffs Saturday at North Quincy High with Quincy's two entries, O'Brien Club and Palmer Hotshots, playing at 1 p.m. and New Bedford Continentals facing Brockton Ringside at 2:30. Sunday night at West Junior High in Brockton the losers will play at 6 and the winners at 8.

The O'Brien Club and Hotshots will play next Wednesday at 5:15 p.m. at Boston Garden in a preliminary to the Celtics-Los Angeles Lakers game.

Last weekend both teams played in the seventh annual DiBari Memorial Tourney at Brockton and the O'Briens reached the finals before bowing to Plymouth A.A., 91-81.

In the first round O'Brien topped Quincy Nets, 86-62, in the second round it defeated the Rice Club of Cambridge, 75-62, and then upset the Hotshots, 56-63, to make the finals. The Hotshots had upset the Haynes/Crump Bruins of Boston in the second round after defeating Blue Magic in the opening round.

The O'Brien Club and New Bedford tied for the league title with 16-5 records, followed by Hotshots, 15-6, and Ringside, 11-10.

Earlier the O'Brien Club had won the 44th annual Plymouth Kiwanis Tournament with an 87-78 win over New Bedford, a 93-78 decision over the Brockton Huskies and a 79-66 win over the Plymouth A.A. in the title clash.

Ken Boyd, on loan from the Hotshots, sparked the O'Briens with 79 points in the tourney and was the outstanding player. Other standouts for the Quincy club were Jim O'Brien, Mark Raternik, Brian Hammel and Gary Bowen.

4 From Quincy, North In Wrestling Tourney

The Quincy and North Quincy High wrestling seasons came to a close last weekend with two Presidents and two Raiders competing in the state championship tournament at Chelmsford.

Although none of them won state titles, all made good showings, as the two schools finished highly successful second seasons.

Carmen Mariano's Quincy team finished 12-9 and Art Fallon's North grapplers had an 8-11 record.

North's Karl Knudson and Ed Beck, unbeaten during the regular season, and Quincy's Joe Moran and Tim Cahill qualified for the states in the recent sectional tournament in Marshfield.

Knudson, 19-0 for the season (18 wins by pins), won all four of his sectional bouts to win the unlimited class.

Beck, 16-0-2 for the year, placed third in the 98-pound class, Quincy's Moran was second in the 145-pound class and Cahill placed fourth in the 138-pound division.

Also making good showings in the sectionals but failing to qualify for the states were Quincy's Tony Luongo, sixth in the 188-pound class, and Sam Gravina, fifth in the 141-pound class.

Wrestling was revived a year ago at Quincy and North after more than 40 years and each team won only one meet. This year both schools began to reap the benefits of the excellent junior high school program and, with many boys returning on both squads next year, things are looking up. With many outstanding junior high grapplers coming up, the Presidents and Raiders should move up with the leaders in the Suburban League.

Staging one of the great comebacks in the 23 years of tourney bowling, Beau's dropped the first string to the Wollaston Men by 78 pins; but bounced back in the second to win by 69 and close the gap to 9 pins going into the final.

Beau's, loser of last year's final, did not intend to lose this one and continued its hot pace in the third string, for a 51-pin triumph.

members aiding the cause were Paul Mattox 351, Fred Connelly 349, Buster Loud 326, and Ron Leone 325.

The Sunday Night Men, runnerup in their first tourney try, showed a consistent team effort to no avail. Ron Walker was tops with 346, Bob Reynolds and Bob Wells had 335 each, Ron Johnston scored 328 and Dick Spano 326.

Following the championship match Richard J. Koch, Tourney Director, presented a check for $100. and a winning team trophy to Beau Page and his team.

The Wollaston Sunday Night Men's League received a $25. consolation award.

Each year the tourney is sponsored by the Koch Club of Quincy as part of its winter athletic and recreation programs.

The 23-year tourney records remained in tact with Colonial Merchants-owning the high three string total of 1869 captured in 1972, and Lum's Colonial holding the high team single string of 649 bowled in 1970.

Individual honors are shared by Roger Delgiacchio with a three string total of 441 bowling for Quincy Center in 1968; and Dennis Chick who holds the high tourney single string of 189 rolled in 1972 with the Whitman Merchants.

It was the first time a Quincy team had won since 1971 when the Quincy Merchants won. Carlyle Merchants of Whitman was the winner the past two years and Colonial Merchants of South Weymouth the previous two.

Council Criticizes 'Lack Of Information' From Mayor's Office

[Cont'd from Page 1]

Allis Chalmers," warned LoCicero.

Harrington's patience dissolved under a barrage of figures on hourly maintenance, repair and rental costs, dump receipts and expenditures and purchase prices.

"This material is unclear," he said. "These orders should not be on the agenda unless the administration is prepared to have the information ready for us. I'm not prepared to vote just because someone says this is wrong or that is wrong."

"Object to it."

Harrington's objection killed, at least for the time being, LoCicero's bid for the $13,000.

Next came A. Fred Lane, director of Quincy Heritage, supporting a request for $11,000 to be transferred from Heritage's miscellaneous income account to its expense account.

Lane, who has been on the job for about six weeks, explained that part of the sum was to go for salaries for the director and his assistant for nine weeks in March and April.

Salaries, City Auditor Charles L. Shea pointed out, come under personal services, not expenses.

"Personal services were not mentioned to me when the order was drafted," said Shea. "The way this order is written none of the money can be used for salaries."

About this time there arrived on each councillor's desk an order appointing Alfonso D. Papile, 67, a tenant in the Pagnano Towers Senior Citizens complex, as a member of the Quincy Housing Authority.

Since a number of senior citizens had been waiting nearly two hours for this moment, Council President Tobin put Lane aside to collect his thoughts and took up the matter of confirming Papile.

It put the Council in a quandry. Members were plainly angry over the late arrival of the appointment order but they couldn't take it out on the senior citizens or Papile, a popular man who everyone calls "Pop."

The chief problem was that Papile had been nominated by Mayor LaRaia without going through the process of screening by a tenant committee.

Councillor Paul Harold praised the Mayor for his selection of Papile.

"But," he added, "I am critical of the way the appointment was made. We are getting the right result the wrong way. It is unfortunate that Mayor LaRaia has by passed tenant participation."

"I am serving notice now that in the future I will not support any appointment that is not put through a screening by tenants."

"A good appointment... long past due" said Harrington. "But when the City Council is asked to approve an appointment I heard first on the radio and were not given until 9 p.m., then something is wrong."

Papile's appointment, of course, sailed through unanimously and, while some members of the Council fumed, Mayor LaRaia himself appeared to shake the hands of the senior citizens as they left for their buses.

"Not to brag, gentlemen," said Papile jovially, "but this is one of the best appointments you have made," and the councillors smiled and turned back to Lane, who had been in consultation with Auditor Shea.

Lane agreed that he had been mistaken in including salaries in his request and he commenced to have difficulty explaining the rest of the appropriation, particularly to first term Councillor Daniel G. Raymond.

"Is this the correct terminology?" Lane once asked Raymond anxiously.

"I don't know," replied the councillor. "I'm new here myself."

Councillor Leo J. Kelly ended the exchange by objecting to the order, which effectively consigned it to limbo along with Commissioner LoCicero's $13,000 repair bill.

"I'm just totally confused by the money order," said Kelly. "And I'm worried about the checks and balances system in our city government. Something isn't happening."

"The information isn't coming in to the City Council so we can vote the yeas and nays. I'd like to see better communication between the administration and the Council."

The Council was in a mood best described as sullen when Planning Director Lars O. Lundin stepped up to request transfer of $2,500 from his salary account to his expense account.

Expenses were higher than anticipated, he explained, chiefly because of a $1,200 report on water quality in Quincy Bay and $1,000 for advertising "an unusually large number of zoning requests from the City Council."

The department's personal services account, he added, had $10,000 left over due to a six month leave of absence granted a previous director and a long vacancy in the job of development coordinator.

The assault was mounting on the startled Lundin, who admitted that the money was not needed at that precise moment, when Councillors Powers and Harrington intervened.

"He has not been in the job long but at least he is prepared," said Powers. "If he came in at the last moment to ask emergency funds we would look back and say, 'Why do you come in at the last minute?'"

"I agree with the premise [of not appropriating money until it's needed]," said Harrington. "But he is the wrong person to pick on."

"We spent his money. He's not asking money from the excess and deficiency fund. He has the money in his personal services account. He lived within his budget. The City Council spent it on him."

The next item of business involved minor raises in pay for some workers at the hospital and the health department, raises either guaranteed by contract or ordered by the State Labor Board, but even that was enveloped by confusion.

Council President Tobin couldn't find the original copy of the order, even though each councillor was equipped with a Xeroxed copy. By the time it was located and sent to the ordinance committee, tempers were frayed once again.

It was then that Tobin moved to suspend the rules and continue the meeting beyond the 11 p.m. deadline but Harrington moved instead to adjourn and it was done.

"The City Council is perturbed that it is not getting the proper information in support of its orders," said Tobin. "Ever since the first meeting we have been getting insufficient information."

"The Housing Authority appointment papers were not handed to the City Clerk until halfway through the meeting. These senior citizens had to sit here for two hours while we waited for it."

"It's the two grandstand plays that upset me. First there was the night [a week ago Monday] when all the city employees came in. Tonight all the senior citizens were brought up."

"If the proper paper work is not done and if the proper notification is not given, then the Council will take no action on orders and people will be told that they are being used."

Quincy Heritage To Remain After Bicentennial Says LaRaia

Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia has denied speculation that Quincy Heritage may go out of business when its current funding runs out June 30.

"This is the bicentennial year," he told The Quincy Sun. "Quincy Heritage cannot possibly be dissolved in June in view of the activities being planned well into the summer. "As far as longevity goes, there will be some semblance of Quincy Heritage long after the bicentennial is over."

"It is important for us to promote Quincy's heritage as a focal point of history in this area. It will benefit the business as well as cultural enterprises in the city."

Creedon Forms 10 Committees To Smooth Double Sessions

Supt. of Schools Dr. Lawrence P. Creedon has formed 10 committees to smooth the path for the placement of students from Quincy and North Quincy High Schools on double sessions in Quincy High School next fall.

The names of the committees and their chairmen are:

Curriculum and Instruction, William Phinne, assistant superintendent for instruction.

Personnel, John Osterman, assistant superintendent for personnel.

Business and Plant, Work Study and Distributive Education, Maurice Daly, assistant superintendent for Vocational Education.

Community, John Mahoney, Social Health Coordinator.

Student-Staff Scheduling, Robert Brennan, director of Data Processing and co-chairman Richard Haines, head guidance counselor.

Building Management, Eugene W. Macomber, assistant to Quincy High School Principal Lloyd Creighton and Co-chairman Thomas J. Fitzgerald, North Quincy High School dean.

Security, Alfred P. Nesti, working foreman.

Transportation, Carl Leone, Coordinator of Athletics.

Moving and Storage, John Browne, director of plant facilities.

Food Services, George Cole, food coordinator.

Communications, Jack Savits, engineering consultant.

Arthur Woodward, Coordinator of Secondary Schools, will coordinate and facilitate the progress of the committees.

The committees have identified some 152 major tasks that must be accomplished to insure that double sessions "run smoothly," said School Information Officer Bruce McLain.

Included in the tasks are: Scheduling the students, Moving instructional materials and equipment from North Quincy to Quincy High School, making lunches available to both high school populations.

The assignment of the North Quincy teaching staff to their teaching stations in Quincy High School, resolving conflicts in schedules of teachers with other duties such as coaching, working with the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and local businesses to help students keep or find other jobs to replace any lost due to scheduling.

Transferring the North Quincy telephone system to the Quincy High building, establishment of a School Committee policy on transportation of high school students on double sessions, informing students, teachers, parents, merchants, city departments, MBTA and parent groups of the effect of double sessions on them.

Orientation sessions extending through next fall are being planned for these groups, McLain said.

Starting in September, Quincy High School will go to school in the morning and North Quincy students will attend in the afternoon. The plan will reverse this for the 1977-78 school year.

Quincy Vocational-Technical School will maintain a single session next year, with approximately the same hours as currently scheduled.

'Take Care Of Your Eyes' Young Ideas Theme

By CATHY CONLEY

"Take care of your vision. The world is full of things you will want to see."

The first graders explore this message in many ways including puzzles, games, interviews and artwork. The children interviewed Dr. Donald Magee, an optometrist from Quincy. Several children tell about their favorite sights. One first grader blindfolded himself for 10 minutes to give his feeling on what it would be like without sight.

The section starts on Pages 15 and 16 and concludes on Pages 25 and 26. Just pull the section and you have your very own newspaper.

March is Save Your Vision Month. The Massachusetts Society of Optometrists, along with its Boston Chapter and its Auxiliary, is sponsoring this issue of "Young Ideas" to bring the message of good vision and eye safety to the children of Quincy.

Guest editors are pupils in Miss Ann Galante's first grade at Gridley Bryant School. As a special treat, Mrs. Florence Blanchard, president of the Massachusetts Society of Optometrists, brought a puppet show to the class. Star of the show is Seymour Safely, a character created by the American Optometric Association as a spokesman for good, healthy eyes. Seymour's message in the show is: "Protect your eyes."

Take care of your vision. The world is full of things you will want to see."

Highlight of the issue is the Seymour Safely coloring contest. Seven winners will be chosen - one for each grade from kindergarten to the sixth. Each winner will receive a Seymour Safely puppet designed by Mrs. Florence Blanchard. Deadline for the contest is Friday, March 19.

Meanwhile, don't forget the contest to design a symbol for Project LINC featured in the Feb. 19 issue of "Young Ideas". Project LINC is a program in the Quincy Public School which allows student to visit businesses to learn about them first hand. The symbol should indicate a link between school children and the community.

The winner will work with Project LINC to plan a special day for his or her class - a visit to a place the winner would like to see and approved by Project LINC.

Make sure you put your school, grade, age and address on your entry. Deadline is Friday, March 5.

In Adams Chronicles

WBZ's SHARON KING may have scored a coup with her recent interview with PRESIDENT FORD for "Woman '76". Reportedly, her interview marked the first time a U.S. President has been interviewed by a local station in the oval office... Have you wondered where the exterior shots for "The Adams Chronicles" were filmed? The list runs as follows: Providence, Rhode Island [for Boston], a farmhouse in Foster, Rhode Island [for Brantree], two estates, one on Long Island and one in Rumson, New Jersey [for Quincy] and a pasture in Charleston [for a Civil War battlefield]. In addition, several of the elegant old mansions in Newport were used to simulate foreign embassies and palaces... CHEVY CHASE, writer and performer on NBC's "Saturday Night" has been signed to an exclusive contract by the network... BILL BIXBY'S "The Magician" will replace "Longstreet" in ABC's late-night schedule as of March 11... DESI ARNAZ's autobiography is called, cleverly enough, "A Book". Fans of "I Love Lucy" will be interested in the work, as Arnaz goes into a good deal of behind-the-scenes information about the popular series as well as ex-wife LUCILLE BALL and co-stars VIVIAN VANCE and WILLIAM FRAWLEY... ABC is planning two more specials on ELEANOR and FRANKLIN ROOSEVELT. They also plan to re-run this season's two-part... Followers of LASSIE will be interested to learn that child actor, THOMAS RETTIG, was recently sentenced to five and a half years in Federal prison on conviction of conspiring to import cocaine from Peru to California... Television production costs for the Winter Olympics are running to almost $22 million. Included in the estimate are the costs for the 45 color television cameras, 28 studios and more than 1,000 cameramen and technicians...

Boston Pops lovers may rest easy now that ARTHUR FIEDLER is back at his desk after a bout with pneumonia... WBZ's PAT MITCHELL is conducting a 10-week course at Harvard's Kennedy Institute for Politics. The entertainment critic/"First-4" co-host is titling her series, "Women in Politics"... An interesting sidelight concerning last week's showing of "The Sound of Music" involves the record for having seen the film the most times. According to GUINNESS, Mrs. Myra Franklin, of Cardiff, Wales, has seen JULIE ANDREWS romping around the hills of Austria more than 900 times... WCVB-TV's Boston Legacy Bicentennial series was given the Massachusetts Conference of Christians and Jews' Media Gold Medalion. The series was co-produced by STEVE SCHLOW and PAUL LA CAMERA [son of Herald-American TV editor, ANTHONY LA CAMERA]... Did you watch "The People's Choice Awards"? If so, do you care to explain how ROBERT BLAKE could be nominated for, and WIN, an award for being our favorite performer in a NEW television show when "Baretta" has just been renewed for its third year?... "Upstairs/Downstairs" will miss ANGELA BADDELEY. The popular British actress, who played Mrs. Bridges, the cook on the series, died two weeks ago after contracting the flu and bronchitis. Her sister, HERMIONE BADDELEY, is "Maude's" maid, Mrs. Naugatuck... Watch JACK LEMMON next Wed. on Channel 4 in "The Entertainer". He'll co-star with RAY BOLGER... The Nebraska television station that has a logo similar to the new one used by NBC has filed suit against the network. The Nebraska concern adopted the identification mark in May of 1975. Council Praises Work Of SOU

The City Council may soon cross swords with Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia over the Mayor's order to dissolve the Police Department's Special Operation Unit [SOU].

The matter came up at Monday night's Council meeting while Police Chief Francis X. Finn was explaining a request for $25,210.02 to pay officers back increments ordered by an arbitrator.

"Has the SOU been dissolved?" asked Councillor John J. Lydon Jr. suddenly.

"Not yet," said Finn. "I have no intent to defy the Mayor's orders but it is not that simple. There is work they have started that they have to finish. We have to work out some form of backup."

One by one, several councillors arose to praise the SOU and to cite instances in their experience in which the unit averted serious trouble in the city of Quincy.

"Do you want to do away with the SOU unit?" Council President Arthur H. Tobin asked Finn.

"No, sir," said Finn, adding that, of all the superior officers on the force, only Lt. Corady Solimini, who was appointed inspector of divisions by Mayor LaRaia, is in favor of it.

Tobin then asked Chief Finn to prepare a report on the SOU for the Council.

"I would like to have Mr. Solimini or a representative of the Mayor come before us to state their position so that we can have both sides," added Councillor Warren A. Powers.

Mayor LaRaia said he ordered the SOU dissolved so that more foot patrolmen can be placed on the streets of Quincy.

McPhee Firing Aired At Council Meeting

Gordon McPhee found out why he was fired as assistant director of Quincy Heritage but it took an act of the City Council to get the information.

McPhee, who was information officer in the administration of Mayor Walter J. Hannon, was named assistant director by Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia in January and terminated last week, effective March 12.

McPhee said he met with LaRaia last Thursday and the only reason the Mayor gave him for his dismissal was that "there were a number of commitments made within his administration and, as a result, changes had to be made."

But a more specific reason was given by Heritage Director A. Fred Lane when he appeared before the City Council Monday night in support of an $11,000 appropriation request.

"Is there a need for an assistant director?" asked Councillor Dennis E. Harrington, as the questioning wandered afield.

"Yes," said Lane.

"Then why was Mr. McPhee terminated?"

"It was felt," said Lane, "that the department needed someone with more push to implement its programs. Gordon has done a good job in the past but we were a little bit slow in getting some of the programs off the drawing board."

Harrington also was concerned with rumors that Robert McCarthy, Mayor LaRaia's information officer who works out of the Mayor's office, was going to be transferred to Heritage, which carries his salary in its budget.

"Is Mr. McCarthy going over?" Harrington asked.

"Not to my knowledge," said Lane.

"Is an information officer necessary?" Harrington persisted.

"He is in the Mayor's office," replied Lane.

"You mean the information officer in your budget does not work in your office?"

The question was rhetorical and the Council moved on to other things.

Hospital Blood Bank Expands Donor Hours

The Quincy City Hospital Blood Bank has expanded its donor hours.

The new hours will be Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. The Blood Bank was temporarily initiated in January to handle a record-breaking amount of holiday donors. It has been decided to maintain the new hours in hopes of attracting more daytime donors.

The Quincy City Hospital Blood Bank, one of the few community hospitals on the South Shore licensed to draw blood, drew over 200 pints in January, normally a crisis period. The Blood Bank usually averages 50 pints a month.

Stressing that blood has a shelf life of only 21 days, Mrs. Ruth O'Connell, Supervisor of the Blood Bank, cited the need for a continuing supply of donors each month, especially regular donors who may contribute up to five times yearly.

'Novice' Workers Testimony May Be Indication

Tally Sheets 'Guilty' In Election Case?

By TOM HENSHAW

A possible answer to the big question is emerging from Judge Albert Kramer's inquest into last November's Quincy city election.

The big question, propounded frequently by Judge Kramer during the first three weeks of the part-time hearings, is this:

Why did 500 votes in blocks of 50 all switch from Mayor Walter J. Hannon to Joseph J. LaRaia during the recount in December? Why didn't any go the other way?

The first glimmer of an answer came with Mrs. Lois Marshall, a housewife of 32 McDonald St., West Quincy, and clerk in the Ward 3, Precinct 4 polling place, on the stand.

On the evening of Nov. 4, Mrs. Marshall testified last Thursday, was reading vote totals from a tally sheet to precinct warden James Pettit, who was entering them on a total vote sheet, when one of the 50-vote errors occurred.

Judge Kramer asked Mrs. Marshall to read from the tally sheet just as she had that night. Twice on the stand she misread it, giving the 50 votes to Hannon

Bad News:

$10 Tax Hike Seen

Quincy is faced with a tax rate increase of at least $10 per thousand over the present $159.90 figure.

That's the best estimate of the experts in the LaRaia administration who have been wrestling with figures for the fiscal year 1976-77 almost since they stepped into office in January.

Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia declined to speculate on a more exact figure and he added:

"I'm afraid even to think about it."

The Mayor attributed a large part of the expected tax rate hike to a projected $2 million deficit at the City Hospital.

"The mystery of why there was no tax rate increase last year has been solved," said the Mayor.

"The department budgets in the election year were calculated to carry them for most of the year but not for the entire year. We have to pay the difference now that I am sitting in the Mayor's chair."

He said he met with department heads a week ago and "once again I alerted them that they will have to live within their budgets. They have to find ways to finish the year with the money they have now."

"There is little or no money in the excess and deficiency fund. The last resort would be a layoff of city employees."

One of the unpredictables in the new budget, he said, are salary negotiations with the various unions representing city workers.

But the Mayor promised that the budget will be ready for the City Council by the first week in April. The deadline set by law is April 5.

Brownell Seeks Short Range

Solutions To Quincy Bay Pollution

Rep. Thomas F. Brownell [D-Quincy] has filed a bill which would require the Secretary of Environmental Affairs to investigate short range solutions to pollution in Quincy and Boston Harbors.

House Bill 4049 was scheduled to be heard Tuesday by the Committee on Natural Resources and Agriculture.

Brownell said that although there are a number of long range plans to upgrade coastal waters there are no immediate plans to rectify the causes of pollution in Quincy and Boston Bays.

The recent controversy over the filling-in of 26 acres of Quincy Bay has helped to bring to light the fact that the Nut Island Treatment Plant is only one of the contributing factors to the deterioration in the quality of territorial waters, he

Finn Files Suit Against LaRaia

Both Sides Agree On One Thing: Politics At Bottom Of Squabble

Both sides in the dispute over Police Lt. Corady Solimini's role as inspector of divisions seem to agree on one thing anyway - politics is at the bottom of it.

"It [the dispute] is primarily political," said Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia, who elevated Lt. Solimini over several captains to the job that is regarded as second only to Chief Francis X. Finn in the Police Department.

"It's a political appointment, no question of that," said Atty. Martin S. Cosgrove, who filed suit Monday for Finn in Norfolk Superior Court charging LaRaia exceeded his powers as mayor in appointing Solimini.

Finn's suit also challenged several changes in the Police Department that were ordered by Mayor LaRaia Feb. 11, including dissolution of the Special Operations Unit [SOU] and placing its four members back on uniformed foot patrol.

Mayor LaRaia charged that Finn is taking the matter to court because he has "a personal animosity to Lt. Solimini."

"The people who ran the city for the past 10 years aren't giving up just because I won the election. This is one of the avenues they have chosen to continue their hostility to me."

The previous administrations that Chief Finn has worked for had patterns that are difficult to break. He is reluctant to make changes that would effectively make visible more police officers on the streets."

LaRaia said the changes he directed in the Police Department "also would help to stabilize the cost of operating the department."

"Police duty is primarily a service involving the cost of labor. It is important for us to get the most valuable service we can out of the basic cost of the department."

The City Council last week also evinced an interest in the dissolution of the SOU, asking

McCarthy Assistant Heritage Director, Peatridge Information Officer

Robert McCarthy, the information officer for the LaRaia administration since it took office Jan. 5, has been named assistant director of Quincy Heritage, succeeding the ousted Gordon McPhee.

the Heritage office at 1372 Hancock St.

Short Scheduled To Be Arraigned On Friday

James Short of 365 Palmer St., Germantown, who was retail store coordinator for the first 11 days of the LaRaia administration, is scheduled to be arraigned in Quincy District Court [Friday] on charges of larceny and attempted larceny. The complaints charge Short obtained $500 from Bruno Izzo on Jan. 22 and asked $10,000 from Izzo on or about Jan. 31 in connection with issuance of a license for a restaurant in the old

Reducing Size No Help

LaRaia Adviser Urges City Expedite NQHS Project

Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia's own adviser on the North Quincy High School addition has recommended that the people of Quincy put aside their differences and get moving on the project as soon as possible. Earle F. Littleton of Winchester, who was hired by the Mayor to make a final study of the controversial project which would mean double sessions for North Quincy students at Quincy High, made the following report:

"I recommend that Mayor Joseph LaRaia sign the bond issue as soon as possible.

"Any further delay may abort the entire project, and any attempts to reduce the size of the new construction will result in a loss of the approved 65 per cent support [from the state].

"No reduction in the size of the project will save the city any money but will result in a financial and educational loss.

"The additional space is necessary for the city to approach modern educational space requirements and provide equal opportunity for the students of the city of Quincy to compete with the students of other school systems.

"Every effort should be made to hold the project within the budget and the best protection for the city of Quincy is to retain construction management.

"I recommend that one of two firms, Turner Construction Co. of Boston, or Gilbane Construction Co., Providence, R.I., be retained.

"Construction should proceed as soon as possible and the new facility will be ready for 1978. The use of fast-track," as recommended by the construction manager will assure this.

"The most important recommendation I can make is to urge the Executive Department, the City Council, the School Department, the Quincy Teachers' Association, School Administration and the citizens to cooperate and support the project.

"Forget the inconvenience and consider the future advantages for the city of Quincy."

He said he also reached these conclusions:

"Any attempt to reduce the size of the addition would result in the city of Quincy losing support from the State School Building Assistance Bureau.

"Begin double sessions at Quincy High School in September, 1976."

Mayor LaRaia, who has been reluctant to go along with double sessions at Quincy High if any other alternative was available, said he has given up hope of keeping North Quincy High open during construction.

"All we can do now is try to cut the building time," he said. "I don't believe it will take three years to build. I think at the most two and possible we can reduce that."

"Within two weeks I will make a decision on which management firm to hire for the job and when to get started."

Demolition Begins At Kimberly's Site

City Council President-Senator Arthur H. Tobin and Ward 5 Councilor Warren Powers announce they have been informed by the MDC that demolition of fire-swept Kimberly's, 751 Quincy Shore Drive and the two adjacent concrete block buildings is underway this week.

The MDC awarded the demolition contract to James G. Grant Company of Readville, who was the lowest bidder with $3,800 for demolition and removal of debris. The contractor has been given 28 days from the commencement of the contract to complete the work.

Tobin said the demolition work is a result of continuing efforts by his office and the City Council toward the beautification of the Wollaston Beach area.

'Militia Men' To Mark Evacuation Day In Squantum

The musket carrying "militia men", wearing colonial costumes will march from the Boston Harbor Marina in Squantum to Squaw Rock. The mile-long march will begin at noon.

Following the march, the militia will carry out a series of silent drills and maneuvers. Shortly afterwards, cannons will be fired simultaneously from Squaw Rock, Dorchester Heights and South Boston. Similar demonstrations will take place at Dorchester Heights and South Boston.

The militia men will represent the hundreds of South Shore residents who joined together to help force the evacuation of the British fleet from Boston 200 years ago.

A New City Hall?

A new City Hall for Quincy?

Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia, frustrated by the lack of space that has city departments overflowing the present 133-year-old building, would like a new one.

"It's a very low priority item in view of the other problems confronting the city," he told The Quincy Sun Tuesday. "and we're certainly not proposing one right now."

"But we have been doing a little background work on it so when the time comes we'll have all the data."

"If the right combination of possible sites and available funds can be put together it is a possibility."

"But, like I say, it is a very low priority item when you compare it to the North Quincy High School addition or Nut Island."

"Most building today involves federal and state funds and a new City Hall would involve only local money."

The Mayor said he discovered the problem soon after he took office and looked around for his departments.

"City Hall, as big as it is, is an obsolete building because of space limitations," he said.

"When you compare it to halls in other smaller towns it makes you wonder why such a situation still exists."

"I'd like to have all the departments close together."

Several city departments have been moved out of City

Hall, many of them going to the Health Center.

"Most of those here now have a tremendous amount of public contact, like the Mayor's office, the City Council chamber, the Treasurer, the City Clerk," said LaRaia.

"The departments that have little or no contact with the public, like the auditor's office and purchasing, can be located elsewhere."

"But government can be more effective if the departments are all under one roof and readily available."

The present City Hall, then called the Town Hall, was completed Nov. 1, 1844, at a cost of $19,115.93 — with no matching federal or state funds.

State Street South Plans Club And Functions Center

By TOM BRADY

SSB Realty Co. has asked the City Licensing Board for a license to operate a club and function center for South Shore area businessmen at their State St. South office complex in North Quincy.

The club, State Street Vice-President Andrew L. Carnegie, told the board, Tuesday would be based on a similar club operated by the bank in its downtown Boston building. It would include a restaurant serving alcoholic beverages, and function and luncheon facilities for businessmen.

The Licensing Board postponed a decision on the license until March 23 to await a routine police check of the management of the club and comment from Mayor Joseph LaRaia who requested a two week delay so his office can collect information on the proposed club.

The board approved a permit for the Topo Gigio Coffee Shop Restaurant to expand its services by offering wine and beer to be served only with meals provided that the restaurant maintain its present closing time of 6:30 p.m.

Fire Chief Edward F. Barry and Building Commissioner Allan MacDonald voted against this license saying too many liquor establishments already exist in the area.

The North Quincy Council Knights of Columbus was granted a permit to conduct a Flea Market April 10.

St. Boniface Parish was granted a one day wine and malt license for March 19 for a St. Patrick's Dance to be held in the parish hall.

The board granted a license to Joseph L. Piccarini to operate a small used car lot at 24

Raymond St. next to Morley's Auto Body, but limited to number of cars to be on sale to five.

The board also expressed its continuing concern about the possibility of gangs of young people gathering around sites of pinball machines in the city by postponing a request from Mitchell's Min Market, Macy St., Houghs Neck, for a permit to operate such a machine in the market.

St. Patrick's Day Fare

by Martha Logan

Thin slices of corned beef for oven roasting served with caraway mustard bread is the St. Patrick's Day way to share your table with friends. Whether combined with cheese for a sandwich meal or with a cooked vegetable for a traditional main course, your family and friends will be pleased with the flavor combination.

You'll be pleased too because the preparation is so easy. Oven roasting means the corned beef is cooked the dry heat way. Or, for a milder flavor the corned beef may be simmered in water.

Corned Beef for Oven Roasting with Caraway Mustard Bread

Premium Corned Beef for Oven Roasting	1 teaspoon prepared or dry mustard
3 cups sifted flour	2 tablespoons chopped onion
1/4 cup sugar	3 eggs, beaten slightly
2 tablespoons baking powder	1 3/4 cups milk
1 1/4 teaspoons salt	1/2 stick (1/4 cup) margarine, melted
2 to 3 teaspoons caraway seed

Place corned beef roast, fat side up, on rack in shallow open pan. Roast in 325°F. oven about 2 1/4 to 2 3/4 hours or until fork tender. Let stand 15 minutes then carve across the grain into thin slices. Serve with caraway mustard bread, best when baked the day before. To make bread, sift together flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Blend together caraway seed, prepared mustard, onion, eggs, milk and margarine. (If using dry mustard, sift with flour.) Add to flour mixture stirring only until all is moistened. Pour into well-greased 9 inch loaf pan. Bake in 375°F. oven 55 to 60 minutes or until nicely browned and pick inserted near center comes out clean. Cool 15 minutes in pan. Remove and cool completely. Wrap tightly and store overnight for easiest slicing.

HICCUPS

No one really knows what triggers hiccups. No one really knows what stops it, either, except in an infant, where it's often caused by swallowed air. Burping the baby will usually put an end to it. In an older child or adult, you might try one of the time-honored folk remedies. Sometimes they "work", and sometimes they don't. They include holding the breath for a few seconds, drinking a glass of water without stopping (or, according to some, while holding a pencil between your teeth), swallowing a mouthful of crushed ice, gargling, breathing into a paper bag for a few minutes, sucking half a lemon covered with sugar, or, having someone startle the victim. By and large, hiccups appear to vanish by themselves if the victim's attention is refocused on something else.

Very rarely, hiccups can be associated with a truly serious condition that requires medical attention. If there is definite pain or discomfort in the abdomen, or if even ordinary hiccups with no other symptoms persists for more than a couple of hours, the victim should be seen by a physician.

What College Women Want To Wear

Wollaston Fashion Student, Classmates Take On Seventh Ave.

(Special to The Quincy Sun)

Denise McDevitt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene McDevitt, 16 Elmwood Park, Wollaston, is one of 22 Stephens College, Columbia, MO., students whose original fashion designs will be presented in a show in New York City March 15.

"Stephens Young Designers '76" are challenging Seventh Avenue with a show of 'Back-to-Campus' fashion at Cecil's, a private club. Cosponsored by Stephens and Saks Fifth Avenue, the show will be given for area alumnae, prospective students, professional designers, parents, media representatives and other guests.

What makes a group of students from the Midwest presumptuous enough to think that they can show Seventh Avenue, fashion capital of the nation, something about fashion? The young women say, "We know how college women want to dress and what they need to fit their active lifestyles. In the past, fashion centers in the U.S. and abroad have dictated to us what was fashionable and appropriate. We think it's time to respond with our own ideas."

And when it comes to knowing design, Stephens College Fashion Department has a national reputation for its savvy.

The show with six Stephens models will feature a variety of garments including evening wear, sportswear, swimwear and other fashions basic to a coed's wardrobe. Wrap capes, skirts and blouses will highlight the line. New York designers Leamond Dean, Shell Walker, Chippy Irvin, Frank Rizzo, Chuck Howard and Ann Webster came to campus to critique the student designs and decide which designs would be made up for the show.

Chairwoman of the event is alumna Joyce McClure, director of publicity and account supervisor, Hertz Bragen Advertising, New York. A group of 15 New York area alumnae have had major responsibilities in making arrangements for the show.

Students in Stephens Bachelor of Fine Arts program gain practical experience in fashion design and illustration through summer internships with top designers and manufacturers across the nation. Biannual tours of European couture houses, textile and lace factories, as well as annual tours of New York fashion houses give students an inside look at the fashion world.

Stephens fashion graduates design under such labels as White Stag, Nelly Don and Howard Wolf. Other designers, Jeannene Booher, for example, design under their own labels. Many fashion graduates are employed as fashion coordinators, stylists, illustrators and retailers.

At Stephens, women develop the skills of communicating, analyzing, choosing alternatives and problem solving. The college pays careful attention to the balance of liberal arts and career studies. The 1,800 students from 50 states and 17 other countries come to Stephens to study in 21 academic departments. B.A., B.F.A. and A.A. degrees are awarded in time options of two to four years; an optional three-year B.A. degree is available for students with definite graduate study or career goals.

'Antonia' First Subject

Commission On Women's Status Workshop Series Starts Thursday

A series of workshops on issues relevant to women in today's society is being sponsored by the Quincy Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women and the Quincy Public Library, beginning tonight [Thursday] at 8 p.m. at the Adams Shore branch library.

The workshops, open to the public at no cost, will run on consecutive Thursdays for five weeks.

The sessions will feature speakers who will help explore and discuss different aspects of women and careers, women and alcoholism, women's legal rights, and assertiveness training for women.

The film "Antonia" will be the feature of tonight's opening workshop on March 11. This award winning film highlights the career and achievements of Antonia Brico, a symphony conductor, who only now, in her 80's, is receiving recognition as a woman and an artist in a field dominated by men. This is one of the first free showings in the Boston area and will serve as an appropriate introduction into the purpose and quality of the Workshop for Women series. The spirit of Antonia embodies the spirit of the series - the spirit of women to succeed.

Alcoholism makes no class distinctions, nor is it unique to either sex. The second workshop March 18 will explore the particular implications of alcoholism in the lives of women. Discussion will be led by a group of women who worked with alcoholics or who have had problems themselves.

Women and Assertiveness is the topic of the third workshop March 25. Women have traditionally assumed a passive role in relationships with the world.

Legal Rights for Women will be presented April 1. Topics to be covered include Massachusetts laws concerning credit, retaining one's name, property rights, divorce, inheritance taxes, job discrimination - all of the practical and legal aspects of everyday life. Speaker will be Danielle de Benedictus, former Assistant Attorney General on Civil Rights now with the Department of Utilities.

The final workshop of this series, Employment and Career Guidance, will be held April 8. This session is designed to introduce women to the facets of analyzing career possibilities and strategies for achieving these. Jane Ford, commission member and English teacher will be the speaker.

All workshops will be held at the Adams Shore Branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 516 Sea St., starting at 8 p.m. For more information call the Library, 471-2400.

Astro Birth Control

Q. I recently read a book containing a particularly fascinating chapter called "Astrological Birth Control". The following quote aroused my curiosity. "Women who are born during the opposition of the Sun and Moon [at full Moon] must take particular care not to conceive when this pattern recurs. They run the risk of having unhealthy, deformed babies".

I was born at 9:20 a.m. on September 27, 1946 in Terre Haute, Indiana. I have a son, a lively, healthy two year old and would like to conceive again this year. I am curious to know how my chances stack up astrologically? I have only a cursory knowledge of astrology but have long felt that we are each one with the universe and therefore must be influenced by it.

B.P.

A. There is considerable question as to whether that "full Moon" theory regarding an unhealthy offspring is proven or valid. However, Dr. Eugene Jonas, psychiatrist and director of the Psychiatric Dept of the State Clinic in Czechoslovakia compiled considerable numbers of case histories that he claims is statistical proof that the ability of a mature woman to conceive tends to occur each month when the Sun - Moon angular relationship is similar to that which prevailed at birth.

This too has been and is being tested and investigated in various institutions in several countries. Conclusive proof of Dr. Jonas' Sun - Moon conception theory has not as yet been satisfactorily confirmed. Until his theory is confirmed I would not be guided solely by it.

Your horoscope chart shows you were NOT born during a Full Moon that is, when the Sun and Moon were in opposition [180 degrees apart]. Your birth Moon was twenty six degrees past the position of your birth Sun. This occurs again during one day of every month. According to Dr. Jonas during this period you would be most likely to conceive should you implement your desire to do so, regardless of the time of your menstrual cycle.

For questions to be answered through this column, mail the year, month, day of the month, city of birth, time of day if known and question to Ask Oscar, Box 114, Canton, Mass. 02021. Please sign your name which will not be published. Selected questions can only be answered in this column.

Quincy Fair Share To Host Equalize Electric Rates Meeting

Quincy Fair Share will host a public meeting on a bill to equalize electric rates tonight [Thursday] at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium of the Woodward School for Girls, 1102 Hancock St.

Purpose of the meeting is to hear how the Quincy legislative delegation stands on the measure.

The legislation introduced by Mass. Fair Share in the form of an initiative petition signed by 80,000 registered voters, including 12,000 Quincy voters, would have all users of electricity pay at the same rate per kilowatt hour.

Currently large users pay the lowest rate, with residential customers in the middle and small business paying the highest rate. Because the proposal comes in the form of an initiative petition it must be voted on by both houses by May 5. Even if it fails in the legislature, it will appear on the November ballot as a referendum.

EDITORIAL

[The following article appeared in The Quincy Sun, July 29, 1971. William Morrill, commander of the Houghs Neck Legion Post, Willard J. Timece, adjutant, and the Executive Committee, think it is still timely for 1976 and have requested that it be reprinted. We are happy to do so as this week's editorial.]

I Am Sick

There are those who claim ours is a "sick" society—that our country is sick, that we are sick. Well, maybe they're right. I submit that I'm sick... and maybe you are, too.

I am sick of having policemen ridiculed and called "pigs" while cop killers are hailed as some kind of folk hero.

I am sick of being told that religion is the opiate of the people, but marijuana should be legalized.

I am sick of commentators and columnists canonizing anarchists, revolutionaries and criminal rapists, but condemning law enforcement when such criminals are brought to justice.

I am sick of being told that pornography is the right of the free press, but freedom of the press does not include being able to read the Bible on school grounds.

I am sick of paying more and more taxes to build schools while I see some faculty members encouraging students either to tear them down or burn them.

I am sick of Supreme Court decisions which turn criminals loose on society - while other decisions try to take away my means of protecting my home and family.

I am sick of pot-smoking entertainers deluging me with their condemnation of my moral standards on late-night television.

I am sick of being told that policemen are mad dogs who should not have guns - but that criminals who use guns to rob, maim and murder should be understood and helped back to society.

I am sick of being told it is wrong to use napalm to end a war overseas - but if it's a Molotov cocktail or a bomb at home, I must understand the provocations.

I am sick of not being able to take my family to a movie unless I want to have them exposed to nudity, homosexuality and the glorification of narcotics.

I am sick of riots, marches, protests, demonstrations, confrontations and the other mob temper tantrums of people intellectually incapable of working within the system.

I am sick of hearing the same slick slogans, the cries of people who must chant the same thing like zombies' because they haven't the capacity for verbalizing thought.

I am sick of those who say I owe them this or that because of the sins of my forefathers - when I have looked down both ends of a gun barrel to defend their rights, their liberties and their families.

I am sick of permissiveness.

I am sick of the dirty, the foul-mouthed, the unwashed.

I am sick of the decline of personal honesty, personal integrity and human sincerity.

Most of all, though, I am sick of being told I'm sick. I'm sick of being told my country is sick - when we have the greatest nation that man has ever brought forth on the face of the earth. Fully 50 per cent of the people on earth would willingly trade places with the most deprived, the most underprivileged among us.

Yes, I may be sick; but if I am only sick, I can get well. I can also help my society get well - and help my country get well.

Take note, all of you... you will not find me throwing a rock or a bomb; you will not find me under a placard; you will not see me take to the streets; you will not find me ranting to wild-eyed mobs.

But you will find me at work, paying taxes, serving in the community where I live.

You will also find me expressing my anger and indignation to elected officials.

You will find me speaking out in support of those officials, institutions and personalities who contribute to the elevation of society and not its destruction. You will find me contributing my time, money and personal influence to helping churches, hospitals, charities and other establishments which have shown the true spirit of this country's determination to ease pain, suffering, eliminate hunger and generate brotherhood.

But, most of all, you'll find me at the polling place. There - if you listen - you can hear the thunder of the common man. There, all of us can cast our vote - for an America where people can walk the streets without fear.

NEW AT LIBRARY

By JANET HUSBAND
Acquisition Librarian

Following are some of this month's new books at The Thomas Crane Public Library.

IN BETTER THAN EVER by Dr. Joyce Brothers, the famous psychiatrist tells how she caught a look at herself on TV and realized - that she had become "fat and forty". Her self-renewal program will be an inspiration to many women.

THE DEVIL AND MARY ANN by Catherine Cookson is the third novel in the Mary Ann series. It is a charming story that the young of all ages will enjoy.

MAKING VEGETABLES GROW by Thalassa Cruso would be just the thing to read while planning next year's garden. Those who watch Ms. Cruso on TV know how helpful she can be.

DORIS DAY: HER OWN STORY was written by the actress with the help of author A. E. Hotchner. It tells what the star behind that "girl next door" image is really like. It is sure to be popular.

THE LYNMARA LEGACY by Catherine Gaskin will please this author's many fans. It is another of those leisurely novels—spanning 40 years in the lives of a woman and her daughter—that Miss Gaskin does so well.

THE NINTH MAN by John Lee is an exciting novel about a WWII plot to kill President Roosevelt. It's guaranteed to keep you reading night up to the suspenseful end.

THE KITCHEN SINK PAPERS by Mike McGrady is sub-titled MY LIFE AS A HOUSEHUSBAND. It is a humorous account of a journalist who swapped roles with his wife.

DIET FOR LIVING by Dr. Jean Mayer is a no-nonsense guide to nutrition culled from the author's very popular syndicated column.

THE AUCTIONEER by Joan Samson is an almost-night-be-true horror story set in a small New England village. The action begins when Perly Dunsmore, Auctioneer, arrives in town and starts to wheedle the natives out of their prized possessions.

THE SWISS ACCOUNT by Leslie Waller is a suspenseful novel that centers on Matt Burris, an officer in a giant American banking corporation and a beautiful but troubled young heiress.

State Tax Agents In IRS Office Until Friday

Friday, March 12 is the final day that Massachusetts tax agents will be stationed in IRS offices in the state to assist taxpayers.

IRS District Director H. B. Mosher said the state tax agents have to return to their own offices according to previous arrangements with State Tax Commissioner Owen Clarke.

Mosher said that IRS will continue to stock Massachusetts tax return forms in IRS offices and the State will do the same with Federal tax return forms.

State tax agents currently are at the Quincy IRS offices, at 1200 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Mayor's Office
'Combat Zone'

By HENRY BOSWORTH

The Quincy Sons of Italy tribute to Mayor Joseph LaRaia Friday [March 5] coincidentally fell on his second month anniversary as the city's chief executive.

LaRaia so noted that fact and mused to the full house:

"I've been in office exactly two months. When I used to think of the Combat Zone, I thought of Boston. Now when I think of the Combat Zone, I think of the mayor's office in Quincy."

LaRaia has had his share of Exceeding headache days since raising his right hand to become mayor: criticism over appointments and head chopping, feuding with former Mayor Walter Hannon, etc.

So, in a way, his office has been a Combat Zone.

Apparently trying to accentuate the positive and maybe eliminate the negative of the past few weeks, His Honor also observed:

"There has to be not only a great deal of cooperation but spirit, too."

And, he vowed: "I will uphold the dignity of the office of mayor."

Quincy Lodge 1295 presented him with a color TV set and he quipped: "What makes you think I have time to watch TV?"

★★★

AMONG THOSE AT the head table was a possible future challenger: Senator-City Council President Arthur Tobin.

Tobin paid tribute to "your mayor and my mayor" and to the city of Quincy which he referred to as a "great melting pot" of nationalities, including Italian, who have made outstanding contributions to Quincy.

★★★

IT WAS a proud night for Quincy Lodge 1295 who were honoring only the second man of Italian descent to be elected mayor since Quincy became a city in 1888. The other, of course, was the late Amelio Della Chiesa. The latter was a member of the lodge as is LaRaia.

★★★

AND, a proud night for Louise LaRaia one of the prettiest First Ladies in the city's history.

★★★

AMONG THOSE TAKING part in the salute were Massachusetts Grand Venerable Louis Salvatore, Second Assistant Supreme Venerable Aldo Cairi, Quincy Venerable John Fantuccio, Assistant Venerable Mario Salvatore, Grand Financial Secretary, Sebastian Papagno, Rev. John McMahon, pastor St. Mary's Church.

THE FIRST LOCAL fund-raiser of the 1976 political season is set for April 30: a reception and dance for Rep. Robert Cerasoli at the State Street South, North Quincy. From 7:30 p.m. to midnight. Cerasoli, of course, is a candidate for re-election. Tickets may be obtained from Raymond Dunn, 19 Murdock Ave., or Dolores McCray, 7 Lawrence St., both Quincy Point.

Come to think of it, State Street South seems to be becoming THE place for political social functions. Former Mayor Hannon launched his campaigns from there and Mayor LaRaia held his inaugural reception there.

★★★

WELL, Mayor LaRaia and City Councillor Paul Harold can tell their grandchildren they got a vote for President. They were among the Democratic write-ins in last week's Presidential Primaries in Quincy. Among the Republican write-ins here were John Wayne and someone named Richard Nixon.

★★★

DID YOU KNOW that prior to 1917, the Quincy School Committee comprised nine instead of six members? Three were elected at-large and one from each of the six wards—same lineup as today's City Council. [Item in Quincy Method, the school department newsletter.]

★★★

AND, did you know that as much as 415 million pounds of pop corn will be popped this year. So projects the American Pop Corn Co. That breaks down to about 31 quarts for every man, woman and child in the U.S. [Well, some people like to keep track of things like that.]

★★★

DAN DiBONA, formerly of Quincy now a Rosindale monument company owner, gets a change of pace Friday and Saturday nights. Plays the banjo-guitar and sings at the Easton Motel 138, in Easton.

★★★

SMILE DEPT: Observation from the Quincy Kiwanis Club newsletter: "The man who thinks he knows it all is a pain in the neck to those of us who really do."

THUMBNAIL THOUGHTS

The thousands who voted "no preference" tells you something about the charisma of those in both presidential sweepstakes.

★

Parents of teenagers aren't that enthused about all the hullabaloo on the 100th anniversary of the telephone.

Worst Blizzard In 16 Years Strikes

By TOM HENSHAW

The worst blizzard in 16 years struck Quincy and the South Shore area, stranding hundreds of motorists in snow drifts up to four feet deep and driving the Italian freighter Etrusco hard aground on a Scituate beach.

Dr. Charles Brooks at the Blue Hills Observatory measured winds up to 79 miles an hour, low temperatures of 13 degrees and snow averaging 11.2 inches at the foot of Big Blue.

Some 200 men, women and children took refuge for the night in the Waldorf Cafeteria in Quincy Center and, for the first time since the Hurricane of 1938, high tide swept over Winthrop St., Houghs Neck.

At the height of the blizzard, a man with a gun held up the North Quincy Cooperative Bank at 440 Hancock St. and fled with $1,767. He was captured a few hours later in a South End cafe with all the money on him.

RAPID TRANSIT FORECAST

George Yarrington, executive director of the Quincy Taxpayers Association, predicted that trains operated by a South Shore Transit Authority would be running from Boston to Greenbush, Plymouth and Middleboro in two years.

A bill to create such an authority was in the State Legislature. "From an operating standpoint it would be more desirable to expand the MTA," said Yarrington, "but from a political viewpoint this would be virtually impossible so long as the trustees permit the MTA to keep rolling up huge losses of $6-8 million every year."

WARD COUNCILLORS FOR QUINCY

A bill that would give Quincy ward representation on its City Council under the new Plan A government passed the House and Senate and was on the desk of Gov. Christian A. Herter.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Clifton H. Baker [R-Quincy], would clear the way for a referendum on whether Quincy voters wanted six ward and three at-large councillors or nine elected at-large.

Conferring with the governor on the bill were Sen. Charles W. Hedges, Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa and Reps. Baker, Carter Lee and William W. Jenness.

LAUNDRY ABOLISHED

The City Council met with the Hospital Board of Managers to discuss City Manager Donald H. Blatt's plan to abolish the hospital laundry and send the dirty linen out to private contractors.

"The city of Quincy cannot afford the luxury of maintaining a laundry," said Blatt.

All members of the City Council, except Edna B. Austin, were lined up in opposition to Blatt's plan, which would result in the loss of five of the laundry's 24 jobs.

A REGIONAL ECONOMY

You Haven't Got The Message

By ERIC SWIDER

I believe in true participatory government where all the facts are considered openly and objectively before public decisions are made for one major reason; because in that environment of true participation, in my opinion, where the needs and capabilities of the business community are taken into consideration with the needs and capabilities of everyone else... business comes out okay as does everyone else.

It is when government bureaucrats stuff their own personal biases down the throat of an entire state that I get irritated, annoyed, disillusioned, and slightly rebellious.

Business activity, by its very nature, forces the business community to be sensitive to the consumer and is really the truest participatory process known to mankind. If the customer isn't satisfied with the price, product, services, attitudes of employees, etc. he chooses not to continue business with that firm and it withers and dies.

When government is not responsive to its constituency, another politician comes along and promises us responsive, participatory government, gets elected, and in too many cases, implements his biases as the will of the people. The government, rather than withering and dying, blossoms and strangles the initiative of those who are being poorly served.

A recent round of meetings with Governor Dukakis and many of his key secretaries and commissioners have left me totally bewildered.

I still perceive the Governor as being a proponent of the participatory process. But I see too many of his key people "going through the motions," saying they are allowing for participation but simply not doing it.

Director of the Office of State Planning, Frank Keefe, called 40 people together last September as an advisory council on State Growth Policy and presented them with a draft paper that his staff had prepared. He charged them with a six month task of producing a consensus document. At the group's second meeting, the business representatives objected to provisions allowing for major shopping center development within old downtown areas, only. It lacked reality, they claimed.

A third meeting has never been called, the six months are up, and so I suspect the state official growth policy document is the original draft of the staff. Is that the participatory process at work?

In August of 1975, a meeting of Secretaries Salvucci, Smith and their appropriate commissioners and South Shore officials, businesspeople and Chamber representatives agreed that it was timely to do the Environmental Impact Study of the Fore River Bridge, for which the money had been appropriated. The study should proceed immediately.

This February Senator McKinnon, Walter

Hannon and I met with the Governor to determine if he could break the invisible bottleneck that had apparently placed the Fore River Bridge EIS on the back burner. The Governor, visibly annoyed that the State had not lived up to its eight-month old promise, told his Chief Secretary, David Liederman, to tell Mr. Secretary Salvucci to get the study done immediately. (Folks, I was there and heard it - it was an unequivocal statement - Do it now.)

Four weeks later, after attempting to track progress on this thing almost every day, Walter Hannon received a call from some bureaucrat asking us if we really think General Dynamics still needs the Bridge. He told us that his immediate superior is trying to make up his mind about whether or not to "do it." The $293,000 spent on the Economic Impact Study, by the way, says that General Dynamics needs the bridge. There was no room for interpretation of the Governor's wishes on this matter - for it was a decision to continue the process. Whose bias is in the way?

The new Department of Commerce and Development local newspaper advertising campaign saying that, "We're starting to run this state like a business," is being run against the advice of the DCD Advisory Committee of which I am a member. We told Commissioner John Marino a month ago that the campaign would insult businesspeople, and gave him lots of good reasons why. The reaction of businesspeople to the campaign, to date, has been head shaking and utter disbelief.

Most developers, if they thought the process would be truly participatory, I believe would support the creation of a State Growth Policy. Why not? It's better to know what is and is not acceptable than to spend most of your life getting your teeth kicked in in court.

The South Shore would accept a "yes or no" decision on the Fore River Bridge if the process was carried out and if it were a thoughtful decision. We have obviously drawn our conclusions based on the facts and know what the decision has to be. The studies are a process we will live with, but breaking promises and waltzing us around the State offices to slow down the process is wrong.

And most businesspeople could be communicated with about their future "job providing role" here in a way that would give them positive encouragement. But reading front page headline that talks about "Logan Curbwits" and the Governor's willingness to sign a Lifeline Rates bill in the same newspaper that carries an ad aimed at them, that says "This State is being run like a business" is most inconsistent.

That same ad, by the way, ends with a cute slogan - "We got the message." As much as I want to believe that Massachusetts government got the message, I can't.

(Eric Swider is Executive Vice President of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.)

THE READER SPEAKS OUT

Takes Issue With Swider Column

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Eric Swider's Jan. 22, 1976 column in The Sun suggests that he believes two "wrongs" add up to a "right". He quotes with approbation a salary study by the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation which embodies the statistical error it purports to rectify.

The Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation alleges that salary surveys conducted by the Commonwealth are not entirely accurate because they rely too heavily upon comparable private jobs in the Boston area, even though a substantial number of state employees work in other parts of the state. To "rectify" this shortcoming the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation relies upon similar data, all of which comes from OUTSIDE the Boston area.

More importantly however, Mr. Swider's selective use of statistics from the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation study is more indicative of an attempt to convince rather than enlighten. The study, for example discloses that since 1966 inflation has far outstripped the rate of increase for state employee salaries.

Moreover virtually everyone who has looked into this matter agrees that in 1966 state employee salaries were substantially below those of the private sector or of other public employees.

Like many persons who work for a living state employees have lost considerable ground, economically, in the last several years, without any immediate prospect of relief.

Dorothy (Ma) Donovan CP Memorial Fund Established

By POLLY DREDGE

A Dorothy [Ma] Donovan Cerebral Palsy Memorial Fund has been established at the North Quincy branch of the Quincy Savings Bank by three women in the South Shore Area of Cerebral Palsy, Inc., Quincy.

Mrs. Deena Wier of Wollaston, an active volunteer and trustee in the local CP Chapter; Mrs. Martha S. Firth of Milton, teacher of handicapped students at Quincy High School; and Mrs. Beatrice McHale of Hull, teacher of handicapped students at Lincoln-Hancock Community School, are directing the fund-raising. They hope the accumulated bank interest from the contributions will provide an annual income for the chapter.

Dorothy Donovan, known as [Ma] to the cerebral palsied children she worked with, was a Wollaston resident for 40 years.

She was among the founders of the South Shore Chapter of Cerebral Palsy and was appointed its first coordinator in 1952.

During her more than nine years of service in this office, she spearheaded an effort to establish an instructional program in the public school system for cerebral palsied children.

In 1956, the school committee allotted four vacant classrooms to the CP Chapter in the Furnace Brook School. This was the first such program for palsied children in public schools in Massachusetts.

Dorothy Donovan died early last January.

Contributions to the Dorothy [Ma] Donovan Cerebral Palsy Memorial fund may be sent to the Quincy Savings Bank, attention Donald Gohl, 571 Hancock St., North Quincy.

Richard Koch Honored As 'Honorary Farmer'

The Norfolk County Agricultural High School's Norfolk Chapter Future Farmers of America held their 28th annual banquet recently at the Norfolk County Agricultural High School, Walpole with over 400 members, parents and teachers attending.

The dinner was prepared and served by the staff and student members of the Norfolk County Chapter of the organization.

Richard J. Koch of North Quincy, executive secretary of the Quincy Park-Recreations Board and a member of the Board of Trustees of the High School and Extension Service, was awarded a plaque and lapel pin by President John J. Burnette Jr. on behalf of the officers and members of the chapter.

The plaque and pin designated Koch as "Honorary Farmer" in the organization. His wife was presented a corsage.

It was the first time in the 28 years of annual dinners, and 60 years of school history that a trustee was so honored.

Burnett said Koch was being recognized by the organization for his efforts as a trustee of the school, and his dedication to youth and community service through the Koch Club of Quincy.

Among the guests attending were County Commissioners James J. Collins and George B. McDonald, both trustees of the school.

Leo Papile Receives MDC Police Commendation For Murder Case Arrest

Detective Leo Q. Papile, of North Quincy, received a Certificate of Commendation from MDC Commissioner John F. Snedeker, at recent ceremonies for outstanding investigation work in a murder case.

Papile, and MDC Police Detective Sgt. Thomas White of Milton, and Cambridge Police Detective Sgt. Dominic Scalse received the award for "Outstanding performance of duty in the persistent investigation leading to the arrest and conviction of a person responsible for the murder of a Cambridge man whose body was found in the Charles River."

Papile, a lifelong resident of Quincy, has served with the MDC police for 25 years. He is a Marine Corps veteran of World War II.

The award is the latest of many commendations Papile has received including lifesaving efforts, and serious crime investigations.

Papile is the husband of the late Loretta C. [Susan] Papile and the father of Leo Michael, a

37 Boy Scouts Need Scout Master

Thirty-seven enthusiastic boy scouts in Squantum and North Quincy need a scoutmaster. The boys range in age from 11 to 16.

In the troop are seven eagle scouts, one Life scout and six star scouts. The remainder of the boys are first or second class tenderfoot scouts. Seven scouts also belong to the Order of the Arrow, King Philip Lodge, Boston Council.

The troop is sponsored by the First Church of Squantum, and the boys meet at the church every Wednesday or Thursday.

Most of the scouts with a rank of first class tenderfoot or higher, have completed their junior leadership training.

Because one of a scoutmaster's roles is to encourage development of leadership qualities in his scouts, he allows the older scouts to act as leaders.

Any man volunteering as scoutmaster for this troop would be supported and assisted by an active 12-member troop committee.

For further information, contact Mrs. Marjorie Petrosius, troop committee member, at 328-8799, or Donald Pound, assistant scoutmaster, 328-0815.

'Non-Candidate' Humphrey Gets 2% Of Write-Ins HereFord (61%) Jackson (24%) Wallace (21%) Udall (12%)

By TOM HENSHAW

Sen. Henry M. [Scoop] Jackson of Washington got the most votes [24 per cent] in Quincy.

Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama got enough [21 per cent] to indicate that his is a force to be reckoned with. And Congressman Morris Udall got 12 per cent.

But what do you say about a man who has not announced his candidacy and has not lifted a bumper sticker to campaign yet got 2 per cent of the Quincy vote by write-ins in last week's Massachusetts Democratic primary.

That's what happened to Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, the Democratic party's presidential candidate in 1968, who has said he is not running in '76 but would accept the nomination if everyone else fails.

Humphrey's showing in Quincy is disclosed for the first time this week as The Quincy Sun publishes a complete listing of the Quincy primary vote, right down to the Ward 6 basketball enthusiast who cast a ballot for Red Auerbach.

Other vote-getters, both likely and unlikely, included Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia, City Councillor Paul D. Harold, consumer advocate Ralph Nader, Eunice Shriver, wife of real candidate Sargent Shriver, and a man named Pettipas.

Noteworthy on the Republican ballot, where President Gerald R. Ford got 61 per cent of the vote and Ronald W. Reagan got 32 per cent, was the write-in showing of Wallace, who collected 1 per cent of the ballots.

Other GOP write-ins included: Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller, Sen. Edward Brooke of Massachusetts, Commerce Secretary Elliot L. Richardson, and an Arthur Blessit.

The American Party had no names listed on its ballot, which was printed for the first time in a primary, but the write-in winner of its presidential preference race was Wallace with nine of the 18 votes cast for candidates.

Peter O'Neill of 141 Sea St., Merrymouth won the job of Democratic State Committeeman handily over two Braintree men, Kathleen O'Donnell of 1025 Hancock St., Quincy, was elected Democratic State Committeewoman.

Miss O'Donnell prevailed by 2,647 votes over Barbara M.

To Quincy with Love -- Senator Henry Jackson supporters in Quincy, Wash., calling themselves Scoop's Troops are shown enroute to the Quincy Post Office to mail handwritten letters to the residents of Quincy, Mass., prior to last week's Presidential Primaries. Whether the letters had anything to do with it or not, Jackson carried our Quincy.

Keefe of Braintree, whose total was swelled by a tremendous margin of votes from her home town and from Holbrook, the other community in the district.

Santa C. Fareri of 7 Welgate Circle, Wollaston, came in third.

Andrew H. Card Jr. of Holbrook beat out Selden Connolly of Braintree in the race for Republican State Committeeman and Kathryn D. Roberts of 37 Estabrook Rd., Wollaston, was unopposed for State Committeewoman.

There were no candidates for State Committee on the American Party ballot but George Eaton got four write-in votes for Committeeman and Eileen Eaton a like number for Committeewoman.

There was little excitement in the races for Ward Committee—save for Ward 5 where a non-resident Democrat named Mickey Mouse got one vote.

Democrats and Republicans were allowed to vote for 35 in each ward race and none of the slates exceeded that number. American Party members could vote for 10 but none were listed on the ballot.

Tally Sheets At Fault In Election?

[Cont'd from Page 1]
instead of LaRaia.
Further questioning by Judge Kramer brought out the information that Hannon's name was above that of LaRaia on the far left of the tally sheet, separated by a thin red line.

When the eye of Mrs. Marshall, dulled by more than 12 hours on duty at the polling place, moved across the page to the 50-vote total at the extreme right, the distinction between the Hannon line and the LaRaia line apparently was easily lost. "It would have been better to have a black line between them," suggested Mrs. Marshall, "or we should put the figure zero after the candidate who had no votes instead of leaving the line blank."

Both Mrs. Marshall and Pettiti testified to the great amount of confusion that prevailed in the Ward 3 Precinct 4 polling place on election night. They also spoke of their own inexperience.

"Both of us were very nervous because we were novices," said Mrs. Marshall.

Pettiti testified that he was recruited by a phone call to the bar at the Morrisette Legion Post to replace the regular warden who was ill. He said he had never even worked on an election before.

He said "confused" would be an accurate description of him that night.

Another witness, Timothy Cardwell of 76 Presidents Lane, Quincy, testified that he visited the Ward 3 Precinct 4 polling place as an observer for LaRaia and was surprised to find a city employee passing out pens to workers.

He identified the city employee as Putnam Borden, director of the Council on Aging, since ousted by LaRaia.

"It struck me as a conflict of interest to have a person employed by the Mayor's office passing out pens and handing ballots," said Cardwell. He added that he saw no act of wrong-doing on the part of Borden.

Cardwell said he also visited Ward 3 Precinct 1 on his tour as a LaRaia worker.

"I told a gentleman there how the count was running in the rest of the city, that LaRaia was winning," he said. "His attitude was, 'Well, he's not winning here.' He was happy Hannon was receiving the most votes. He smiled and chuckled."

Questioned by Judge Kramer, Cardwell said he saw no acts of wrong-doing at Ward 3 Precinct 1 either.

Nevertheless, Judge Kramer ordered a list to be compiled of the city workers who worked on the Nov. 4 election and also a list of the full-time positions held by other poll workers.

The inquest continues today [Thursday] with the first full day's session scheduled to begin at 9 a.m.

Finn Suit

Chief Finn to prepare a report on the unit for the Council so members could talk it over with the Mayor.

Said Mayor LaRaia: "I am concerned with making more police available for regular patrol duties. I don't think the City Council, under the leadership of the Council president, should make this another issue with the Mayor's office."

Quincy Bay Pollution

The legislation would require the Secretary of Environmental Affairs to create an In-House Task Force to develop some practical short range recommendations to deal with current pollution problems. Brownell said even if the current long range proposals were approved and implemented today, they would not deal with pollution problems until 1981. He said a contingency plan of action to deal with the pollution as it exists today is necessary.

Burke Asks UMTA Consider Refusing Funds For S. Quincy MBTA Station

Continuing opposition to the proposed MBTA station in South Quincy mounts.

In Washington, Congressman James A. Burke (D-Milton) asked the Urban Mass Transportation Administration to consider seriously the possibility of refusing to provide federal funds for the construction of the station.

Burke told UMTA Administrator Robert Patricelli: "In view of the opposition of Mayor Joseph LaRaia and every other elected official who represents the people of Quincy, I think you should take another look at the entire situation."

"These ladies and gentlemen are the voice of the people and they are unanimous in their opinion that three 'T' stations in Quincy are enough."

Burke said neither he nor any of the local officials are opposed to the extension of MBTA lines south from Quincy, adding that funds earmarked for the South Quincy station might better be used for improvements on the extended lines.

Burke listed the following Quincy officials as opposed to the station:

Mayor LaRaia and City/Councillors Arthur Tobin, James Sheets, John J. Lydon Jr., Paul Harold, Leo Kelly, John J. Quinn, Daniel Raymond, Warren Powers and Dennis Harrington.

The City Council, in its Feb. 2 meeting, unanimously reaffirmed its opposition to the station so that the new councillors, Raymondi and Harold, could register their official displeasure with the proposal.

Also named by Burke as opposed to the station were Sen. Tobin, and Reps. Sheets, Joseph Brett, Thomas Brownell and Robert Cerasoli, all of Quincy, and Elizabeth Metayer of Braintree, Andrew Card Jr. of Holbrook, M. Joseph Manning of Milton and Daniel Henderson of Hull.

Rep. Metayer praised Burke for his support in Washington, calling him a "prestigious and powerful congressman and we have every confidence in his influential position with UMTA."

She said the effect of the proposed station on flooding in South Quincy was to be emphasized at the Wednesday hearing in the State House along with traffic problems expected to be caused by the new influx of commuters' cars.

"Since it was proposed last year, we have been able to persuade state and town officials and key people from UMTA to follow the flood plain with us from its source," said Rep. Metayer.

"The Army Corps of Engineers and the MDC have done borings and tests and have concluded that the flooding situation is present."

"They have confirmed that it will cost $15 million to correct the problem rather than the $1 million MBTA figure."

Quincy Teams Dominate TARO Basketball Loops

The Adult Recreation Organization [TARO] provides a variety of sports for hundreds of South Shore men and women.

Quincy teams are dominating the three TARO basketball leagues and at last look the Palmer Hotshots, also a top contender in the Cranberry League, were in a three-way tie for first place in the top division, the Russell Division.

The Quincy Nets were in a two-way tie for the lead in the Sanders Division and the Palmer B team was waltzing along with a 12-0 record to lead the Cousy Division.

Among other communities represented in the leagues are Weymouth, Braintree, Milton, Brockton, Hingham and South Boston.

Broadmeadows Co-Champs

North 9th Graders Four-Time Winners

The North Quincy Junior High ninth grade basketball team for the fourth year in a row has clinched at least the co-championship of the city league. North finished tied with Broad Meadows with a 9-3 league record and a 10-3 overall mark.

It appeared last week that there would be tri-champions with Broad Meadows and Central finishing their seasons after North had finished earlier. North lost a chance to win the crown outright when it was upset by BM, 40-38, in its finale. BM then gained the co-championship by defeating Sterling in its final game but heavily favored Central had four of its five starters out with the flu and was shocked by Point, dropping it behind the co-champs with an 8-4 mark.

"This team is smaller in comparison to other teams at North Junior High," Bregoli said. "However, what they lack in size they make up for with speed, quickness and all-around hustle."

"Our scoring has been well-balanced with each starter having been high scorer in a game. Overall, this team has more depth than any team here in a long time."

Kevin Cobban [5-5] leads North's offense. He is quick and plays excellent defense. Rated by his coach as a "very intelligent player," he has a good outside shot, can drive to the basket and will always hit the open man.

Jon Badger [5-9] is an excellent outside shooter and handles the ball extremely well for a forward. He sparked an early win over Central.

Bill Harrow [6-0], the center, has developed quickly since last year and is very fast for a big man. He shows excellent inside moves and can shoot with his left hand as well as the right inside. He is also a strong rebounder.

Jim Holleran [5-10] is the brother of Mike, excellent quarterback for North Quincy High's Superbowl team last fall, and is the team's strongest rebounder off both boards. He has a fine outside shot and is a good defensive player. He is a transfer from St. Ann's School.

John McGuigan [5-10] has worked his way into the starting five through hustle and excellent defense. He has quick hands and has made numerous steals in key situations.

Dan McIntyre [5-11] has improved considerably, plays excellent defense and has developed a fine jump shot from inside 10 feet. He is a strong rebounder.

Jim Coughlin [5-8] is developing quickly. He possesses a fine shooting touch and is an excellent ball handler, usually seeing action late in close games.

Pete Sorenson [5-11] is a good rebounder and is an excellent shot from 15 feet out. He has the potential to be a fine high school forward.

Glenn Healy [5-11] is another strong forward who shoots well from the outside and also moves well inside. Bregoli feels he will grow to about 6-4 by the time he is a senior and is an excellent prospect.

Bob Ferrara [5-11] is the backup center and has done a fine job when called upon. Another with potential to be an excellent high school player.

Chris Sullivan [5-6] is another quick guard, is a fine defensive player and the team's best foul shooter.

Dave King [5-6] is another guard who possesses a fine outside shot and also has the ability to hit the open man.

Brian Condon [5-3] is an aggressive little guard with a good outside shot and, after penetrating, he can go with either hand on his inside shots.

Jim Keenan [5-2] is a fine ballhandler and an excellent outside shooting guard. Defensively, he has the ability to shut off his man with or without the ball.

Joe Waterhouse [5-4], another guard, is very quick and an outstanding defensive player.

Frank Strauss [5-8] is a weakside forward, a strong rebounder and he possesses some good moves after getting the ball underneath.

Joe Burke [6-3], the number three center, is in his first year of organized ball. He has shown great improvement and is a good shooter, especially from the foul line.

"No team can survive without a good manager and Mike Mariano does an outstanding job for us," Bregoli concluded. "He is at all the practices and games, keeps our scorebook and handles all the equipment and uniforms."

Earl Vermillion's basketball team had finished with a 14-13 mark and last week Ken Hayes' hockey squad, following a slow start, finished 10-9-3.

The icemen romped to an 11-3 win over Bunker Hill in their final game as Andy Collieran and Mark Hurley had two goals apiece and Al O'Sullivan, Bob Kasinowicz, Mike Lake, Benny Riccio, Steve Arnold, Ted Wiedemann and Phil Connolly one each.

The basketball team dropped its finale to powerful Massasoit, one of the state's top community college teams, 89-80.

QJC had assured itself of a winning record with impressive wins previous to the Massasoit game. The Jaguars had topped Quinsigamond Community College, 101-93, with Rogers scoring 36 points, Holleran 24 and Tom Perry and Carmody 10 each.

It had also defeated Worcester Junior College, 94-81, with Rogers scoring 30, Holleran 12, Carmody 15 and Bill Wentworth 11.

The hockey team had previously defeated Suffolk

University, 7-4.

Andy Collieran had the hat trick for Jaguars and Mike Lake scored two goals and added an assist. Bob Kasinowicz had a goal and two assists, Bob Boyle and goal and an assist and Al O'Sullivan and Phil Smith two assists apiece.

In their previous game the Jaguars had defeated North Shore Community College, 4-1, on goals by Ted Wiedemann, Kasinowicz, Mark Hurley and Lake.

Earlier QJC had topped Grahm Junior College, 5-3, as Wiedemann, former Quincy High standout who had only recently joined the squad, turned in the hat trick, his first goals for the Jaguars. Steve Arnold and Smith had the other goals.

President Ford Just Can't Miss Angie

PRESIDENT FORD says he just can't miss ANGIE DICKINSON. That's why he flatly refused to schedule a recent press conference during "Police Woman"... And while on Presidential matters, White House Press Secretary RON NESSEN will host NBC's "Saturday Night" April 17. "Saturday Night" has often taken swipes at President Ford's falling and tripping... ANN-MARGARET will star as Aimee Semple McPherson in NBC's "Sister America"... "The Waltons" presented their 100th episode last week. Since the series' premiere in September of 1972, the stars and crew have racked up five Golden Globe Awards and 11 Emmys, including those for stars RICHARD THOMAS, MICHAEL LEARNED and ELLEN CORBY... STEVE ALLEN will be hosting "The Good Old Days of Radio" on Ch. 2 later this month. Allen will take a nostalgic look at all the old shows from "Inner Sanctum" to "Fibber McGee and Molly"... In the electoral spirit, NBC is showing ROBERT REDFORD's "The Candidate" next week... As well, JOHN CHANCELLOR and DAVID BRINKLEY will co-anchor NBC News' coverage of the 1976 Democratic and Republican national conventions as they did in 1972... HENRY WINKLER, "The Fonz" himself, has been selected as a special guest presenter for an Australian television awards show... KATHERINE ROSS has been signed to star in "Mrs. Sundance" for ABC... ABC is also presenting "The Story of David," the youth who slew Goliath, next month. To be shown in two parts, "David" will WGBH-TV has completed production of "Dying," a documentary studying three persons during the last months and days of their lives. The 90-minute special will air nationally on April 29 and is expected to draw strong reactions... BOBBY VAN is getting a new game show to host, "The Fun Factory," to be seen at noon, will begin next month on NBC... BURL IVES will narrate "The First Easter Rabbit" next month in the same style as that of "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer"... DINAH SHORE will play hostess this summer on a CBS series introducing new talent. She recently won the Award of the Year from the National Association of Television Program Executives. Last year's winner was BARBARA WALTERS, who will be hosting "The Women of the Year Awards" April 8... Have you noticed how many movies shown on television lately have had their titles changed for airing? "Kakatoa, East of Java" became "Volcano"... "The Neptune Factor" became "The Neptune Disaster," and "Emperor of the North Pole" dropped "Pole" and became "Emperor of the North" thus changing its meaning. The networks are trying to get more viewers to watch movies that weren't much to watch in the beginning.

ENC Winds Up Top Season

The Eastern Nazarene College basketball team finished one of its best seasons last Saturday when it lost to Messiah College of Harrisburg, Pa., 84-70, in the finals of the 20th annual Kings College Tournament at Briarcliffe Manor, N.Y.

ENC finished with an overall record of 21-8 to give Coach Jim Smith a six-year record of 131 wins and 56 losses.

Although runnerup in the tourney it had won four of the last five years, ENC won the all-sports trophy for the fifth time in the last six years. The Crusaders took first in chess and women's volleyball in addition to the basketball team's second place. Competition was held also in cheerleading, table tennis, bowling and barbershop quartet.

"I feel this is the finest small college tournament in the country," Smith said. "We may have made one of the bigger tournaments with our record, but I preferred to stay with the King's Tournament. We lack height and have only one senior, so I think we can look forward to some of the bigger tournaments in the future."

ENC made the finals of the Kings event with a 103-83 win over Nyack College Friday in which sophomore Mike Barefoot, who had a brilliant season, scored 39 points.

Palmer Hotshots Takes Tourney Lead

The Palmer Hotshots of Quincy have taken the lead in the Cranberry Basketball League playoffs, which continue this weekend.

The Hotshots have a 2-0 record in the double elimination playoffs, with the O'Brien Club of Quincy and the New Bedford Continentals 1-1. Brockton Ringside was eliminated last Sunday.

Saturday the O'Briens will play the Continentals in New Bedford with the loser being eliminated and the winner facing the Hotshots Sunday at 7 p.m. at North Quincy High. A win will give the Hotshots the playoff title, while a loss will necessitate still another game to decide the issue.

The Hotshots just staved off a sensational rally by the O'Briens to win, 114-108, last Saturday. Trailing by 19 points after three periods, the O'Brien Club, playing with only six men, put on a full-court press and moved to within two points.

The sensational Ken Boyd scored 38 points and had 18 rebounds for the Hotshots, Ron Bradley had 31 points and 14 assists, Tom Garwood 12 points and Kerry Walker 10. Jim O'Brien had 32 points and Alan Dalton 27 for O'Brien.

Sunday night the Hotshots topped New Bedford, which had topped Brockton Saturday, 114-97, as Boyd scored 47 points and had 23 rebounds, Jim Garvin had 18 points, 24 rebounds and 10 assists and Bradley had 16 points and 13 assists.

The O'Brien Club eliminated Ringside, 100-83, with Rico Cabral and Dalton scoring 20 points each, Gary Bowen and O'Brien 14 apiece and Steve Colella 11.

Earlier the Hotshots had defeated the Brockton Huskies, 99-87, in a benefit game for underprivileged children at Raynham. More than 400 youngsters watched the game in which Boyd put on an amazing performance with 38 points and 33 rebounds.

Coach Roger Hohman gives much of the credit for the Hotshots' success to his outstanding guard, Gene DeLoatch, for his defensive performances, and also praised former Quincy High player Ducky Connors for his work on defense.

Quincy Wrestling Team Car Wash Saturday

The Quincy High wrestling team, which compiled a 12-9 record this winter in only its second year of competition, will keep busy during the spring and summer months.

Coach Carmen Mariano's wrestlers will sponsor a car wash Saturday at Quincy Junior College to raise money for the team. They will wash your car for a dollar and remove snow tires for another dollar.

The Quincy grapplers will spend their off-season at the Quincy YMCA. The program offered there by Joe Streadwick, Norm Collier and Vaughn Lovejoy is growing fast and gives schoolboys an opportunity to compete in a number of tournaments.

Mariano announced that his Presidents will wrestle in six AAU tournaments between now and the end of May and during the summer will visit high schools throughout the state, participating in a full schedule of summer tournaments sponsored by the Mass. Secondary Schools Principals Association.

Mariano had only four seniors this year and expects an even more successful season next winter. Among those coming back will be Gary Oriola [14-6-1 this year], Lou Venturini [11-5-2], Dan Thibault, [5-2-1], Brian Kelley [5-5], Lenny Picot [3-3], Wayne Gardner [7-3], Eddie Towers [8-9-1], Danny Madden [7-6], Tom Bamberry and Joe Zimmerman.
